Sir Louis Jette echoed the sentiments expressed by Mr. Root on behalf of Canada, and Senator Lodge wittily proposed the health of the counsel engaged on both sides of the case, declaring that the rapidity of the proceedings was a lesson to all nations who avoided such a pacific method of settlement on the ground of prolonged procedure.

Messrs. Dickinson and Robinson responded on behalf of America and Canada, respectively, and Ambassador Choate proposed the health of Lord Mayor and Lady Samuel.

ROXBURGHE'S ESTATE.

Facts About Floors Castle, Miss Goelet's Future Home.

Miss May Goelet, the fiancee of the Duke of Roxburghe, will be on historic ground when she places her dainty foot upon the 60,500 acres of the duke's in the heart of Roxburghshire, in England, says the New York Press. Though not his birthplace, this county is the land of Sir Walter Scott. Possibly her great love for the Waverley novels romantically inclined Miss Goelet toward the young man whose ancestors were friends of the famous novelist. The original spelling was Roxburgh. The town which gave the county its name is still so spelled. Celebrated battles were fought near Floors castle, the peculiar name of the seat of the Dukes of Roxburghe, and none was more bloody than that of Ancrum Moor. Here it was that Lilliard, a Scottish maiden, did prodigies of valor.

Some of the Goelet millions will make Floors castle as fine as the Vanderbilt millions have made Blenheim. The renowned old cockroach-cobweb hall will readily absorb about $7,000,000 before it gets into condition for the heiress. Floors has long been celebrated for its gardens and conservatories, the best kept up places of their kind in Scotland. The castle is very old. As far back as 1460, when it was held by the English, King James II of Scotland laid siege to it, and was blown to pieces by the bursting of a cannon. The very spot on which the king died is pointed out to visitors.

PENNY BATHS FOR THE POOR

A Plan From Bonn on the Rhine to Benefit Chicago.

Floating bath houses will dot the Chicago river next summer, and the poor will have a chance to keep clean at the rate of 1 cent a bath, says the Chicago Chronicle. Henry E. Weaver will find the money to build the barges, buy the towels and the first cargo of soap, and the bath houses will be expected to pay for their keeping after that. But this is not all. Artistic fountains will adorn the ghetto district, and it will be Mr. Weaver's money that will build at least one of these.

"In Europe fresh running water does much to make the cities attractive," said Mr. Weaver. "Why should not the same be true in Chicago?"

The bath scheme comes from Bonn on the Rhine. "They have floating bath houses there that measure 40 by 100 feet," said Mr. Weaver. "Thousands bathe during the season, and the inhabitants, no matter how poor they may be, are always clean. The advisability of a floating bath house may be readily seen. Sometimes the poor will not travel far to bathe, but bring the means to their doors, and it is a different matter. The barges are moored to the bank and remain until the inhabitants of one section of the city are clean. Then they float down the river to another point. The charge of 1 cent will pay the cost of keeping the baths. The water in the Chicago river is plenty good enough to bathe in."

Chinese Coins as Trimmings.

Chinese and Japanese ideas are being incorporated in woman's dress in a remarkable degree, says the New York Press. A girl recently wore a kimono shaped coat in Fifth avenue. The hat was of robin's egg blue broadcloth. The collar and front of the coat were trimmed with Chinese embroidery in peacock blue. It was a savage dragon design. But most remarkable of all were the Chinese coins that were sewed on the coat as an additional trimming at the neck. These coins also formed bangles. It was a striking effect, but not altogether in good taste.

The New French Coins.

Samples of the new French nickel coins were stamped recently and look very neat, says a Paris cable dispatch to the New York Herald. They are of pure metal. The design consists of the head of a figure representing the republic, very graceful in outline, without any ornamentation on the reverse. The new coins have a great advantage over the heavy copper coins. The metal, being more durable, will last longer than silver, and the figures are not easily effaced. The mint has begun coining them for general use.

The New Turf Queen.

All hail to Lou Dillon, the queen of the turf,
That set the world talking when at Readville park,
With footsteps as light as the spray on the surf
She flashed through the stretch to the two minute mark.

With a star in her face and a jacket of gold,
A white leg behind and a very light shoe,
With a stride that is frictionless, airy and bold,
Lou Dillon paraded and trotted in two.

The dream of the breeder, it looked like the fay
Which sparkle and flutter on destiny's shield,
Till over the Readville blue ribbon of clay
Lou Dillon was victor, with Time in the field.

'Twas the aim of her breeder to own such a mare;
He saw her developed and trot in two eight,
But his last debt to earth had to be settled e'er
The star of his farm shot away on her gait.

In his place there appeared a bold man among men,
Who loves a fast trotter for what it can do,
And he shall be applauded with voice and with pen
For planning the trip that made Lou trot in two.

'Tis of Billings I speak, the new king of the road,
Successor to Bonner, the best we have seen,
And in Billings Dame Nature has reaped what she sowed;
His father owned Princess, and he has the queen.

ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Boston Patrolman Is Held For the Grand Jury

SURPRISE AT HIS ARREST

As Autopsy Revealed No Marks of Violence on Alleged Victim—Accused Man's Name on Police Roll of Honor For Heroic Action

Boston, Oct. 17.—The death of Louis Brandt, a lithographer, Thursday night, and the arrest and commitment of Patrolman Edward F. Lewey of police station 2, charged with the murder of Brandt, contribute a case which has aroused much interest in this city. Brandt died in a hospital ambulance, after having been arrested for drunkenness, the police finding that he was apparently ill instead of intoxicated.

Brandt was with two or three other men, in a saloon near Faneuil hall, just before the arrest, and was being supported by two of them as he passed along the street. Policeman Lewey, off duty and in plain clothes, was near by when Patrolman Duncan of station 2 noted Brandt's apparently helpless condition and made the arrest. Later, Lewey was asked to report at the station, and when he did so was asked to remain for a time. The two men with Brandt also were brought to the station and all were held pending an autopsy on Brandt's body. Subsequently application was made to Judge Burke of the municipal court for a warrant and Lewey was arrested, charged with murder. The other two men are held as witnesses. Lewey denies all responsibility for Brandt's death.

The arrest of Lewey caused great surprise, as he is one of the most popular as well as faithful members of the force. He has been a day patrolman for a number of years and has been recommended upon more than one occasion for a bronze medal for commendation and for promotion to a sergeantcy because of his meritorious, heroic and efficient work. Lewey's name is inscribed on the roll of honor at police headquarters for having performed two daring feats which, his superiors have testified, resulted in saving no less than three lives. He has one medal from the Massachusetts Humane society and one from the board of police. Both medals were won in 1898, and were for stopping a runaway horse and for saving a man from burning to death. The latter occurred at the time of the fire in the subway in front of the Museum. The gas which had accumulated in a hidden cavern beneath the sidewalk took fire and Lewey was badly burned in saving a blacksmith who was at work in the excavation.

The runaway horse stopped by Lewey was dashing down Tremont row, and Captain Gaskin, in reporting the matter later, said that the patrolman had undoubtedly saved the lives of at least two women.

There has been considerable surprise expressed also at the arrest, as Medical Examiner Harris, after an autopsy, announced that no marks of violence were found. He told Judge Burke, however, that death might have been caused by a blow or kick over the heart or by a dose of chloral.

It was on this evidence, in addition to facts presented by the police at a hearing which followed the arrest, that Lewey was held for the grand jury, and as the charge was murder, bail could not be accepted.

The complaint against the policeman charged him with assault upon Brandt in which he inflicted a blow upon the breast, from the effects of which Brandt died.

For a time the case was marked with great reticence on the part of all interested, but after the arrest some of the facts came out. The two men with Brandt said that no assault occurred and that they considered him to be helpless from intoxication. The proprietor of the saloon in which the party had been drinking just before Brandt was arrested says that all the men, including Lewey, were in the saloon when an argument arose as to the tune which a negro banjoist was playing, and the men came to blows. They left the place, he says, before any serious harm was done.

Fatal Fight With Negroes

McKeesport, Pa., Oct. 17.—As the result of an attempt by three officers to arrest negroes at Glassport last night, Constable Shields was shot through the heart and almost instantly killed, and Peter Melvin, one of the negroes, was shot dead by Officer Kelly. The negroes attempted to shoot William Davidson, a railroad man, who escaped. The officers called on the negroes to surrender. They refused and the shooting followed.

Dinner to Italian Sovereigns

Paris, Oct. 17.—The dinner given by Foreign Minister Delcasse last night in honor of the Italian sovereigns was a brilliant function. The guests included the high officials of the government and the foreign ambassadors. King Victor Emmanuel conversed at considerable length with the ambassadors.

Must Leave Officers Behind

Vienna, Oct. 17.—The Neues Tagblatt asserts that King Peter of Servia will visit Austrian and Russian courts in December. As both courts have declined to receive Servian officers it is evident that King Peter can only take with him a civil suite.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Conservatism Displayed In Carrying Out Prospected New Undertakings.

New York, Oct. 17.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says: While some contraction in trade and industry has undoubtedly taken place, it is not in proportion to the reduction of 20 percent in pig iron output or the reaction in prices of securities, although in normal years these have usually proved fairly reliable barometers. From the top point last year the 60 leading railway shares have fallen almost a third in market value and the industrial stocks have lost more than that percentage, the leading metal properties touching new low records this week. Many branches of manufacture, however, are working full force, with large orders still unfilled, while the latest returns of the crops are most encouraging.

Finance and labor are the disturbing elements this year, neutralized very largely by favorable commercial and agricultural conditions. The net result is a fairly well maintained volume of trade, offset by conservatism in carrying out prospected new undertakings and proposed extensions of facilities.

Footwear factories are busy on contracts that will require some time to finish and wholesalers still complain that deliveries of heavy goods are not made promptly, yet there are indications that trade is quieting down at the east. One effect of the recent floods was a practical exhaustion of supplies of rubber boots at eastern cities. More idle machinery has resumed at cotton mills, but the cost of raw cotton is still considerably above a parity with the prices that buyers are willing to give for goods. Woolens are dull in men's wear fabrics and quiet in dress goods.

Chase's "Inadvertent" Act

Denver, Oct. 17.—The charges on which Brigadier General Chase of the Colorado National Guard has been summoned before a military court are perjury and disobedience of orders. The perjury is in connection with the imprisonment of Davis, one of the strike leaders at Cripple Creek. Chase signed court papers which stated that Davis had been released. His friends say he committed the act inadvertently. His enemies say there is no excuse for the act.

Roosevelt the Friend of Cuba

Havana, Oct. 17.—Sixteen United States artillery officers were entertained here at a farewell breakfast by General Rodriguez, commander of the Cuban forces, and 31 Cuban artillery and rural guard officers. A number of speeches were made. General Rodriguez referred to what American soldiers had done for Cuba and proposed a toast to the American army and President Roosevelt, "the true and generous friend of Cuba."

Opposed to Lee In Hall of Fame

Dayton, O., Oct. 17.—One of the concluding acts of the Union Veteran Legion at its annual meeting here was the adoption of a resolution bitterly protesting against the plan of placing a statue of General Robert E. Lee in the hall of fame. The resolutions assert that such an act would be an insult to the union soldiers now living and to the memory of soldiers dead.

Prominent Man Loses His Vote

New York, Oct. 17.—When President Baldwin of the Long Island railroad, a prominent member of the Citizens' Union, made application for permission to vote in the first assembly district in Brooklyn the board of registration demurred and Baldwin was not permitted to register. He recently sold his house in Brooklyn and has been living in a suburb.

Too Dangerous to Be at Large

Washington, Oct. 17.—Peter Elliott of Minneapolis, who was arrested at the White House and who made a violent attack upon the officers who had him in custody, has been officially adjudged insane and recommitted to St. Elizabeth's insane asylum. Surgeons testified that Elliott is apt to be violent at any time.

Immediate Hearing Denied Stern

Washington, Oct. 17.—Leopold J. Stern, the Baltimore contractor recently indicted in connection with a postal contract, appeared in police court here, where Judge Scott denied the request of Stern's counsel for an immediate hearing. Bond was fixed at $5000 and Stern was committed to jail.

Hurricane Off Newfoundland

St. Johns, Oct. 17.—A hurricane here caused immense damage to fishing property. Many boats have foundered and it is feared that the fishing fleet, which is now making its last trip to the Grand Banks, may have suffered a disaster.

Hunting For Alleged Lunatic

Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Search is being continued for James P. Rogers of Hartford, an alleged lunatic, who escaped here while being taken to the state hospital at Poughkeepsie.

POLITICAL CORRUPTION

Leading to Evils Which Threaten Our National Life

OUR COUNTRY'S PROSPERITY

Unsubstantial So Far as It Is Built Upon Speculative Wealth—Grover Cleveland Dwells Upon Necessity of Every Citizen Becoming a Politician

Chicago, Oct. 15.—"Give to our people something that will concentrate their common affection and solicitous care—and let that be their country's good; give them a purpose that stimulates them to unite in lofty endeavor—and let that purpose be a demonstration of the efficiency and beneficence of our popular rule."

This was the solution offered by former President Grover Cleveland, as a remedy for corrupt politics, in a speech before the members of the Commercial club at its annual banquet given last night. The subject discussed by Mr. Cleveland was "American Good Citizenship."

Mr. Cleveland said that our public life is saturated with the indecent demands of selfishness. More than this, can any of us doubt, he asked, the existence of still more odious and detestible evils which, with steady cankering growth, are more directly than all others, threatening our safety and national life? "I speak of the corruption of our suffrage," he said, "open and notorious; of the buying and selling of political places for money, the purchase of political favors and privileges, and the traffic in official duty for personal gain. These things are confessedly common. Every intelligent man knows that they have grown from small beginnings until they have reached frightful proportions of malevolence; and yet respectable citizens by the thousands and hundreds of thousands have looked on with perfect calmness, and with hypocritical cant have declared they are not politicians, or with silly pretensions of faith in our strength and luck, have languidly claimed that the country was prosperous, equal to any emergency, and proof against all dangers.

"Resulting from these conditions in a manner not difficult to trace," he continued, "wholesome national sentiment is threatened with utter perversion. We are told that the national splendor we have built upon the showy ventures of speculative wealth is a badge of our success. Unsharing contentment is enjoined upon the masses of our people, and they are invited, in the bare subsistance of their scanty homes, to patriotically rejoice in their country's prosperity. This is too unsubstantial an enjoyment of benefits to satisfy those who have been taught American equality; and thus has arisen, by a perfectly natural process, a dissatisfied insistance upon a better distribution of the results of our vaunted prosperity.

"We now see its worst manifestation in the apparently incorrigible dislocation of the proper relations between labor and capital. This, of itself, is sufficiently distressing; but thoughtful men are not without dread of sadder developments yet to come There has also grown up among our people a disregard for the restraints of law, and a disposition to evade its limitations—while querulous strictures concerning the action of our courts tend to undermine popular faith in the course of justice.

"I hasten to give assurance that I have not spoken in a spirit of gloomy pessimism. I know that patriotism's timely revival and activity means the realization of the loftiest hopes of a free nation. I have faith that the awakening is forthcoming.

"It is time that there should be an end of self-satisfied gratification, or pretense of virtue, in the phrase: 'I am not a politician;' and it is time to forbid the prostitution of the word to a sinister use. Every citizen should be politician enough to bring himself within the true meaning of the term, as one who concerns himself with 'the regulation or government of a nation or state for the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity.' This is politics in its best sense, and this is good citizenship.

"If good men are to interfere to make political action what it should be, they must not suppose they will come upon an open field unoccupied by an opposing force. On the ground they have neglected they will find a host of those who engage in politics for personal ends and selfish purposes; and this ground cannot be taken without a hand to hand conflict. The attack must be made under the banner of disinterested good citizenship, by soldiers drilled in lessons of patriotism. They must be enlisted for life and constantly on duty."

In conclusion Mr. Cleveland said: "In the day when all shadows shall have passed away and when good citizenship shall have made sure the safety, permanence and happiness of our nation, how small will appear the strifes of selfishness in our civic life and how petty will seem the machinations of degraded politics! There shall be set over against them in that time a reverent sense of co-operation in Heaven' plans for our people's greatness, and the joyous pride of standing among those who, in the comradeship of American good citizenship, have so protected and defended our heritage of self-government, that our treasures are safe in the citadel of patriotism, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 18—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—Great men of the Bible—What Moses teaches us.—Ex. xxxiv, 28-35; Matt. xvii, 3, 4; Heb. iii, 1-5.

The life of Moses is the most easily remembered of all the Old Testament characters. It is divided into three equal periods of forty years each. He was born in Egypt and spent his first forty years there, being trained in the home and afterward in the palace, where he learned all the wisdom of the Egyptians for the work which God had in store for him. His second period was spent in Midian, whither God sent him after a serious exhibition of impulsiveness that He might teach him the lesson of patience. The third period of his life was spent in leading the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan, and, this accomplished, God called him up higher. Alone with God on Mount Neto he "fell in sleep" and was not seen on earth again until he appeared with Moses upon the Mount of Transfiguration.

The life of Moses is rich in practical lessons, and the difficulty is not what to say, but what to leave unsaid in the limited space before us. Yet some lessons in the life of Moses stand out more prominently before us, and these may be mentioned.

1. Moses teaches the importance of education for a successful life work. Many decry education, but it cannot be done without in the light of Moses' life. God educated him in the home, in the learning of the schools of Egypt and in the great school of experience before he had him ready for his life work. He spent eighty years in preparing him to do forty years' work. And it paid. His life stands out in great prominence as the deliverer of his nation and, under God, its founder and lawgiver. Too much time and study cannot be spent in preparing for a life work if it is to be a great and successful one.

2. Moses teaches a lesson on Christ. In many respects he was a type of the Christ who was to come to Israel and to the world. But, with all his greatness, he cannot be compared to Christ. Moses served God as a servant, Christ served Him as a son, and if we honor and try to imitate the life of God's great servant how much more we should honor and love and imitate the life of the Son of God? Christ was far superior to Moses, and should therefore have a far more superior place in our hearts and lives.

3. Moses teaches a lesson in faithfulness to God. With but one exception, an act of disobedience that cost him an entrance into Canaan, Moses was most faithful to God. He carried out his instructions in relation to Pharaoh, he followed his guidance in the wilderness and organized the nation and the national church upon the lines laid down by God, and God rewarded his faithfulness. He took him to Himself and honored him beside Elijah in that most interesting scene in the life of Christ upon the Mount of Transfiguration. Like Moses, let us be faithful and there will be laid up for us "a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give us in that day."

Maryland Song.

The Maryland Endeavorers make the welkin ring with their state song, which they sing to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland." The song in its entirety is as follows:

File into rank for Christ today,
Oh, Maryland, dear Maryland.
Free to the breeze His banners play,
Maryland, dear Maryland.
Your noblest work for Him be done
From early dawn to setting sun,
Nor cease till latest victory's won,
Maryland, my Maryland.

CHORUS.

Shout, shout for joy the glad refrain,
Maryland, my Maryland.
Our King shall claim His own again,
Maryland, my Maryland.

"Christ and His church" your watchword be,
Maryland, dear Maryland,
Till time becomes eternity,
Maryland, dear Maryland.
His gospel spread through all the land,
His heralds each Endeavor band,
And may they make a gallant stand
For Maryland, dear Maryland.

Oh, sound the call both loud and well,
In Maryland, dear Maryland,
For all who would His legions swell,
Maryland, my Maryland.
From mountain, river, hill and plain
Ring out the loud, resounding strain
And bid the welkin ring again
In Maryland, my Maryland.

Additions to the Church.

During the past year 175,000 have come from the ranks of Christian Endeavor into the membership of the churches, and thousands more would have come if more pastors had appreciated what a magnificent field for evangelistic effort God had placed at their hand.—William Shaw in General Secretary's Report at Denver Convention.

Not "Shall," but "How."

The question for us to consider this year is not "Shall we expand?" but "How can we best expand?"—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Judge Pratt was on the bench at the at the district court this morning.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday evening.

There are rumors about town that the Quincy Historical society is to be reorganized and take up active work.

Ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb says that all reports that he intends to withdraw as a mayoralty candidate may be set down as mere rumors. He is in the contest to the finish.

At the close of the prayer meeting at the United Presbyterian church Thursday evening there will be an election of elders.

There seems to be plenty of stray cats and kittens about this fall. The Ledger office is sheltering two office cats just at present.

Marion and Gordon, the young children of Mr. and Mrs. David Harley, nee Coolidge, of Pawtucket, are ill with diphtheria, but are improving each day.

The College Fair at the Universalist Vestry Oct. 28, 29, will afford a pleasing novelty in the way of decorations and entertainment. College flags and college decorations are solicited as a loan for the occasion.

At the Universalist church on Sunday at 2.30 P. M. Rev. Merrill C. Ward will preach upon the theme, "The public spirit of Thomas Crane" and the service will be in observance of the day which is the centennial of his birth.

RESOLVED—That as a mark of respect to his memory, a copy of these resolutions be presented to his sorrowing family, and that the same be published in the Quincy Patriot and Daily Ledger, and Quincy Advertiser, and in the Hibernian, and entered on the records of this society.

The Kilties Program.

It is not often that a musical organization is so happily constituted that it pleases both the musically critical lovers of the classical and also those persons whose only idea as to the merits of a musical rendition is based on the amount of entertainment or joy it gives them. Both classes are equally entitled to consideration in the selection of a musical program and it is evident from a perusal of their past programs that "The Kilties" the great Canadian Band that will shortly visit this city owe much of their tremendous popularity to Bandmaster Robinson's taste and care in the selections of his music. Although the distinct novelty features of "The Kilties Band" add much to their popular success, it is only such a band of artists, playing all music—classical or popular—in a faultless manner that could possibly meet with such universal approval.

COUPE OVERTURNED.

Struck by Electric Car-Fortunate Escape of Occupants.

About 5.30 last evening James Dunn drove up to The Greenleaf block in City Square, while his daughter alighted and did some shopping. When Miss Dunn reentered the carriage, a coupe carryall, an electric car bound for West Quincy came to a stop at the corner of Granite street to take on a passenger.

Mr. Dunn thought he had plenty of time to turn and cross the track in front of the car. He did get nearly across, but the car gathered speed and struck the rear part of the coupe throwing it over on the street. The car stopped almost immediately.

Mr. Dunn was thrown into the street, but was soon on his feet, and with assistance prevented the horse from running. In the meanwhile Miss Dunn was inside the coupe. She appeared remarkably calm, and declined proffered assistance saying she would get out alone. When safe on the ground she appeared unhurt, and after assuring herself that her father was all right she went home.

The car was one of the large boxed ones, the motorman being William A. Abbott. He says the accident was unavoidable as Mr. Dunn pulled suddenly across the track.

The carryall will require two new wheels and other repairs, besides revarnishing, and will cost $100 or more.

Dr. Gordon who visited Mr. Dunn found that one of his elbows was bruised but that otherwise there was scarcely a scratch. Miss Dunn was unhurt.

Mr. Dunn is regarded as a very careful driver, and this accident was his first.

Boston's Greatest Fair.

The second week of the big October fair which opened so auspiciously in Mechanics' Building, Monday, Oct. 5, and which will continue all through the month, has demonstrated conclusively the extraordinary popularity of the Exposition.

In the line of entertainments, Creatore, the strenuous and gifted bandmaster, and his Italian Band, heads the list, furnishing the very highest class of music, vocal as well as instrumental. That the public fully appreciates this fact, has been shown at both the afternoon and evening concerts, when every number on the program was enthusiastically applauded and persistently encored.

Aside from the royal entertainment furnished by Creatore, the attention of the visitor is attracted to a hundred and one other features, more or less prominent and important. Passing down the main halls from the Garrison street entrance, the eye takes in all manner of mercantile and manufacturing exhibits, fruits and cereals, until finally, he comes to the great historic feature of the exposition, the United States Government exhibit from the War and Treasury Departments. The U. S. Treasury has contributed a beautiful coining machine and monster gilt frames enclose bank notes ranging from $1 to $10,000. Both of these Government exhibits are carefully guarded by a detail of soldiers from the regular army.

Farther on, adjoining the stage or elevated platform, is one of the two stairways which leads to the Midway of Fairyland, the great entertainment feature of the exposition. In Midway proper is a grand promenade, with diamond tessilated floor, overhung with a profusion of tropical foliage and illuminated by thousands of varicolored electric lights. It is as its name implies, a veritable fairyland and has for special attractions, a Japanese tea garden with Geisha girls, an Eskimo village, an Hawaiian musical troupe, the Johnston flood, Jim Key the educated horse, a laughing mirror maze and countless other equally attractive and entertaining features.

Returning once more to the main floor and ascending to the balcony on the east side of Exhibition hall, one finds the most interesting and, indeed, the most important of all the myriad attractions of the fair. It is the infant incubator exhibit, a practical and efficient as well as a thoroughly scientific demonstration of how the lives of infants, prematurely born, may be saved.

The Marconi system of wireless telegraphy which is installed on the main floor, is another highly interesting and instructive scientific exhibit.

QUINCY DAILY LEDGER.

Vol. 15. No. 244. QUINCY, MASS., MONDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1903. PRICE TWO CENTS.

WORTHY TRIBUTES TO THOMAS CRANE.

Seven or More of the Quincy Pastors Speak on the Life and Character of the City's Benefactor on the Centennial of His Birth.

THE LIBRARY BUILDING IS THE GEM OF OUR CITY.

Rev. E. N. Hardy of Bethany Congregational church, at the Sunday morning service made reference in his prayer to those who in the past have anticipated the needs of our city, and provided for them. They have founded institutions which shall be permanent. May we of today leave our mark, and assist in the work of good citizenship, and for progress along right lines.

Mr. Hardy also prefaced his sermon with a tribute to Thomas Crane. He said in substance: The editor of the Daily Ledger has very wisely reminded us of the centennial of the birth of one of Quincy's greatest benefactors. We recognize our obligations to Thomas Crane who gave Quincy her Public Library building, and I am pleased at this time to add a tribute. Only a few weeks ago one of my guests was shown the library building, and he said it was one of the most beautiful he had found in the country. We are proud of it; proud of the service of those in charge of the library; proud of those who have the selection of the books; proud of the life of Thomas Crane.

The fact that when a young man he walked each Sunday from Quincy to Boston to attend church shows us the character of the man. As a citizen he was quiet and unostentatious. From little he gained a competence, and was glad to give it to his native city for our benefit. The building is the gem of our city.

In our days when the city furnishes free school books, and our churches are so free, there is danger we may grow lax in our appreciation of such gifts. Let us not be charged with ingratitude. We need to be stimulated that other advantages may be obtained, for example a Y. M. C. A. building. As Emerson said, we should do better than our fathers.

AT QUINCY POINT.

Rev. Leon H. Austin of the Quincy Point church prefaced his sermon on Sunday with a grand tribute to Thomas Crane, a former resident of Quincy Point.

WOLLASTON AND ATLANTIC PASTORS MAKE REFERENCE TO DAY

The Rev. F. W. Pratt of the Wollaston Unitarian church, and Rev. J. H. Whitaker of the Atlantic Memorial church, paid tribute on Sunday in their sermons to Thomas Crane, Quincy's benefactor.

Probably there were other pastors who made reference to the centennial.

IN THE SCHOOLS.

Many of the public schools of the city are today observing the centennial of the birth of Thomas Crane. Some of the pupils prepared papers, and others read from the historical sketch in the Daily Ledger. The teachers pointed out lessons of value in the life of Quincy's benefactor.

THE MAN TO WHOSE MEMORY IT WAS ERECTED IS A LIVING FORCE.

Rev. E. C. Butler of the First church closed his sermon Sunday morning with the following tribute to Thomas Crane:

"One of the most brilliant men I ever knew, and him I only knew by one thing he left behind him, once said, I do not want to be forgotten. I should like to do something to cause my name to be remembered and well-remembered long after I am gone.

Now, there are those who have left reason enough for memories to cluster around their name; men famous for power, genius, ambition. One is remembered because he depeopled great provinces. Another laid waste an empire. They shed much blood; they sacrificed countless lives; they made much misery; they are and will be long remembered because they effected a mighty stoppage on human affairs. They set back the tides of civilization in their channels. The clutch of their dead hand yet sends a chilling paralysis into human life."

"But to be well rembered is quite another story. To have added to the gayety of nations; to have made life cheerful instead of desolate; to have made hearts warm not cold; to have kindled an intellectual fire in the community that death or time cannot put out or waters drown, Oh! this is much to be desired. It is worth while to live if one may accomplish this. And yet it is the memorial day of one who has done all this for us."

"The greatest gifts of life we take for granted. The free gifts of nature we take as freely as they are given. They are a matter of course, and we accept them without much thought of thanks or gratitude. But their deprivation leaves a great emptiness behind. I had a friend who was lost in Mammoth Cave. After wandering for hours it seemed to him in darkness and despair, he saw, at length, a great way off the shining of a little star. Its light was wonderful, marvellous, penetrating to his very soul—outshining the brightness of the noonday sun. Following its leading, he passed along, and emerged from the cave. And oh! his guiding star was nothing but the common light of day."

"The absence of things, become our prime necessities, proves their value. Suppose our Public Library were suddenly removed, how much of light, how much of comfort for dark hours, how much of balm for weariness, how much of consolation for times distressed, would be taken away!

"For after all is said and done the best consolation when we are in trouble is a good book. Next to writing it I would rather be the means of putting it into the people's hands than have any other fortune I can think of. I should know that when I was gone I should not be forgotten. I should be remembered and well rembered. My dead hand would smooth fevered brows. It would rest in benediction on the children's heads.

"And I for one would far rather,
Could I merit so sweet a thing,
Be the poet of little children
Than the laureate of a king."

"My hand, though long withered, would still have saving grace and power to throw wide open the gates of the temple of knowledge. For while I do not in any way depreciate our schools, I count our Library the first of our educational institutions. The man to whose memory it was erected is today a living force for good among us. His influence, though silent, dominates by every wise thought and generous sentiment written in every book that issues from the Crane Memorial Hall. Rufus Choate said "Speeches and sermons are things of a day; spoken words are written in dust, but a book is immortality."

"Libraries there are, of course, and have been for a thousand years. But they were the resource of the rich; the private reading rooms of scholars. But this is different. It is a library for the public. The scholar has numberless resources to ease his mind. The rich man can go to Europe. There are places enough for them. They are the few, the exceptional. But this is for all.

"Everybody may come here; the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the wise and the simple like the mercy of God its for the good and evil; it is the refuge of the sad, the consolation of the afflicted, the friend of the poor man, and I think I will say the best friend of our quiet hours.

"Others may grow old and leave us; others may grow cold and forget us; others may take offence and forsake us, but good books never change are never ungrateful—faithful to the last.

"I think that when my time comes to go, among my last best thoughts would be the wish that some one whom I love well would turn me where my last lingering glances might rest upon this beautiful ancient church and that no less beautiful modern structure across the way, and I could fall asleep thinking that out of them has come much of the best that is in me; most of my true and only being; so much of the root of my selfhood that I have come to feel can never perish.

"It is entirely fitting for us to recall this day with gratitude the name of Thomas Crane the founder of the Crane Memorial Hall, for he was in the highest sense a benefactor of the city of Quincy."

MANY FLORAL TRIBUTES AT THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Beautiful flowers arranged about the large portrait of Thomas Crane in the reading room at the Public Library remind visitors of the birthday anniversary of the philanthropist who gave the building to the city. Some of these flowers were sent by the Universalist church and some of them by the pupils of the Coddington school. More flowers from the Coddington and other schools are expected this afternoon.

HONEST, PERSISTENT INDOMITABLE DEVOTION MADE HIM THE MAN HE BECAME

At Christ church the rector, Rev. William E. Gardner preached the concluding sermon in a course on "Religion in Citizenship." The subject for the day was "Courage in Citizenship." He said in part:

Today is the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Mr. Thomas Crane, a man whose name stands high in the annals of this community, and in whose memory has been built our most beautiful and serviceable public building.

For twenty-six years he lived the quiet life of a country lad. A little schooling and a great deal of work made him a strong well knit man. But one incident stands out in these early years to mark his life as extraordinary; this arose from a strong religious tendency. Unable to find in Quincy the religious food his soul craved, he walked each Sunday from Quincy Point to Boston that he might listen to Father Hosea Ballou, the rising Universalist minister who attracted large congregations to his church on School street. It was this honest, persistent, indomitable devotion to the highest call within him that made Thomas Crane the man he became.

At twenty-six years of age we find him in New York, starting life with a capital consisting of courage, health and the trade of stone cutter. In six years he had bought out many of his associates and had become a master workman and owner. To quote from an address made by Mr. Adams: "It was the old story. They were improvident and impatient, they chafed at delay and the slow movement of things; they saw, or thought they saw, better chances elsewhere. So they made short cuts to fortune and doubtless remained poor all their lives. One by one, they sold out their interests to the clearer-headed, more patient man who was strong enough to bide his time."

In the growth of New York Mr. Crane took an active part. As director in bank, insurance company and street railway; as trustee of church and Tufts college, and as a member of the anti-slavery movement he was a patient, quiet, earnest man, ever standing courageously for what he believed to be right, regardless of the numbers who stood with him or the popular cry of the multitude.

At seventy-two years of age his long well spent and successful life ended; and today not only should we have feelings of gratitude to the wife and sons who have given us a memorial of Mr. Crane, but it is fitting that we thank God for the life of this man whose character should become an example to every boy and man who lives in our community.

The kind of courage needed in our citizenship today in the dominant quality found in the life of Mr. Crane. In these days of striving for power and position our nation needs citizens in strictest sense of the word; men of the calibre of Mr. Crane, men with faith and high earnest purpose, men of strict integrity which is founded on honesty with self and with God; and men who have the courage to put away from themselves yearnings for power and position, and who find their greatest happiness in a life of quite unostentations but rigid devotion to duty.

The kind of courage demanded by the times of our forefathers is not the courage demanded today. They created a country, we have the task, the higher task of creating manhood. Who can contemplate the condition of our nation without confessing the need of a higher type of manhood. Who can meditate on the life of Mr. Crane without picturing the glorious state we would have if each citizen had the ideals, the patience, the courage which made his life?

We need men and women today who are great and glorious in mind and inspiration and who dare to be simple in ambition and carry all their glory into the simple daily task and be a workman or a workwoman in life. For some of us to do this would be a hard but a glorious struggle, out of which would come courageous but large hearted citizens.

EVERY SCHOLAR AND RESIDENT WHO READS IS BLESSED.

Rev. Merrill C. Ward of the Universalist church preached upon "the private and public spirit of Thomas Crane" taking for his text "A wise man who built his house upon a rock." After a sketch of his life and of the Quincy of his day Mr. Ward referred to Thomas Crane's lifelong devotion to the Universalist church. As a boy he walked ten miles to Boston to hear Hosea Ballou preach a live gospel. In New York he was a trustee of the old Orchard street church of Rev. Thomas J. Sawyer, and a friend of Horace Greeley and other prominent fellow members. He was also a trustee and benefactor of Tufts College.

The library, his memorial, is also a monument to the munificent spirit of his surviving son, Albert Crane, who in providing for its construction carried out his father's wishes with praiseworthiness. Recently he has added his own gift of several thousand dollars to make the grounds permanently larger and even more beautiful. The library is a work of art and of usefulness.

As a boy my soul starved for real literature. I would have walked miles, at night after hard days work, I would have made any sacrifice to have had access to what is thus placed freely at your disposal. It was denied me. I appreciate the value of it. It has treasures for your mind beyond the gems of India but for some I fear it is too near by and too easily accessible for you ever to receive its full wealth.

The maxim of this world is, "get and keep." "Be shrewd." "Look out for number one." But the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God and the self-seeker is the king of fools. The family of Thomas Crane is not only good but wise. They might have left the money at interest. Then they would have had no use of it. They might have spent it for a yacht. Then it would have been some pride, some pleasure, but much care and further expense. Invested they might have lost the money altogether. Spent for a yacht, it might have lost them their lives also.

Now, a consecrated gift to man's use, it is treasure laid up to eternal joy which cannot be lost. Every passer by is made happier for sight of its beauty, and knowledge that it is a gift, because some one loved him, loved all fellow men, loved native town. Every scholar and resident who reads is blessed. Do you not suppose that every day has been made happier for Thomas Crane in his well merited heaven, and for his family loved and honored on earth for thought of this joy and blessing given to their fellow men?

The petition for the Blackwell school house lot at Atlantic is still in circulation and has been signed by many more of the taxpayers, voters and parents with children of school age of Ward Six.

WHEN THE LIGHT CAME

By William Walker Hines

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

At last his excellency the governor was alone. The tide of office seekers, lobbyists and politicians had been turned from the executive wing of the statehouse, and the exodus of clerks and stenographers had begun. In the anteroom his private secretary awaited his dismissal for the day, impatient of the unusual delay. Down the tiled corridor echoed the footfalls of the janitor, master of all he surveyed.

All day the governor had longed for the moment, yet now he sat idle. His gaze wandered toward the window, and he found himself thinking that when the slant rays of the setting sun flashed into the room he would find light to continue his work. It was for a pitifully few moments only that the sunshine penetrated the governor's private office, with its subdued colorings, its massive furniture and its patriotic memories.

His hand rested on the paper he had no need to read—"Senate bill No. 214."

It had passed both senate and house without serious discussion, and the vote had drawn party lines sharply. The governor's own party was responsible for the measure, and it had met with only half hearted opposition. Apparently no one considered the bill of any special importance.

The governor had not quite understood why he took the precaution, but some instinct advised him to probe beneath the surface of this innocent looking measure. This instinct, this indefinable suspicion, was confirmed in a way that appalled him.

The days of indecision which followed had not been pleasant ones for the state's chief executive. Secure in their position, the sponsors of the bill had not urged its immediate signing, and the governor had carefully weighed the question.

Now he realized that the hour for action had come. Either he must veto the measure in the interest of those whose votes had given him the highest office in the state and whose welfare he had sworn to protect or throw his influence and his signature with those who were conspiring to mulct their ingenuous constituency.

There could be no compromise. Either with the masses he must stand or with their enemies. And their enemies were his lifelong friends, the men who had made him politically, the men whom he had known in boyhood, in ambitious young manhood, in ripe and successful middle age—the men with whom he had marched and sung and fought and bled during the mighty civil war. It seemed to him in this dark hour that he loved those men, every one of them. He knew their wives, their sons, their daughters. He had broken bread at their tables. He had rejoiced with them in their successes, sympathized with them when clouds had gathered. Political ties had been welded into friendship's fetters of steel. He brought his fist down on the mocking paper with a terrific crash. The men behind that bill were bone of his bone, flesh of his flesh, and yet—

Then came another thought, a thought purely selfish. If he turned against these men who had made him what he was what did the future offer? An honest politician, he had no financial returns from a score of years given to his state's service. Part of his salary each year had gone to pay interest on the mortgage which had hung heavily on the old farm. His law practice had been scattered among many younger rivals. And he had passed that age when men can compete successfully with new blood.

There was his wife too. She had grown accustomed to the proportion of purple and fine linen accruing to the governor's wife—and Marion. He remembered that very morning watching the girl, apple of his eye, mount her horse and canter down the driveway. Was it fair that he should dash the cup of pleasure she was just raising to her lips? He could almost feel the fresh, cool kiss of his cheek as she whispered:

"Father, dear, I am so happy, so happy!"

Would she be happy if he took her back to the old farm, with its straggling buildings, its neglected land, to begin all over again?

He bent forward, one hand supporting his aching head. Then suddenly came the sunbeam, striking full and fair through the casement. It fell upon his great seal ring, bearing the state's coat of arms, and he pulled his hand back into the shadows.

The sun's ray traveled across the room, tilting upward, and in a whimsical mood he followed its course over the great flat topped desk with its fixtures, past the high backed carved chairs straight to the mantel, and there it struck something that brought him to his feet.

It was an oil painting of himself, life size and made from an old daguerreotype. He remembered the very day that faded little picture had been taken. He had worn his uniform, then bright and new. The painting was the gift of the men of his company, some of whom were numbered among the ranks of those supporting the bill which lay on yonder desk. Why had they followed him in those dark days of secession and civil strife? Why had they followed where he led? Why, if he was not stronger than they, if the gift of leadership was not mighty within him? They had trusted him then, they had followed him then, and now where was he leading them? No; he was not leading, he was following. Following them where? To dishonor, to dishonesty!

But would they see it that way? Would they realize that the same belief in a great underlying principle which had led him to don that uniform in a lost cause dominated him?

Some one opened the door, but he did not turn. Rather he stood as one fascinated, for the draft from the open door had stirred the two flags across above the picture, the two flags which he now loved with a strangely commingled and yet divided affection. Something stronger than sentiment took possession of him. He had found the light.

He turned toward his desk and picked up his pen with a hand that did not tremble. It was the work of a moment only.

Then he looked up to face—Marion, with a happy light in her eyes, the lilt of a meadowlark in her voice.

"Father, dear, I am so glad to catch you alone for just a little minute, dearest," she coaxed as she glanced at the stacks of papers. "You wouldn't mind if I sat on your knee, just as we used to sit together. Dear me, how long it was!"

The governor smiled indulgently and held her cool, smooth cheek close to his feverish one.

"You are so busy all the time it really doesn't seem as if I had a father now, but I have something so important to tell you. You remember Jerry Gaylord, father, dear? I used to go to school with Jerry. You often took us to the crossroads in your buggy. Well, Jerry has been here—yes, several times—and we—I—I—think I'll go back with him next time if you don't mind. Mother says it is simply absurd. Jerry isn't very remarkable. He isn't even a state senator, and he doesn't want to be, but I think I'll see more of him than mother does of you, and I don't care for a husband who is too successful to love me. Oh, father, dear, I don't mean that! But please may I marry him and go back to Bridgeport? It's very quiet at Bridgeport, I know, but I like it better."

And he had been afraid to dash the cup from her lips! He had thought she loved it all—the excitement, the homage paid her as daughter of the governor.

"Back to Bridgeport!"

He had quite forgotten Jerry, though when she had first spoken he had thought of Jerry as a promising young fellow.

"Back to Bridgeport!"

He glanced at the lines he had just penned and suddenly straightened up. There was a new light in his eyes, a stronger ring in his voice.

"Of course you may. Jerry is all right, and—well, there is no telling; I may go back to Bridgeport myself one of these days."

Then he kissed her, gravely and tenderly, and arm in arm they walked out of the office. He closed the door, and the secretary picked up his hat. The day's work was done.

The Dangers of Imagination.

A story of Coleridge's boyhood, which appears in a book by Mr. Wilfred Brown on the poet's childhood and later years, shows the dangers that t set the star gazer and also the rewar that come to him. From his ea youth Coleridge lived in a world books and dreams, yet his favorite walk seems to have been the Strand, the last place in the world for a poet to lose himself in reverie.

As he strolled down the street he imagined himself swimming the Hellespont, the feat of which other poets had written and which the poet Byron was to accomplish later. Once, while the mind of Coleridge was thus far from the busy Strand, he absently thrust his hands before him in the manner of one swimming. Suddenly one hand came in contact with a gentleman's pocket.

The gentleman, thinking to capture a thief, seized the hand and exclaimed: "What! So young and so wicked!" He accused the poor, poetic boy of an attempt at pocket picking.

With some fright and a few tears the boy explained, and we can imagine that words did not fail him who was to become the most brilliant talker of his age. The gentleman was delighted with Coleridge's imagination, which could turn the Strand into the Hellespont. The intelligence of the young Leander made the stranger inquire into Coleridge's tastes, and when he found the boy liked books he opened for him a subscription at the circulating library in Cheapside.

Individuality of Birds.

In studying different birds of the same species individual traits are constantly seen and expressed in strong relief. The greatest differences seem to lie in the relative development of their sense of fear. In one wren family the male never fed the young, and the female never became very tame. What a different state of affairs was found at another wren's nest studied earlier in the summer! After the removal of this nest it was fully forty-five minutes before the young got a morsel to eat, but after the first visit the victory was won, and the hen, if not the cock, bird became very tame. During the preliminary interval of suspense the male sang cheerfully, but the female was at the nest and stump many times before venturing inside. Five minutes after her timidity had been finally overcome the male was also on the stump, where he sat with drooping wings and gave his alarm; thence he flew to a tree, then to the ridgepole of the tent, where he sang merrily, while the young were fed by his mate. The male sang all the morning until noon and, after a silence, began again at 2 o'clock. On the contrary, at the first nest the male was never seen and seldom, if ever, heard. The timidity of the female was never completely overcome.—Century.

BEAUTY SPOTS.

A few waving locks about the forehead, temple and ears are becoming to a thin face.

If you will apply a little pure white vaseline to your eyelashes every night it will aid their growth and strengthen them.

Don't become too stout. Although plumpness of contour is by no means unbecoming, corpulence is a thing to be avoided.

Onion sandwiches are said to clarify the complexion. The onions must be sliced very fine and salted, then placed between thin slices of bread and butter.

The arrangement of a woman's hair will either enhance or mar her appearance. The wise woman will wear her hair in the style that proves becoming, whether it be fashionable or not.

Don't think that because you are forty and fair you also should be fat and that nature has laid down a law that women shall accumulate layers with years, like a magnolia or any other tree.

Don't wash your face in cold water if you have been weeping. It only makes a bad matter worse. Instead bathe with rosewater and then put a soft cloth saturated with rosewater over the eyes.

Before a Girl Promises.

Whole hearted affection is, in the majority of cases, absolutely essential to married happiness, but it must be combined beforehand with practical common sense, which will enable a girl to gain a clear insight into the character of the man she proposes to marry. Girls nowadays are apt to think that a handsome, attractive and fascinating lover must necessarily make a good husband, whereas it frequently happens that he is totally unfit for the responsibilities of married life. Before a woman promises to be the wife of a man it is a duty which she owes to herself to learn everything about him. It is not inquisitive or mean, as many girls seem to imagine, to inquire into his private life and affairs. The time to find out if your fancy for a man's looks is indorsed by his life's history and whether his habits are good and his tastes congenial is during courtship days. Each girl should scrutinize her prospective husband's character as carefully as she would a new hat or gown, and then she should be able to decide fairly easily as to whether he is the right man for her to marry.—American Queen.

To Avoid Nervousness.

Dr. H. T. Patrick says: "If you wish never to be nervous live with reason, have a purpose in life and work for it; play joyously, strive not for the unattainable, never regret the unalterable, be not annoyed at trifles, aim to attain neither great knowledge nor great riches, but unlimited common sense; be not self centered, but love the good and thy neighbor as thyself. The time to start such an ideal life is in early childhood. Two capital errors in the training of children are deplored by the author: (1) Leading children into pleasures and duties beyond their years, and (2) magnifying their importance in the family and in society. It is quite as dangerous to give to children the pleasures of adults as to require of them the labors of the mature."—Woman's Life.

The Linen Closet.

Every housewife takes or should take a lively interest in her household linen, and, unlike her sisters of old, she is not obliged to spin her bedclothes with her own fair hands. She may, of course, embroider or hemstitch by way of decoration, but that is all. The housewife of today takes as much pride in her store linen as did her grandmother in the work of her own hands. The closet may be either an old carved oak chest or a low box converted into an ottoman and draped with cretonne. Failing one of these, an old trunk may be utilized or there may be some recess at the landing of the stairs which could very well serve the purpose.—American Queen.

To Make Beds.

The greatest attention is given in hospitals to the proper making of beds. The nurses sometimes spend months chiefly in learning to make a bed. One of the hospital ideas may well be copied in every family where there are invalids or weak people. This is to stretch the under sheet as tight as possible and pin it firmly to the under side of the mattress with safety pins. Wrinkles in the under sheet are a fruitful source of discomfort to a sick and restless person. This system of pulling the under sheet taut and fastening it so it will stay in place will prevent such annoyance.

Women and Advertisers.

How important advertising has become is suggested by the observation of a smart man that there are but two great editors in the country—"one is the American woman and the other is the American advertiser," says the Philadelphia Record. The woman's taste has much to do with the character of the leading journals, and the advertiser's enterprise makes everything possible to the newspapers. It is because women read the newspapers that most advertisers buy its space.

Room Lights.

The difference between gas and oil lamps in the matter of vitiating the air of a room is significantly indicated in the fact that florists use lamps in their greenhouses, gas never. Too frequent emphasis can hardly be put upon the necessity of airing a room thoroughly that must be slept in after having been gas lighted throughout the evening, a precaution too often neglected.

Duchesse de Berry at Dieppe.

Dieppe boasts of being the most ancient of all the "bains de mer." Henri III. repaired thither in 1578 "to bathe in the sea in order to cure certain ailments from which he suffered."

For a long time the Dieppe baths were reported to be efficacious in cases of hydrophobia. When Henry IV.'s little dog, Fanor, had been bitten by a big dog, supposed to be mad, it was dispatched to Dieppe in charge of a groom of the chamber, "pour etre mouille dans la mer," and Mme. de Sevigne relates that some ladies of the court who had been bitten by a mad dog went there in 1671.

It was, however, the Duchesse de Berry who popularized Dieppe. She went there regularly from 1824 to 1830 and once took part in a really remarkable ceremony of inauguration on the beach. While cannon thundered and bells pealed and bands played she publicly entered the water, led by the hand by the "royal medical inspector of the baths," who was attired in evening dress with kid gloves. One would give a great deal for a snap shot of that performance.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The First American Bible.

In 1663 the first Bible printed in America was published in Cambridge. It was unlawful to print an English version of the Scriptures, that right being a monopoly enjoyed by privilege and patent in England. The one printed in Massachusetts was Eliot's famous "Indian Bible," and, although 1,500 copies were struck off, they are quite rare and "sealed books," as the tongue in which they are written is literally a "dead language," the tribe and all who had a knowledge of the dialect being long extinct.

Eliot's work is unique, being at once a monument to his piety, perseverance and learning. Its literary successor was Newman's "Concordance of the Scriptures." This was compiled by the light of pine knots in a log cabin in one of the frontier settlements of Massachusetts. It was the first of its kind and for more than a century was admitted to be the most perfect, holding its place in public esteem until superseded by Cruden's, which it suggested.

Uncovering the Past.

"All right," says the rich father, after the count has stated his terms. "I'll let Sadie marry you and agree to turn over to you $1,000,000. Now, let's get fixed up properly. Suppose we say $1,000 down and the balance at $2 a week?"

Here Sadie bursts into tears and leaves the room.

"Now, ma," says the rich father to his wife, "what on earth's the matter with that girl?"

"Well, I don't blame her at all, pa. It seems as if you never could keep from betraying the fact that we are of plebeian origin."

"What have I done now?" asks pa.

"Why, you talk as if you were buying the count from an installment house."—Judge.

Enough.

A New York man says that one of the most pathetic remarks he ever heard was made by a youngster who belonged on New York's east side. The little fellow was taken to Coney Island on an outing conducted by a charitable organization. He went down on the beach and stood for several minutes watching the waves rolling in. As far as he could see there was nothing but water, and the expanse of waves and whitecaps fascinated him. Heaving a deep sigh, the little fellow remarked, "Well, this is the first time I ever saw enough of anything."

Birds Flee Disease.

Professor Mascart has reported to the Paris Academy of Sciences that his observations proved the truth of the statement made by ancient writers that birds flee from cities and countries that are threatened with pestilence. He has found that birds that live in large cities, particularly sparrows and swallows, fly away when serious epidemics begin.

German Wines.

Without the addition of sugar to the grape juice most German wines are so acrid as to be of little commercial valuo.

Nosebleed.

Nosebleed can be stopped in a short time by placing a small wad of paper or muslin between the upper teeth and the lip. The pressure exerted at the base of the nose will arrest the bleeding.

Animal Exercise.

Many animals never take exercise for its own sake. The muscular system of animals is kept in the most perfect condition, however, by their search for food. With them exercise is natural and therefore perfect of its kind.

Cork.

All the cork used in the world in a year weighs a little over 1,000 tons.

The Color of the Hat.

Centuries ago the color of a hat or cap had its significance. Cardinals first began to wear red hats in 1253. In Italy for ages the members of the Hebrew race were known by the yellow cap they wore, it being mandatory for them to wear them.

Wordsworth.

Wordsworth would write one or two sonnets every day. When engaged on "The Excursion" he produced from 150 to 200 lines a day.

Minced Beef.

Buy a pound of clear, lean beef and get the butcher to run it through his chopper a couple of times. Spread thickly on a wire toaster and broil, or make into balls and fry, or parboil in a hot frying pan. This is better than a poor steak.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

A HAUNT FOR BANDITS

Transformed Into a Prosperous District

RUSSIA HELPED MANCHURIA

Must Be Recognized by Allowing Her to Realize Legitimate Benefits—Prospects of Conflict With Japan Appear to Be Diminishing

Paris, Oct. 19.—Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador to the United States, has been interviewed on the far eastern question. The ambassador said that the danger of a conflict, which was real a few days back, seemed to have been averted, and that if ever a conflict came it would not be provoked by Russia. Continuing, Count Cassini said:

"Our rights in Manchuria are undeniable. We made the country, which until quite recently was a mere haunt for bandits. We now have a vigilant police there and moreover we have built the railroad. This does not mean that we intend to annex Manchuria, but, having incurred enormous expenditures there, we inist that these be safeguarded and we expect to realize our legitimate benefits. The powers understand so well that none, except possibly Japan, seriously contemplated insisting that the evacuation be affected Oct. 8. Russia cannot evacuate Manchuria before obtaining the guarantee to which she had a right from China, and all Europe, including even Great Britain, recognizes that its interests are united with those of Russia."

Story of Mediation

St. Petersburg, Oct. 19.—A newspaper published at Port Dalny is authority for the report that the British minister to Japan, Sir Claude Mac Donald, has undertaken to mediate between Russia and Japan and, having secured Japan's consent to the following proposals, is now negotiating with Russia. These proposals are that Russia shall restore Manchuria to China and that the principal Manchurian towns be opened to foreign trade; Russia is to withdraw all her troops from Manchuria with the exception of the railway guards; she is to renounce her forestry concessions on both sides of the Yalu river, as well as the Yongampho concession and the whole country south of the Yalu is to be admitted as belonging to the sphere of Japan.

Thought Mob Was After Him

St. Louis, Oct. 19.—It is believed that the mystery of the murder of Mrs. Kate Lauman, whose dead body was found lying by the roadside near Normandy, has been partially solved through the suicide of John Williams, a negro, arrested late Saturday night as a suspect. A small fire occurred near the jail yesterday and it is thought that the excitement caused by the fire alarmed Williams into the belief that a mob was approaching the jail to lynch him and he quickly hanged himself with a sheet.

Tidal Wave Struck Steamer

London, Oct. 19.—Steamer Etruria, from New York, reports having been struck by a tidal wave on the day she left New York. Several persons were injured, including Mrs. W. W. Hall, a saloon passenger, who had her ankle fractured and her hip dislocated. W. W. Hall, her husband, who suffered with a weak heart, died on Oct. 15 from shock. Part of the captain's bridge and a number of stanchions were carried away by the wave.

Postal Fraud Jury Disagrees

Cincinnati, Oct. 19.—The jury in the case of Daniel V. Miller and Joseph M. Johns, on trial on the charge of an alleged conspiracy to extort a bribe, reported that it was unable to agree and was discharged by Judge Thompson. The trial was the first one under the many recent indictments for alleged frauds in the postoffice department. Four days were devoted to the taking of evidence and the fifth day to very vigorous arguments.

Free Defense For Lewey

Boston, Oct. 19.—Patrolman Lewey, who is charged with the murder of Louis Brandt, will be defended by Attorney James F. Sweeney, a personal friend of the prisoner, who refuses to accept any renumeration for his services. Three of Lewey's brother patrolmen called on the lawyer and asked him to defend Lewey. They offered to take up a subcription for this purpose, but Sweeney refused to allow them to do so.

Rebellion Petering Out

Altoona, Pa., Oct. 19.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company has issued orders to cut down the force in the Altoona shops 10 percent, which will necessitate the suspension of 800 men.

STARTER MOSTLY TO BLAME

For Electric Car Accident Which Resulted In Loss of Six Lives

Concord, N. H., Oct. 19.—Oral A. Stevens, starter for the Hudson, Pelham and Salem Street Railway company at Pelham, has been named by the New Hampshire railroad commissioners as the man who must bear the largest burden of responsibility for the trolley accident at that place Sept. 6, in which six persons were killed and 72 injured, 12 of them seriously. Conductor Fox and Motorman Knapp of the car which ran past Pelham station are severely criticised, while the crew of the Nashua car, Motorman Hayes, who was killed, and Conductor Venno, were found to have been in no way responsible for the accident.

The report of the commissioners on the investigation made by them into the circumstances surrounding the accident, in addition to placing the responsibility for the accident, includes several recommendations, including a change in the running time on the road and the abolition of curves.

Arrest Which May Stop Robberies

Kingston, Mass., Oct. 19.—By the arrest here of August Begelkey, a rivet maker, the police are confident they have captured one of the gang of burglars who have been operating in this section for several months past. Upon searching Begelkey's premises the officers found silverware and other articles which they believe tend to connect him with nearly all the breaks that have occurred in this vicinity within the past year.

On Trail of Robbers

North Anson, Me., Oct. 19.—The Burns brothers, wanted at Norridgewock for burglary, were seen on the side of Mount Bigelow last night, where they built a fire to dry their clothes. Deputies from Madison and Newport have started for Bigelow, telephoning ahead for relays of horses, and two deputies started down from Flagstaff.

Naval Apprentices Shifted

Newport, R. I., Oct. 19.—Two hundred naval apprentices were transferred today to the training ship Monongahela, now at Portsmouth, and 100 others were sent to the Alliance. This will take away all the boys at this station and give an opportunity to thoroughly fumigate the station and barracks.

Quarrel Ends In Murder

Boston, Oct. 19.—A quarrel which arose from some cause as yet unknown at a house in the Italian section on Merrimac street last night resulted in the death of Alberto Malone and Rosario Bertano is under arrest, charged with the murder. Malone was shot between the eyes and died instantly.

Bumped Into Husband's Corpse

Grafton, Mass., Oct. 19.—Henry Bennett, 58 years old, committed suicide by hanging in his bedroom last evening. While hurrying through the room Mrs. Bennett collided with the dead body of her husband hanging from a nail driven in a wall near the ceiling. Bennett had been in poor health 12 years.

Fishing Vessels Arriving

Boston, Oct. 19.—The fish famine which followed a long period of stormy weather and culminated late last week in sending prices for cod and haddock to a record height, has been broken. Since the closing hour on Saturday a fleet of 14 vessels reached the pier, bringing 165,000 pounds.

Body Long Undiscovered

Whitinsville, Mass., Oct. 19.—The skeleton of a man was found in the woods on the edge of the town of Sutton. The bones were denuded of flesh, but the man's clothing remained on them. The clothing was of such a nature as to indicate that the man died in cold weather.

Pekin, Oct. 19.—The recent episode at the British legation in Pekin, which has been described as an attempt to blow up the legation magazine during a military ball, was in reality the robbery of certain ordnance stores, supposedly by Chinese servants. All the stolen property has been recovered from junk shops, where it was sold by the thieves.

ELIJAH, THE RESTORER

Faces Two Great Audiences In Madison Square Garden

THOUSANDS TURNED AWAY

"Prophet" Failed to Command Interest, However, and a Sudden Exodus Somewhat Disturbs Ceremonies—Calls Down the Press

New York, Oct. 19.—Five thousand persons were turned away from Madison Square Garden Sunday afternoon after all the seats in the building had been filled with a great crowd curious to see John A. Dowie on his first appearance before a New York audience. Fully 14,000 persons were in the Garden when the services began with the processional in which the Zion white-robed choir, to the number of about 600, and the capped and gowned ordained officers of the Christian Catholic church in Zion took part. The procession ascended to the platform where the choir took position behind the pulpit and the officers occupied the places at the sides. Dowie wore the usual white robe with a black robe above it.

The service of prayer opened with the invocation by Dr. Dowie, followed by the singing of a hymn, during which the crowd continued to pour into the Garden. This was followed by the recital of the creed and commandments and the reading of scripture, during which hundreds of persons, having gratified their curiosity to see Dowie, started to leave the hall, causing much confusion. The exodus continued in spite of repeated orders to close the doors, until nearly a third of the audience had departed, many of the vacant seats being filled from the waiting crowd outside.

After order had been somewhat restored Dr. Dowie said: "If this is New York and this is a typical New York congregation I am in the face of a new experience. I think that some of the people who came in must have thought that this was a Buffalo Bill show. I reckon we have learned something and will be prepared hereafter. There will be no more going out of the front door. If any have remained outside let them in. It seems a shame they should not have the seats the Buffalo Bill persons have left." No one entered. "Well, let us keep the quiet audience we have."

Mr. Dowie took his text from the book of Revelations: "Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him and he with me."

Then walking back and forth in front of his pulpit he began: "Eyes have they, yet they see not. Ears have they, yet they hear not. I shall ask the gentlemen of the press to behave and not to talk. I am not one who is concerned much about the audience he speaks to, but I am going to have a quiet audience now, you'd better believe."

"At the last mayoralty election both candidates came to get me to back them up in the fight, and perhaps I might be a help to one side or the other in New York yet. I don't know that I have any business with it, but if I do make up my mind to take a hand in it, you'll know what I mean before I'm through. I have a message for the press tomorrow and I'll give it a lick they'll never forget."

Continuing, he said the churches have let the devil get the women. They have let them go upon the stage and dance and sing. Holding both hands above his head, he cried in an impassioned voice:

"Woman; woman, downtrodden woman. Woman, now perhaps all your beauty gone, if you were the devil's castaway come let him in; above all in New York it is you I want. You who are beyond help, as you think. If you will let Jesus in, I will be repaid for this visitation."

Dr. Dowie filled the Garden last night with an audience which equalled the great throng at the afternoon meeting. As soon as the choir, marching in two columns and singing, reached its destination, Dowie, in a lengthy invocation, implored divine blessing on the mission of the host, on the workers and on the metropolis. The invocation was followed by a hymn. Mrs. Dowie made her first official public appearance when she read from the gospel of St. Mark. Dr. Dowie then made a long prayer.

At the close of the prayer many hundreds of persons left the building. Dr. Dowie again remonstrated with those who were leaving and asked them to do him the courtesy of remaining until the end of the meeting. The subject of the discourse was "Repentance," and Dowie's text was from scriptural passages having reference to the teaching and the promised coming of Elijah.

"In these three passages," said he, referring to his texts, "we have the great and mighty records of the appearances of Elijah, and the promise that he shall come again. Where is the common honesty of modern theologians in not admitting this fact? What theologian is worth his salt who has denied that fact that Elijah must come again. All the authorities agree that Elijah must come again before Christ comes again. He came once as a mighty destroyer, when he called down the fire of Mount Carmel; he came again as John the Baptist, and once more must he come according to the promise of God before the great and terrible day of Jehovah."

AFTER TWO-HOUR SPIN

San Francisco Inventor Drops In Bay With His Flying Machine

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Dr. August Greth, who for a year past has been working on an airship, surprised the residents of San Francisco by sailing over their heads for two hours, directing his machine at will and demonstrating that in many essentials he has solved the problem of aerial navigation.

The ascension was made from a lot almost in the heart of the city. The winds carried him oceanward and for a time he hovered over the vicinity of the Golden Gate, making various successful trials of his steering gear. The currents threatened to take him out over the Pacific and he decided to make a landing on the parade grounds of the presidio military reservation, but made the mistake of letting out too much gas and he landed in the bay about 200 feet from shore. The crew of the live saving station rescued the aeronaut and the flying machine, which was little damaged by the unfortunate termination of the voyage.

The balloon of Greth is cigar-shaped and has a capacity of 50,000 feet of gas, with a lifting capacity of 1800 to 2000 pounds. The engine is a 12-horse power gasolene motor and the total weight carried skyward, including that of the inventor and 260 pounds of ballast, was about 1600 pounds. For some inexplicable reason the motor would not develop more than six-horse power, and Dr. Greth found considerable difficulty in making headway against the current.

LOWELL MILL SITUATION

Indicates That Many Operatives May Have Enforced Vacation

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 19.—For some time there has been a tendency to curtail work in some of the big corporations. The recent shortage of cotton, which caused sad havoc in some of the other mill centres in New England, did not affect Lowell at all, owing to the heavy supplies on hand. The present curtailment does not affect so much cotton mills as it does other industries, and in every case it is attributed to the lack of orders.

In the Bigelow carpet mills during the past fortnight a large proportion of the usual complement of help in some of the departments have been given indefinite vacations. In the Middlesex mills, which are devoted to the manufacture of woolen goods, the hours of labor have been curtailed to 48 hours, while at the Lowell machine shop the various branches of this large concern for the manufacturing of mill machinery are on short time. The curtailment of hours of labor in this corporation serves to indicate the beating of the pulse in most industrial centres in the country, as there is hardly a state in the union in which mills are situated for which they do not manufacture cotton, woolen and other machinery.

"Borrowed" Postoffice Funds

St. Louis, Oct. 19.—On the plea of guilty to having embezzled government funds, Ferridon Vise, former postmaster at Fair Dealing, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary and fined $1050. Vise issued money orders in payment of his personal obligations to the extent of $1942. He said that he had intended to replace the money and was prevented, as his accounts were checked up sooner than he anticipated.

Theatre Goers Got Bad Fright

New York, Oct. 19.—Fifteen hundred patrons of the Metropolis theatre were thrown into a panic last night by the blowing out of a fuse in a moving picture machine. No one was injured, though many persons rushed from the theatre, leaving hats, coats and pocketbooks behind them. The fire was confined to the first balcony, where the explosion took place. The damage was slight.

Failures as Plantation Laborers

Honolulu, Oct. 19.—Steamer Islewerth has left for the Gilbert islands with 200 Gilbert islanders, the last of several thousand imported during the last 24 years for plantation labor. As laborers they have proved unsatisfactory. Many of them are destitute. The expense of chartering the Islewerth is partially borne by private subscription.

May Accept Temple Call

New York, Oct. 19.—Rev. P. S. Henson of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, referred briefly last night in his address to the congregation to the possibility of his receiving a call to the Tremont temple, Boston. The impression made by his remarks was that he would probably accept the call.

Fisherman Sunk In Gale

St. Johns, Oct. 19.—Schooner Dione, with a cargo of codfish, was sunk off the Grand Banks in a gale. One man of the crew was swept overboard and lost. The three remaining men launched the small boat and after rowing for 36 hours managed to make a landing.

Hurricane Visits Nova Scotia

Halifax, Oct. 19.—A heavy southwest storm is raging along the Nova Scotia coast. It is feared that shipping has suffered severely from the hurricane.

Good Afternoon

Are we to have but four candidates for the Legislature this year in the Quincy double district?

If the slump in Steel stock influences the steel bonds, Mr. Carnegie may realize his ambition to die poor.

The Tax Collector of Brockton reports the collection of $383,000 of this year's taxes. Wonder if the Quincy Collector has taken in $83,000!

An automatic scaffold has been invented in Wyoming. The condemned man acts as his own executioner. When he fails to kill himself he will be prosecuted for attempted suicide.

The eight-page Ledger today is altogether too small to accommodate all we planned to publish. News and advertising have crowded us, and readers will find much of interest.

Quincy needs to celebrate just such events as the centennial of the birth of Thomas Crane for several reasons. First, perhaps to stimulate a community interest and local pride; again lest there be ingratitude on our part over such generous bequests as the Crane Memorial Hall, which cost upwards of $60,000; again, that we may more fully appreciate the benefits of a good public library, which last year circulated 99,976 books. We wish we might have published in full all that was said by the Quincy pastors on Sunday relative to Thomas Crane and the Public Library, as they made many good points, but the abstracts on the first page are worth reading.

Drift of Opinion.

☞This is the time when the granolithic sidewalk, with all its many excellent qualities, shows a serious streak of cussedness. It is mighty easy on a damp granolithic walk, covered with wet leaves, to break a leg or strain a tendon. Even the most sure-footed individual is likely to hear some slangy person remark, "He's got a skate on."—New Bedford Standard.

☞We wonder what the opinions of Senator Lodge on reciprocal trade with Canada has to do with the State campaign, which Colonel Gaston proposed to carry forward on State issues. And what has Governor Bates to be held responsible for in the Philippines? For a state campaign that was to be limited to local issues it has spread out pretty well. And the attack on the commission to examine bounties, which expanded into a court of claims, that was exploited as some great and secret raid upon the treasury, that, too, turns out to be an affair of such small proportions that we have probably heard the last of it. Senator Lodge will reach home in season to enlighten Colonel Gaston on some points about which he is a trifle bewildered.—Lynn Item.

LIEUT. BUMPUS

Buried at Mt. Wollaston with Military Honors.

Three Local Clergymen Assist.

Deceased Was Killed at Massacre of Samar.

The burial of Lieut. Edward A Bumpus, who was killed at the Massacre at Samar in the Philippines, Sept. 28, 1901, was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The body arrived in Quincy from the Philippines some weeks ago and has been in the tomb at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. It was taken from the tomb shortly after 2 o'clock, and a large American flag presented by Col. Edward Anderson was draped around it. It was then taken to the open grave where the services were held.

The services were of the simplist form in accordance with the wish of the family. In fact it was a military funeral.

Chief Hayden and a squad of officers arrived on the scene early, and officers were placed on duty on all the avenues leading to the grave.

Aside from the family there was present Col. Edward Anderson, Commander John W. Hersey of Paul Revere Post, 88, G. A. R., a fireing squad from John A. Boyd camp, Legion of Spanish War Veterans under command of Commander George E. Adams, and the following officers of the 9th Infantry who served with the deceased in China and the Philippines Capt. F. L. Palmer, Capt. M. L. Hersey, Lieut. J. P. Drouillard, Lieut. F. R. Laing, Lieut. G. W. Wallace, and Lieut. E. T Smith.

The casket draped with the American flag was surrounded by flowers, and on it was the sword worn by the young officer. The granite memorial near at hand erected some months ago was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and asparagus vine, and in the center was a wreath of laurel.

The services opened with a prayer by Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, followed by the reading of the commital service by Rev. William E. Gardner.

Three volleys were fired by the firing squad composed of Commander George E. Adams; Senior Vice Commander D. B. Smith; Junior Vice Commander T. C. Brown; Adjutant George A. Wardwell; Officer of the Watch H. J. Matthews; Officer of the Guard J. V. Meade; Quartermaster J. W. Fitzgerald; Paymaster G. H. Phillips; Color Sergeants P. J. Sheahan and M. Gardner.

Taps were sounded by bugler Qualey. The sword was then handed to Judge Bumpus and the heavy cedar metallic casket was lowered into the ground.

COUNCIL DOCKET.

Atlantic School Lot, Dynamite Ordinance, and a Hearing.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held tonight, and the chances are that the question of a school house lot at Atlantic will be aired. Councilman Piper will probably present the resolutions passed at the meeting at Music Hall, Atlantic, last Wednesday.

The Committee on Ordinances will report on the order for the purchase of the Faxon road lot, and it will be up to the Council.

There will be a public hearing on laying out Sea avenue.

The Committee on Public Buildings will report an order for repairing the wall back of the Wollaston school.

The Committee on Ordinances will report on the amendment to the ordinance relative to the carting of dynamite and explosives, and on the petition prohibiting the use of sling shots and air guns in public streets.

The Committee on Finance have a large number of orders before them, and they will make reports upon some of them.

PERFECT DRAINAGE.

Opinion of an Expert on the Blackwell Lot at Atlantic.

Editors of the Ledger:

In regard to the Blackwell lot as a site for the proposed schoolhouse at Atlantic, a suggestion has been made by a correspondent of your paper of a possible difficulty as to foundation and drainage. The following certificate from Mr. Theodore Parker, an experienced civil engineer in the employ of the City of Boston, a thoroughly competent and trustworthy authority, will be of interest to the City Council, and to the general public.

Atlantic, Mass., Oct. 19, 1903.

To whom it may concern:

I hereby certify that I have examined the block of land, lying between Sagamore street and Walker place, bounded on the westerly side by Prospect street, and I find that a building similar to the Massachusetts Field schoolhouse, would, if put upon this lot, have the bottom of its cellar not lower than the grade of sidewalk of Sagamore street, and consequently would be free from water and capable of perfect drainage. The foundation would be of gravel. The depth of the lot from Sagamore street to Walker place is precisely the same as that of the Massachusetts Field school and its frontage would be 265 feet on Sagamore street. No piling under foundation would be needed.

Theodore Parker, Civil Engineer.

Only a Furnace Fire.

The alarm from Box 26 at 9.55 Saturday night was needless, having been rung in by someone who saw smoke issuing from the basement windows of the First church. The sexton, William Dewhurst, had started a fire in the furnace, but owing to the dampness of the chimney it would not draw and the smoke came out into the room. Thinking that someone would see the smoke and ring an alarm he turned on the electric lights so that it could be seen that someone was there. The party who rang the alarm did not stop to investigate the cause of the smoke but gave the alarm.

For years she has been prominent in Woman's Relief Corps, her late husband having been a veteran of the Civil war. The W. R. C. will attend services in a body tomorrow at Bethany church and the full W. R. C. service will be performed. Mrs. Pratt was a member of the Creed family of Cohasset.

The Atlantic School Lot Problem.

To the Editor of Quincy Ledger:

It appears that at the meeting held in Music hall, Atlantic, on Wednesday evening to protest the taking of the Squantum street lot for school purposes that some of the speakers were misinformed, or to say the least, spoke without sufficient knowledge of the subject to make it safe for them to instruct others. Now as a matter of fact a petition, does not always represent intelligent public opinion. People sign petitions because they are asked to do so and for various other reasons other than the subject matter in the petition.

In this case, one person did not know where the lot was situated, and another said she did not know why she signed except that "she was asked to do so." The principal argument of most of the speakers at that meeting was that the city was asked to pay fifteen (15) cents per foot for land taxed for only two (2) cents. This statement will bear looking into a little more deeply than was apparently done at that meeting.

Now, if a farmer owned a valuable trotting horse and also a mule, he would if he were a sensible man, hardly be willing to sell the trotter for one-half the value of the two combined, yet most of the said speakers apparently, would do so if they had the opportunity or would expect to buy on that same basis. Now it seems that this lot contains something over a million feet as stated. The city proposes to take some 73,000 feet of the best, by far of this land, (practically take the apple and leave the core). It will take about, say one-fourteenth of the whole area, but it will also take in this one-fourteenth part, probably two-thirds (2-3) of its entire value as far as present values are concerned. Now it is not supposed that the intelligent men who represent Quincy in her city government do not know, after months of investigation, the value of the land to be taken possibly a little better than a casual observer, or at least of one who has not observed at all, or knows nothing about the subject.

Not to put the new building in a prominent location with plenty of land on all sides when the opportunity is offered to do so, at the same outlay as for a less prominent and desirable locality would, to say the least be a want of foresight that will surely be self-evident before many years have passed. It must be borne in mind that the school building is to be erected not entirely for its use today, but with a sensible view to its use by future generations, when it may be, the majority of the signers of the Atlantic petition will have passed to "the Great Beyond." THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

Fixed According to United States' Contention

CANADA WINS ONE POINT

By Decision That She Is Entitled to Portland Canal—Rich Gold Fields Remain Under Our Flag—Dominion Feels That She Has Not Much to Be Thankful For

London, Oct. 19.—The Alaska boundary commission has reached an agreement whereby all the American contentions are sustained with the exception of those in relation to the Portland canal, which Canada wins.

All that now remains to be done is for the commissioners to affix their signatures to the decision and complete the map which will accompany it. On the map will be marked the boundary line definitely fixing the division of American and British territory on such a basis that no American citizen will lose a foot of land he already believed he held, while the United States will get all the waterways to the rich Alaskan territory with the exception of the Portland canal, which gives Canada the one outlet she so much needed.

The long standing dispute was only settled after a week of keen, trying, secret deliberation between the arbitrators. Lord Alverstone, though openly inclined to believe in the justice of the American argument, that the United States was entitled to the heads of the inlets, as contained in question five, held out that Canada had established her case in questions two and three, dealing with the Portland canal.

Senator Lodge, Secretary Root and Senator Turner agreed to cede those points, and to start the American boundary line from the head of the Portland canal, thus giving the Canadians that channel and some small islands on which there are only a few disused storehouses. This accomplished, the majority of the tribunal agreed to fix, with this exception, the entire boundary as outlined in the American case.

Whether Aylesworth and Jette, the Canadian commissioners, will refuse to sign the decision and make it unanimous, is not yet known. But it will not affect the validity of the agreement if a minority report is submitted. The commissioners themselves are still bound to secrecy until the decision is actually rendered, and practically few others were really aware how great a degree of success had attended the efforts of the American members of the tribunal.

The principal matter at issue in the Alaska boundary case was possession of a large tract on the Klondike gold field borderline, in which the cities of Dyea and Skagway are embraced. These places, settled by pioneer gold hunters from the United States, have been under American control by the terms of the modus vivendi. The technical form in which the question came up was the interpretation to be put on two French words, "crete" (referring to the summit or crest of a mountain range), and "lisiere" (strip of coast), as used in the treaty of 1825 between Great Britain and Russia establishing boundaries.

The treaty provided that wherever the "crete of the mountains, which extend in a direction parallel to the coast from the 56th degree north latitude to the point of intersection of the 141st degree west longitude, should prove to be at a distance of more than 10 marine leagues from the ocean, the boundary between possessions should be formed by a line parallel to the windings of the coast, and which should never exceed the distance of 10 marine leagues therefrom."

According to the contention of the United States, "coast" meant the water line of the main land. There lies along this coast, however, a chain of islands, inclosing a sort of shoestring waterway. Canada's desire was to measure the "10 marine leagues" from the outer coast line of these islands. Measuring from the coast of the mainland, the United States would carry the line inland, following the contour of bays and inlets to their heads.

A British contention was that the line should follow the "general trend," and, therefore, lie across such bays and inlets 30 miles (10 marine leagues) from their entrance.

The treaty submitting the boundary dispute to a commission for determination was signed at Washington on Jan. 24, 1903, between Secretary Hay and Sir Michael Herbert, as ambassador of Great Britain. It was ratified by the senate on Feb. 11, although a little opposition was expressed from the northwestern coast states to allowing the matter to go to arbitration.

The commission held its first meeting in London on Sept. 3. Arguments were concluded week before last. Last week was consumed in executive session considering the verdict.

Cold Comfort For Canada

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The Canadian government has not yet received any official notification of the proposed decision in the Alaska boundary case. If the Portland canal is to remain in Canadian territory there is a feeling in official circles that the dominion has not much to be thankful for. Canada, in holding the Portland canal, retains Wales and Pearse islands, which overlook Port Simpson. It would be inconvenient to have lost these islands, but as they were clearly marked on Vancouver's map as being in Canada, it is difficult to see how this could have been done. North of Port Simpson Canada will have no harbor or no outlet on the Pacific coast from the Yukon gold fields.

During the discussion of a fast Atlantic steamship service in the house of commons Mr. Gourley of Nova Scotia took occasion incidentally to refer to the decision in the Alaska boundary case. He said:

"If the news is correct, and I hope it is not, all that the United States has got to do is to make a claim for Canada and they will get it by boastfulness and dishonest effort. If it is true we might as well throw away our national aspirations. The last two generations of Englishmen were degenerates and cowards. They have had no leader since Pitt died. Thank God Chamberlain is galvanizing them and putting new blood in them."

Mr. Ross of Cape Breton protested against speaking about Englishmen in this way, and Gourley retorted that they went around with blinders on, unfit to drive sheep across the country.

All That We Wanted

Washington, Oct. 19.—Secretary Hay has received a cablegram from London announcing that the Alaskan boundary commission expects to hand down a formal decision today. The contention of the United States regarding the Portland canal was the weakest part of the American case and the strongest point in the Canadian contention. It is but a minor detail of the controversy. The main point of the Canadian contention involved the outlet from the Klondike gold fields at the head of Lynn canal, including the ports of Skagway and Dyea, through which the Klondike business is transacted. These ports remain American territory.

The decision of the boundary commission, rendered along the lines indicated, will be a complete victory for the United States. State department officials are naturally profoundly gratified that an agreement has been reached favorable to the American contention.

Bandits Cheated of Their Prey

Butte, Mont., Oct. 19.—Two masked mounted men rode up to the station at Welch's Spur and, covering the operator, F. H. Law, aged 20, with their revolvers, drove him inside his office and locked him in. They turned to the signal light so as to stop an express which was due in half an hour. Law, threatened with death if he moved, crawled on his hands and knees to his telegraph key and reaching from under the table wired the operator at Homestake to tell the engineer of the express not to stop, as the bandits meant to hold up the train at Welch's Spur. The train went through the latter place at 40 miles an hour and the bandits then rode off. A posse has taken the trail.

Schooner In Sad Distress

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Captain Nielsen of the steamship Haverford, from Liverpool, reports having fallen in with the coasting schooner Rubie and Bessie, with all on board in a weakened condition from lack of food. Captain Marshall of the schooner said he sailed from Georgetown, S. C., on Sept. 17 for Patchogue, L. I. Besides his crew he had with him his wife, four children and a passenger. Adverse winds drove the schooner out of her course and sails were lost in gales. The entire party had been without food for four day Captain Nielsen furnished Captain Marshall with supplies and the schooner set her course for her destination.

The Edelsons to Return

Montreal, Oct. 19.—E. J. Edelson, J. H. Edelson, R. Edelson and Mrs. E. J. Edelson of Chicago, arrested here on a charge of defrauding their creditors in Chicago of about $20,000, have consented to waive extradition proceedings and will return to Chicago. They have given up all that remains of the cash they brought into Canada, $13,345. They had paid $1400 for a bakery in this city and $1000 had been expended in purchasing a half interest in a real estate agency.

Insurance Agent Murdered

Portsmouth, O., Oct. 19.—Edward Test, local agent for an Industrial Insurance company, was dragged from the house of Mrs. McCullum, where he had called to collect a premium, by two men and was terribly beaten and shot to death. Rufus Burchum and Moses Johnson are charged with the murder. The men, it is alleged, were intoxicated and had been quarrelling with Mrs. McCullum, and supposed Test was a friend of the woman.

Decapitated by Electricity

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 19.—The storms of last week washed the earth from about an electric light pole and caused it to fall. The wires were lying close to the ground. Melvin Basselego was out hunting for a lost cow and encountered the fallen wires. He touched one of them, was shocked into insensibility and, falling with his neck across one of the wires, was gradually decapitated.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

COLUMBIA THEATRE.

"The Runnaways" will be the next offering at the Columbia theatre, Boston, commencing tonight, October 19, and the great star of the production of course is Fay Templeton, who appears in the role of Josie May, the opera queen. To describe Miss Templeton's art is a very difficult matter, as this gifted woman stands in a niche by herself in American stage history. The joy of becoming a star came late in Miss Templeton's life, but with much more justice than in many other instances where unwise managers have forced women into starhood when they were hardly out of babyhood. The engagement is for four weeks and there will be matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the week of Oct. 19 another big vaudeville show is scheduled at Keith's, with another European act as the featured attraction. The latter is the much advertised Amoros-Werner troupe of comedy pantomimists and jugglers, said to be the best of their class who have ever visited America. The ball juggling between two of the men is said to be exceedingly skilful and ridiculously funny. At the conclusion of their act about every property on the stage is destroyed. Will M.Cressey and Blanche Dayne, in one of their rural comedy creations; the Molasso troupe of whirlwind dancers from Paris; Reed's troupe of trained Boston terriers, and Mr. and Mrs. Thorne in the ridiculous farce, "An Uptown Flat," are among the entertainers of prominence who will contribute to the program. George Primrose, the former minstrel king, assisted by the famous Foley Twins, in singing and dancing specialties, is underlined for the week of Oct. 26.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The fourth and last week but one of the phenomenally successful engagement "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Boston theatre will commence this evening and the heavy advance sales indicate a continuation of the crowded attendances which have prevailed during the first three weeks. "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is deserving of the name of rural comedy; the husking bee scene, alone would win fame for the drama for its exactness in minute particulars. Nothing like the succes of this popular play has been known at the Boston Theatre in years. Night after night, this theatre with the largest seating capacity in the country is filled and many are turned away unable to gain even admittance. There are but few more opportunities for witnessing this interesting drama, as the engagement is limited and seats should be obtained well in advance to avoid disappointment.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The brilliant comedy "Sowing the Wind," by Sydney Grundy, makes the Castle Square attraction this week and this representative dramatic creation of its author will be a notable addition to the season's repertoire at this theatre. Originally produced at the Comedy Theatre, London, ten years ago, it quickly gained favor with American audiences, holding its place in repertoire of the best theatres for many years. In securing it for presentation at popular prices the Castle Square management again shows considerable enterprise. "Sowing the Wind" is of the period of 1830, and the story deals mainly with the events in the life of a retired gentleman, who, having opposed the union of his adopted son with a young vocal artist of spotless reputation, is suddenly brought to face the fact that the young lady is his own child. Much of the merit of the play is found in the brilliant dialogue used by the author in developing his plot. The usual distribution of souvenir boxes of chocolate bon bons will be made at the matinee today.

PARK THEATRE.

On visiting the Park Theatre in Boston, one wonders after seeing it why Charles Frohman, Rich and Harris, who are now the lessees and managers, did not apply the term NEW to it. Certainly it is that in every respect. It is easy to understand that they spent a large sum of money in remodelling the house. The theatre is now as fine as any in the city and it has taken on a new lease of life. The attraction now there is one exactly suited to the house and it is playing to business that fills the pretty theatre at every performance.

Charles Frohman has given to Annie Russell, who is now at the Park, in "Mice and Men," a play in every way suited to this dainty woman's personality and nothing but praise is heard of her charming performance. Long ago Robert Burns wrote something about "the best laid schemes o' mice and men," and it is about this fragment from his familiar poem that Mrs. Madeline Lucette Ryley has built the framework of her drama.

Prominent in the support is Mrs. Gilbert, who has the distinction of being the oldest living actress now on the stage, and John Mason, a long and valued member of the Boston Museum Stock Company. During the engagement of Miss Russell the Wednesday matinee will be omitted.

—The removal of the feminine bonnet during divine service is a question in church ethics that may yet be decided on its own merits and without reference to its success in the theatre. The absent bonnet has certainly increased the pleasure of theatre going; but is one supposed to attend church in order to look at the minister? And for that matter, is it not almost an established axiom that a great many persons have been led to church in order to look at the bonnets?

TO UPLIFT CRIMINALS.

The New British Home Secretary Plans a Great Work.

With the exception of those who are taking the chief parts in the so called "fiscal controversy" now raging in England no member of the British cabinet has been more talked of lately than the recently appointed home secretary, the Right Hon. Aretas Akers-Douglas, says the London correspondent of the Washington Post. In his capacity as head of the department of the government which deals with criminals Mr. Akers-Douglas recently laid before parliament a scheme regarding the treatment of wrongdoers which, he hopes, will solve a problem that has been for years agitating the minds of his predecessors. He is going to try to reform the criminal classes so as to make them both within and without the prison citizens. Hitherto prisoners, irrespective of their antecedents, who were sentenced to penal servitude—that is, any term involving confinement for over two years—were put to such unprofitable occupations as picking oakum or breaking stones. The secretary feels that all prisoners are not hopeless cases; hence his new scheme.

Young men serving their first period are to be kept under special observation, and if it is found that the criminal instinct is not strongly developed in them they will be taught some useful trade, which may help them to become respectable citizens on their release. Habitual criminals will also be put to some useful occupation by which they will no longer be a burden on the taxpayer, and if they show no disposition to reform they will be kept in prison for an indefinite period. This feature of the scheme is drastic because it will need a special act of parliament to put it into operation.

Fashions In Furs.

It is time to begin to think of your furs for the winter season. Last season squirrel was a strong rage. It will not be discarded this season, says the New York Evening Journal. Chinchilla fur will be seen a great deal. Possessors of sailskin should feel cheerful, as this fur is to be most fashionable, especially in the shape of boleros with pelerine collars and as carriage wraps mixed with sables. Another style of carriage wrap is full length, having a sort of compromise between the Japanese sleeve and the 1830 pelerine for a sleeve. Sable and ermine are beautiful in this wrap. The moleskin fur is to be worn. The Eton cape of astrakhan or chinchilla must not be forgotten, as it is quite new and modish.

Urges Use of Wicker Work Coffins.

Dr. C. A. Lindley of New Haven, Conn., secretary of the state board of health and professor emeritus in Yale Medical college, at a meeting of the Medical association the other day urged the adoption of wicker work coffins instead of metallic caskets, says the Chicago Record-Herald, so as to insure a quicker decomposition of the dead and absorption by the soil, which, after a suitable time, would be again fit for use.

Plan to Increase British Trade.

A project is in course of development for a floating exhibition of British industries which is to make a tour of the British empire, says the London Globe. A specially chartered ship will be fitted up and sent on a protracted voyage, and by this means it is hoped that the claims of British manufacturers will be literally "brought home" to the colonies in all parts of the world.

Danger In Mussels.

In some parts of Europe much more commonly than in this country mussels are used as food. They have been quite frequently noted as poisonous, and fatal cases have been reported from using them cooked as well as raw.

Labor Statistics.

Massachusetts in 1869 was the first state to establish a bureau of labor statistics.

Old Age Teeth.

At the postmortem examination on a Bosnian woman who died at the age of 106 years it was found that she had grown fresh teeth during the last year of her life.

Poultry.

Some poultry men treat their fowls as if they were buzzards or something of that sort and feed them any kind of old spoiled food. Fowls treated in this manner are liable to become diseased. Keep the food troughs and feeding pens clean.

Economic Entomology.

Economic entomology is that branch of the science which, looking beyond the mere collection and classification of insects, has to do with the control of those which injuriously affect agricultural products.

The Orchard.

Do not deem it a waste of labor to give the orchard attention before it comes into years of bearing, for during its early years of growth the care is most needed.

Tabby Cat.

The term "tabby cat" is derived from Atab, a famous street in Bagdad inhabited by the manufacturers of silken stuff called atibi or taffeta. This stuff is woven with waved markings of watered silk resembling a tabby cat's coat.

Chinese Cities.

What strikes one most in Chinese cities is the density of population on the smallest possible area. The Chinese crowd each other like ants in an ant hill and bees in their hive. Stores and workshops are also eating and sleeping quarters, except in that part of the city inhabited by Caucasians. The dirt and stench are frightful.

CITY BREVITIES.

The new timetables of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and also the Old Colony street railway appear in this issue.

John McDonald and family are to move from Liberty to Bennington street to the house recently purchased by them from G. H. Field.

The motormen and conductors of the street railway will attend a meeting of instruction tonight at Wilson's hall. They will be addressed by prominent officials of the company.

Mrs. Mary Thomas of Granite street who underwent an operation at St. Margarets hospital, Boston, on Monday last, is reported as very comfortable and improving wonderfully.

Hon. Russell A. Sears entertained the law department of the Boston Elevated railroad at his pretty residence on Adams street on Saturday. The party took a trooley ride through the Blue Hills and then came to Quincy.

The Quincy schools had a partial holiday today most of the scholars being recipients of complimentary tickets to the fair in Mechanics building, Boston. The day was made pleasant for all.

A petition has been received by the Selectmen of Weymouth, for endorsement of the board, asking that better street car accommodations be furnished the people of North Weymouth and Quincy Point. The petition, which was largely signed, set forth the crowded condition of the cars at certain times of the day.

The young ladies of the M. G. R. club reorganized Friday evening. They met at the home of Miss Charlotte Turner, Hill street, Quincy Point and elected new officers for the coming year. Miss Gertrude Foster, president, Miss Elizabeth G. Scouler, vice president, Miss Lulu Crowley, treasurer, and Miss Charlotte Turner, secretary. All members were present numbering ten. Miss Turner served a dainty lunch which was enjoyed by all. They adjourned shortly after nine.

THIN PEOPLE

want to get fat and fat people want to get thin—human nature. If you are fat don't take Scott's Emulsion. It will make you gain flesh. If you are thin Scott's Emulsion is just what you need.

It is one of the greatest flesh producers known. Not temporary gains but healthy, solid flesh that will fill out the body where it is needed.

There's nothing better than Scott's Emulsion for weakness and wasting.

Scott's Emulsion is a food-medicine; not a stimulant; not a mere "extract" or so-called "wine" of cod liver oil. It contains the whole oil perfectly emulsified, which is the only way of preserving its valuable properties.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

THE UNITY CLUB

Open the Season at Wollaston with a Pleasing Reception.

The reception given Friday evening Oct. 16, by the Unity club brought out an attendance of 135. The vestry was never more tastefully decorated, with autumn flowers, Japanese lanterns, hangings and attractive corners. Charming effects were produced changing the room into an ideal Japanese parlor.

The tea room was the centre of attraction, presided over by the following young ladies attractively gowned in Japanese costumes: Misses Eugenia Hatch, Grace Bishop, Marion Hatch, Helen Barnes, Margaret Barnes, Beulah Hatch, Gertrude Waterhouse, Corrine Barbour, Helen Sprague, Mollie Brown, Margery Fay and Mrs. Burleigh. Miss Eugenia Hatch wore a beautiful Chinese costume embroidered in gold and rich colors.

President Curtis was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Curtis and Miss Elizabeth H. Thayer. The guests were presented by Misses Mollie Brown, Helen Sprague, Helen Barnes and Margaret Barnes. Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett contributed a Japanese love song, by Clayton Thomas, which was received with much enjoyment. The "Jeta Saba" Mandolin club, composed of Messrs. Albert Armstrong, Ernest Armstrong and John Simmons entertained the company with "Sporty Maid," Pepeela and other selections.

After an hour and a half of social intercourse President Curtis called the meeting to order, and in his address of welcome said the officers had practically completed their work and now hand the program to all members full of confidence that it will be developed according to the high Unity club standard of the past ten years.

He said when the committee and officers met to select a program it was not found that there was any unity of thought upon any special line of action to follow, so that they had to put their ears to the ground to catch the popular wish. Thus there are but few radical changes made from former customs.

No plans have been made to amuse this year, but the committee hope to please all with music and instruct with their papers. To do more would add a greater weight than the club could continue to carry. Then again as there is a tendency of the interest to lag at the end of the year it was thought best to omit the April meetings, and of the banquet not a word is said.

In choosing the subject "Japan" this year President Curtis thought the choice might be made a fitting sequel to last year's work, and that it was entirely consistent to step from a consideration of man in the abstract to a concrete examples of an interesting and remarkable type of man, the Japanese. He said by considering the varied topics as history, literature, art and science, and sub-divisions of all these, that the winter's work could be made as broad as one desired, and he hoped all would take the broad view of the subject Also that the salient points of history be brought out, rather than a confused procession of events, so that at the end a clear perspective view of the Japanese can be had, and the secret of her miraculous transformation, her adoption of modern civilization in one generation can be learned.

In conclusion, President Curtis said a fact came to him recently, through medical channels, that would be well to bear in mind. "Recent comparative studies of the Japanese brain have shown that it is second to none other in relative brain weight."

Refreshments of cake and tea were served by the young ladies in costume.

The committee and assistants have occasion to be pleased with the result of their labors in producing such an artistic reception room. They were Mrs. Record, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Barbour, Miss Eugenia Hatch, Miss Elizabeth Thayer, Miss Gertrude Waterhouse and Mrs. Gurney.

All present appreciated the kindness of Mr. Walter Hatch for the use of his choice Japanese things.

The programs have an artistic cover of Japanese rice paper.

GUN DISCHARGED.

And Arthur Moorehead Was Instantly Killed.

Arthur Moorehead, recently employed at the Wollaston depot, was accidentally shot and killed, Friday, Oct. 16, while gunning in the woods near South Marshfield.

Moorehead, with Frank Dwelley, returned from the beach in a buggy, stopping near the South river woods to hunt. Dwelley went into the woods to scare up game, and had gone but a short distance when he heard the report of a gun. Thinking it peculiar that Moorehead should shoot from the buggy he ran back just in time to see the horse on the run. He saw his companion tumble headlong out of the vehicle, dead.

Moorehead was shot through the side, and it is supposed his gun was accidentally discharged while he was examining it.

Moorehead worked a few years at Wollaston as a a telegraph operator for the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. About a year and a half ago he received a considerable legacy. He married a Wollaston young woman a year ago, bought a place at South Marshfield and began farming. His wife was nearly prostrated by the news. His parents have been dead several years.

PERFECT HEALTH for 25 CENTS.

Chas. C. Hearn Tells How to Get Well for This Small Sum.

I want to say just a few words on the causes of sickness, and how to get well. Constipation and dyspepsia are responsible for more suffering than all of the other diseases combined. I have been selling, for the past few months, a medicine that has made many remarkable cures,—"Dr. Howard's Specific" for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia. This was introduced at half price, but the sale having been so remarkable, they have decided to make 25c the regular price in the future, and I am glad to say that I shall be able to continue to sell 60 doses of the best Specific in the world for the small sum of a quarter of a dollar, and guarantee to return the money if the remedy does not cure.

Dr. Howard's Specific is not a "cure-all." It is simply intended to cure constipation and dyspepsia, and it will do it; if it does not I will refund the money on your simple say so. Each package contains 60 doses of the most reliable and successful medicine in the world.

I shall expect to have my sales on this Specific doubled within the next two months. Tell your friends that they can get well for a quarter of a dollar, without running any risk of losing their money. Oct. 19, 21, 22

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Patrons of the Boston Grand Opera House will have an excellent attraction next week in the sensational melodrama, "The King of Detectives." In this play which has been enormously successful wherever it has been presented, there are many thrilling and ensational |feature. An audience admires as hero who has to fight against odds, and yet wins his way—not by impossible efforts of the ordinary heros of fiction—but by the use of brains, cunning and strength, and in a manner that is not only probable but entirely logical. Mr. James Pearce, the detective is well fitted for the role having had experience in real life in that capacity while covering Police Headquarters on a New York paper. The usual matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Carpetings, Rugs and Mattings.

If we had costly Boston rents to pay, we wouldn't be selling floor coverings at our low prices. Highest Grade Mattings for instance we sell at 35 cents. The same mattings are retailed in Boston's largest Department stores at 50 cents.

This is only an illustration, you can see for yourself if you will but take the time. Some folks take it for granted that whatever price a Boston Store asks, must be right. Shrewd buyers trade here for everything in the House Furnishing line. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you.

CITY COUNCIL

Receive Atlantic Resolutions Relative to School Lot.

Also Another Big Petition.

Efforts to Get Report on High School Order.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held Monday evening. It was attended by a large number of citizens, the majority of whom came from Atlantic to see what disposition was made of the school lot question.

Councilman Cleverly and Whiton were absent.

THE MILTON LINE.

Mayor Bryant sent a communication from the Selectmen of Milton relative to preambulating on Oct 24, the boundary line between Quincy and Milton. Laid on the table until later when an order was adopted.

A TRANSFER.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Chief Engineer relative to a transfer in the appropriations for that department.

Later an order was offered transferring $400 from fire alarm to horse shoeing and keeping. To joint Committee on Finance and Fire Department.

POLLING PLACES.

Communications were received from the Socialists asking for polling places for caucuses Nov. 6. Order adopted.

The Democrats asked for polling places for caucuses Nov. 5. Order adopted.

PETITIONS.

Several petitions for minor licenses were received and referred.

A petition for lights on Merrymount road was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Telephone Co. petitioned for permission to attach wires to poles of other companies, and for the relocation of one pole on Goffe street. To Committee on Streets.

The Electric Light Co. petitioned for a location for one pole on Clark street. To Committee on Streets.

A petition was received asking for the acceptance of Nightingale avenue. To Committee on streets.

ATLANTIC RESOLUTIONS.

Councilman Piper presented the resolutions passed at the school lot meeting in Atlantic last week, remonstrating against the Faxon road lot and favoring the Sagamore street lot. Placed on file.

A petition was received from 341 residents of Ward Six, protesting "against the purchase of the Sagamore street lot for school purposes." Placed on file.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Public Buildings reported favorable on the order for $300 for rebuilding the wall back of the Wollaston school. To Committee on Finance.

HOUGHS NECK FIRE STATION.

The joint Committee on Finance and Fire Department reported a substitute order on the matter of equipping the Houghs Neck fire station, changing the amount from $3,000 to $500, to be used for purchasing a horse, harness and ladders for the hose wagon.

Councilman Meyer moved order be recommitted. The $500 would be a waste of money. The great difficulty is the lack of equipment. The matter has come to a point where it is impossible to place insurance on buildings used for public places, and the rates for houses are high. The Committee meeting was not largely attended and the matter is not understood. The motion prevailed.

$6,000 FOR PAVING.

The Committee on Finance reported an amendment to the order for $6,000 paving a portion of Willard street relative to borrowing money. Amendment adopted.

Councilman Hughes moved the suspension of the rules. If work was to be done this year, order should be passed tonight.

Councilman Langelier opposed. This was probably put in with the idea that Ward Six will not get its school lot this year. We are near debt limit. The Mayor vetoed a sidewalk order that it be postponed until the High school and Ward Six lot were taken care of. If this goes through it will bring us so near debt limit that Ward Six will not get lot.

Councilman Reardon was surprised at the statement made. There was no treet in the city in such a disgraceful condition as this street at the present time. No street in Quincy is more travelled than is Willard street. The Committee is in favor of it. What difference will two weeks make to the Council?

Councilman Nickerson spoke in favor of the Willard street order.

The motion to suspend the rules was passed.

The order was then passed to be ordained.

The Committee on Finance reported ought not to pass on the order of 1902 for paving Willard street. Accepted.

At this point a public hearing was held on laying out and acceptance of Sea avenue.

W. H. Mears spoke in favor. He thought people required it. In reply to questions, he said the acceptance was not asked for the purpose of getting street lights. He did not know the value of abutting property. There were about fifty house lots.

Another gentleman who owned property on proposed street spoke in favor. At times it was in a dangerous condition on account of water and mud. In the spring it was unsafe.

Hearing closed and the order was recommitted.

OTHER REPORTS.

The Finance Committee reported favorable on the order laying out Penn street. Rules suspended and order passed.

The Committee on Finance reported ought not to pass on order for $700 for Prospect street. Report accepted.

The Committee on Finance reported ought not to pass on order for $1200 for draining School street. Report accepted.

ABUTTERS AGAINST.

The Committee on Finance reported ought not to pass on order for $700 for sidewalk on Washington court and Curtis avenue.

Councilman Nichols did not understand the report. The Street Committee investigated the matter. They have been very conservative in recommending only such matters as seemed urgent.

Councilman Nickerson said things had changed. The abutters of Washington court do not want to pay for the sidewalk, and the representatives of ward said it was just as well to go over to next year.

The Commissioner of Public Works, in reply to questions, said he had done some of the work that he expected to do under the sidewalk order. He had been obliged to do some of the work contemplated under this order. The edgestones could be put in as cheap next year as now.

Report accepted.

OTHER REPORTS.

The Committee on Finance reported an order transferring $75 from the appropriation for printing and advertising for the City Clerk to printing and advertising for the Tax Collector.

The Committee on Finance reported orders refunding tax titles of $60.04 to Edith Plympton, $10.75 to Annie M. Kelley, $52, and $14 to Harlow H. Rogers. Adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order crediting the Park Department with $50 received from pasturage. Adopted.

The Committee on Finance reported an order for $128.65 to pay board of Lydia J. Copland at the Taunton Hospital. Took second reading.

The Committee on Finance reported an order authorizing the City Treasurer to pay the Swedish Lutheran church on Granite street $52.26, one-half cost of sidewalk. Ordered to second reading.

The same committee also offered an order authorizing the Treasurer to pay $54.23 to F. J. Pierson, one-half cost of permanent sidewalk on Granite street. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Ordinances reported on ordinance prohibiting the use of sling shots and air guns. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Ordinances reported favorable on the order amending the ordinance relative to carting explosives, so that teams shall have sign "Dangerous" in three-inch block letters, and that buildings used for storing it shall be half a mile distance from each other. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Licenses reported favorable on a number of petitions for minor licenses. Adopted.

ATLANTIC SCHOOL LOT.

The Committee on Ordinance reported correctly engrossed the order for $7,600 for purchase of Faxon Road school lot for a school house.

Upon motion of Councilman Gassett the report was laid on the table.

Councilman Gassett moved that the joint committee on Finance and Public Buildings give a public hearing to the residents of Ward Six on the school lot.

Councilman Nichols moved an amendment that bearing be before the City Council.

President Alden stated that he did not desire to preside at the hearing, and it would be better to have it before a committee.

Councilman Langelier opposed amendment. If held in City Hall hearing would not be largely attended. The convenience of people should be consulted.

Councilman Nichols thought as petitions were presented to the City Council that Council should give the hearing. The criticism that order had passed to second reading without an opposing vote was of no significance, as it was seldom an order was debated at that stage.

Councilman Nickerson did not believe hearings would amount to anything.

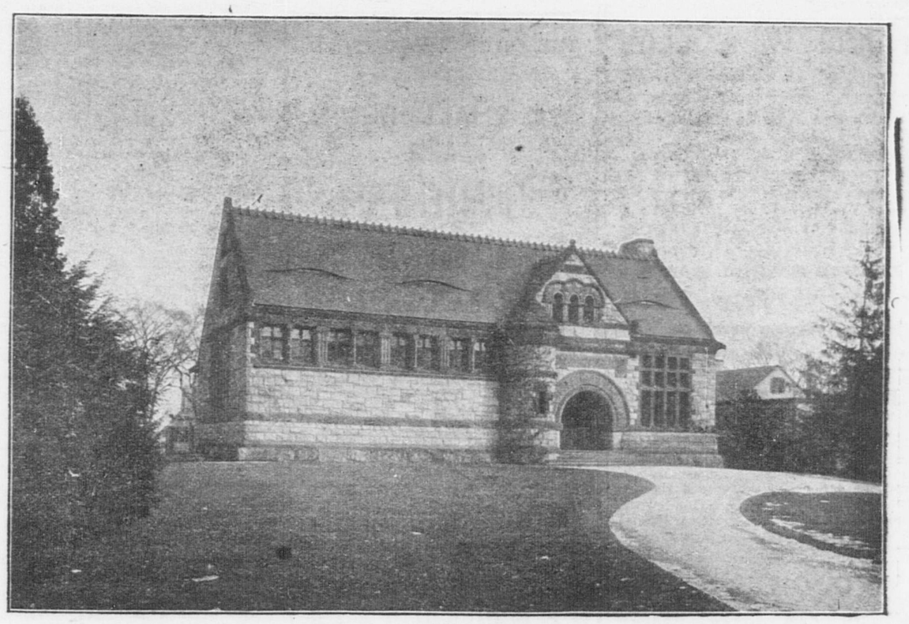
Centennial Anniversary Gift From Son of Thomas Crane.



THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

WILL ENLARGE

The Already Entensive Public Library Grounds.

Quincy Hotel Site Purchased.

A Benefit to the City, the Library, and the Hospital.

Mr. Albert Crane, son of the late Thomas Crane, donor of Quincy's handsome public library building, has again shown his kindly interest of the city by purchasing what is known as the Quincy Hotel property on Washington street, situated between the Thomas Crane Public Library and the property of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., which it is understood he will present to the city as a part of the Public Library grounds.

Some time ago Mr. Crane purchased the Joseph T. French estate. The building was moved away and the land regraded on a level with the library property, of which it is now a part.

The recent purchase of the Quincy Hotel property and the eventual regrading of the lot will make an added improvement and when completed will make one of the most beautiful spots of the city.

It is understood that the old hotel building will be either torn down or moved away as soon as the papers are passed.

The property purchased consists of 25,680 feet of land and the buildings thereon and was owned by the Quincy City Hospital Corporation.

The Assessors' valuation of the property this year is: land, $12,800; buildings, $4,500. It is understood the purchase price was $18,000.

The old hotel building has long been an eyesore to the citizens of Quincy and there are none but will be glad to learn that it is to be removed.

The addition of this lot to the library leaves but the small lot owned by the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co. between the library and the Coddington street boulevard.

It is hoped that sometime this lot will also be thrown into the library grounds when it would indeed become park grounds.

A special meeting of the Hospital corporation has been called for next week to ratify the sale.

TENTH BIRTHDAY.

Friends of Morris Esson Give Him a Surprise on Anniversary.

Morris Esson of 110 Intervale street was ten years old Monday. Of this fact he was, in all probability, aware of at an early hour of the day; and was very likely the happy possessor of some suitable reminder, the gift of his fond parents. There was, however, on this occasion, more in it for him than the family gift, for his associates at school had conceived the idea of having a time for the bright little fellow and presenting him with something which would in a measure testify to their appreciation of his sociable nature.

It was a straight out secret and Morris did not know a thing about it until the whole band of conspirators marched in on him. Then there was a merry time and it was not long before he knew something was up. Master Theodore Turner, in a business-like speech made the presentation of a very handsome woollen sweater. Master Esson in a brief though suitable manner accepted the gift.

Then the fun commenced and until nine o'clock the greatest old time was on. There was singing and games, and laughing without stint. Miss Evelyn McLeod and Evelyn Cowe sang, and so did Master William Michael and Morris Esson. Then there was a treat of cake and other sweet things.

The whole company joined in singing the "Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country 'tis of Thee." The celebration was a complete success and all were glad that Morris Esson was ten years old and that they were at the party.

Among those present were: Willie Cramond, Roy Cramond, Robert Summers, Damenico Cellucia, Henry Gorman, Donato Cellucia, Harold Warmington, Eddy Warmington, Norman Souter, Hilton Marr, James Finlayson, Angus Finlayson, George Orr, Willie Michael, Robert Grassick, John Martin, Walter Cowe, Willie Warmington.

Dorothy Russell, Violet Robertson, Isa Main, Jessie Stephen, Nellie Norrie, Viola Smith, Eva Smith, Evelyn McLeod, Evelyn Cowe, Flora Thompson, Irene Williams, Jessie Soudan, Russell McDonald, Minnie Miller, Mabel McDonald, Violet Spargo.

Only about one-half of the fifty games of Regdel have been given away. Ten consecutive Ledger coupons and one Patriot coupon will secure you one.

ANDREWS of THE APRIL FLOOD

By WM. H. OSBORNE

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Andrews rose from his seat and looked down upon the girl. He fumbled with his hat.

"I—I'm sorry," he faltered. "I thought it right to be different. I'm getting along so well over in town, and this spring I thought perhaps that we—that I—I might build somewhere around here and"— He paused. "I'm sorry," he repeated.

The girl flushed. She glanced over toward the mountain. It was in the month of April, but the mountain top was still white with the winter's snow

"I'm sorry, too," she replied in a tone that indicated that she was not so sorry as she seemed. Andrews started off. Suddenly he returned and once more laid down his hat.

"Louise," he exclaimed impulsively, "tell me something. I can stand it, and I want to know. We—we've grown up together. You can afford to be frank with me. Is there anybody else?"

She slowly shook her head. "No one in particular," she said.

"What is it, then?" he persisted. She looked him full in the face.

"I'll tell you, Stephen Andrews," she said. "It is not your fault, but you are not my kind of a man. Oh, I know," she added hastily, "you are a college fellow and what these people call smart and all that"— She hesitated. "I don't know," she continued, "whether I have been reading too many novels in my time or not, but I—I—there must be something more in the man that I—I don't know just how to express it. I think you understand."

Andrews smiled in spite of himself. "You mean," he said, "that I wear spectacles and that I don't tan up quite so much as the other fellows in the summer. I am not impulsive. My name is not Ivanhoe. Is that it, Louise?"

The girl sighed and looked off toward the white hills. "I do like strong, muscular men," she admitted. She had no hesitation in saying this to Andrews, for she generally said to him just what she meant. Andrews smiled a grim smile. He had never told her that he held the record for boxing and wrestling in his college class, and he did not propose to tell her now.

"Like John Duryea, for instance," he suggested. Again the girl flushed, for as she sat there she had contrasted the two men, somewhat to the detriment of the man before her.

"As you please," she answered, a bit coldly. Suddenly she turned to him. "You said," she went on, "that I thought you were not impulsive. Tell me honestly, if this house were on fire, and I were upstairs, and you were down below, would you brave the danger that might exist and rush in to my rescue at the risk of your life? Would you do that?"

Andrews smiled again. "Would John Duryea?" he asked. The girl nodded. "He would—I know he would," she answered. Andrews shook his head.

"It's a hard thing to answer," he replied. "Circumstances might alter cases. I should stop to think first, and then"—

"And then?" pursued the girl.

"I can't tell," returned the man. "I would do the best I could. It's a nice question," he added.

He said all this in an amused sort of way. The girl was serious. Andrews became serious again. He knew too well that the girl was uttering her thoughts—thoughts that with other girls exist, but remain unuttered. He realized with bitterness that the man who looks and acts like a hero is the man, after all. Duryea was such a man.

"I am sorry," he reiterated, and he went.

John Duryea was not a youth of intellect, but he had a kindling eye, and he had that appearance of animal courage and spirits that is so taking. Andrews envied him. He would have given all his intelligence and experience, he would have relinquished all the lessons he had learned in youthful adversity and hard work, to be in the shoes of this man Duryea.

The snow on the mountains melted—melted in a day and a night. The river rose. It rose so much that the town talked of it. The roar of the waters could be heard afar off. Duryea called at the girl's house. "Come down and see the flood," he said. They had been down before, but it was at all times an interesting sight. They strolled toward the long bridge. The waters roared under this bridge like a cataract. The eye could detect clearly the trembling of its timbers.

"We'd better not go on the bridge," exclaimed the girl, halting just before they reached it. Duryea threw back his shoulders.

"Come on," he said, with an air of bravado. "I'll take care of you." The girl looked at him with admiration and laughed. They went. She shivered as she felt the timbers tremble beneath her feet. The man lightly put his arm about her. It was good to feel his strength. It gave confidence. Suddenly he pointed down the road. "Look!" he shouted in her ear. "Here comes Andrews!" The girl looked. Sure enough, it was Andrews, running and waving his hand. He was warning them off the bridge, but they waved lightly back to him. He reached the entrance and stood there. They beckoned him to come, but he shook his head. He was afraid.

A mile above the bridge something was coming down. It was nothing but a congenial little spring convocation of logs.

"Your friend Andrews is afraid," shouted Duryea to the girl. She nodded. At that moment something happened. With a roar and a crash like thunder and lightning a few of the logs struck one end of the bridge, and it went down. Duryea turned pale. He was impulsive. He was muscular and agile. And as a result in no time he had sprinted toward the other end and stood on terra firma. The girl was too dazed to move. The second edition of logs hurled itself against the bridge. The middle of the bridge went down. On the shore two men watched. The girl had disappeared.

One man cast himself upon the ground and cried aloud in frenzy. He was a muscular chap. His name was Duryea. The other stood watching and thinking. He thought twice before he acted. Suddenly he caught a glimpse of a pale face and a few tresses of golden hair still untouched by the flood.

Then he did a queer thing. He darted down the side of the stream for a hundred yards until he caught up with this pale face and golden hair. When he was even with it he leaped far out into the stream and worked his way through the muddy torrent and over the impetuous logs to the place where he had seen the face of the girl he loved. The flood had claimed her for an instant, but as her face again appeared Andrews claimed her from the flood. And then the fight began. It was the forest and the stream, both raging mad, against one man and the girl he held within his arms.

By this time a crowd lined the shore. Andrews never knew what he did or how he did it. His iron muscles wrestled and fought and buffeted with odds that he had never met before. He fought like a wild man—fought to regain the shore, fought to regain life for the girl and for himself. Suddenly there was a shout. Some one had thrown a rope. Andrews caught it. Then the crowd held its breath. Then of a sudden there was a mighty shout. There was one man that did not hear it. It was Andrews—Andrews, who had staggered up out of the torrent, out of the jaws of death, with his bride to be—Andrews, a man with a broken arm and a broken thigh. Slowly he opened his eyes and looked at the girl who bent over him. "My name is Ivanhoe," he groaned, with a weary smile.

Sheep or Swine!

An example of the humor of the Puritan settlers in New England comes from old Newbury, a town which was incorporated so long ago as 1635. Although it was a staid community rather than a frivolous one, there was for many years an established town jest which was repeated in town meeting with unimpaired relish as often as its local officers were to be elected.

The lowest office in the gift of the people being that of town hog reeve, the person whose duty it is to herd and impound stray hogs, they had made it the custom to elect to that unenviable position the latest married resident of the place, fit or unfit, willing or unwilling.

Once—there must have been an especial spirit of audacity rife at town meeting on that occasion—they even went so far as to elect the Rev. Dr. Leonard Withington, then newly settled over the parish, and a committee, acting in a spirit of mirth, yet perhaps with a dash of inward trepidation, was sent to notify him of the honor, which, of course, it was expected he would not accept.

"Hog reeve," he repeated thoughtfully. "It is true I came to this place expecting to act as shepherd of a flock, but if my sheep have changed their character I see in that no reason to decline the task."

The reverend gentleman led, drove and exhorted his flock in the way they should go for the rest of his lifetime with notable success.—Youth's Companion.

Another Moving Job.

"Moving again, Fitz?" asked Pullet as Fitzgoober came out of the gate with a washtub tightly clasped in his arms and trailing a mirror behind him.

"Yes," moaned the afflicted man, mopping his perspiring brow, "I'm going to leave this hole."

"What for? Don't you like the neighborhood?"

"Oh, no, not that; the neighbors are all right."

"Water not good, maybe?"

"No better can be found."

"The rent hasn't been raised, has it?"

"No; that's the reason I'm going to seek another house."

"What!" exclaimed the surprised Pullet. "Moving from a place because the rent has not been raised! Surely you don't object to that, Fitz?"

"No, I do not," sadly replied Fitz as he started back for the kitchen set of furniture, "but the landlord does, you know."—London Answers.

Back Numbers.

"William," said Mrs. Van Gelder to the man of all work, "I want you to clean out that large closet in the hall just outside the parlor. Burn all the old newspapers, waste paper and any other rubbish you may find there."

After a short time she met William in the hall carrying in his arms a huge pile of sheet music, the property of her eldest daughter.

"What are you going to do with Mabel's music?" she asked.

"Why, burn it, sure, as you told me to. It was in the closet there with the other rubbish."

"But I didn't mean the music. Put it back at once."

Noting his mistress' displeasure, William inquired in surprise:

"Why, hasn't she played it all?"—Lippincott's.

Will Be to Widen the Breach Between Chief Executive and Republican Organization In Many States—Tracewell a Strong Factor

Washington, Oct. 20.—Secretary Shaw's absence from Washington, and his engrossment in the political campaign, which will continue until he casts his ballot in Iowa on Nov. 3, necessarily postpones further consideration of the cabinet complication produced by the Bonaparte-Conrad report until his return. The administration does not regret this delay. It believes, in the face of the criticism that "two mugwumps" should not have been selected to follow the trail of Republican officeholders, that the country will appreciate the purpose to get at the bottom of the scandals, shielding nobody on political grounds, which the selection of these two investigators proved. Had the president instead chosen two whitewashers, his opponents in congress and throughout the country could have continued to declare that the troubles had been "hushed up," and they would have made this the basis for an appeal next year "to turn the rascals out." Such a result of an inquiry into the Tulloch charges would be much more unfortunate, it is pointed out, than one which merely offends in partisan Republican circles, because of the guarantee which it carries that there will be no whitewashing. Mr. Bonaparte has been so long identified with reform movements that many of his critics overlook the fact that he has been consistently a Republican. Conrad is a Democrat. But both were sure to disregard politics in such an investigation. Many Republicans here who hold that the president was wise in these selections still think too much attention has been paid to the Tulloch charges, many of which should have been regarded as closed incidents.

Comptroller Tracewell's relation to the Bonaparte report is likely to occasion some friction. It practically calls for his removal. He is very strong politically, and his retention is said to be necessary to the success in his district of Mr. Hemenway, the new chairman of the appropriations committee. The Indiana senators would also regard any public reflection on Tracewell as extremely unfortunate. He came into prominence, it will be recalled, in the McKinley administration, by a ruling which deprived the civil service commission of much of its power over illegal appointments, through the comptroller's office. Secretary Shaw, when he first became aware of the findings of the Bonaparte committee, was desirous of a compromise by which Auditor Castle should go and Mr. Tracewell remain. Castle's resignation had already been accepted.

Much of the Tracewell complications comes from the Bonaparte findings regarding Gilmer, the auditor, who in the discharge of his duties first scented the irregularities. Perry Heath, it is said, tried to get him to see the matter in a different light, but found him obdurate. His obligation to duty is unfortunately complicated with charges of personal disrespect to superiors, and it was on this ground that he was reduced in rank. Attorney General Griggs is said to have been one of the complainants against him on this account. Mr. Bonaparte thinks Gilmer's services were such as to merit his reinstatement and this Mr. Tracewell, it is said, will not accede to, and Secretary Shaw inclines to stand by Tracewell. The whole postoffice affair is rapidly developing into a controversy between the president and the Republican organization in many states. Complaint has always been made that he is not a good enough organization man, and his attitude in these postoffice investigations which hit organization Republicans in many cases, is widening the breach. "The president seems to think," said an organization Republican, "that all that is necessary is for the country to elect him. He forgets the Republican organization must first nominate him."

The knowledge which has leaked out that the Bonaparte report on postoffice frauds hits prominent Republican office-holders is provoking much adverse comment. It is said that Mr. Bonaparte has devoted nine pages of his report to illegal transfers of clerks in the postoffice department. The spoilsmen say of this, "What of it? Are not the beneficiaries of the irregularities Republicans, and is this not a Republican administration? Do we want two mugwumps to tell us what we ought to do?"

President Roosevelt has obviously been put into something of a box by the Bonaparte report. He cannot well make it public without danger of a rupture in his cabinet. He cannot keep it quiet without giving the Democrats a great chance to ask the reason for its suppression.

Japs Laying In Coal

London, Oct. 20.—The Daily Mail says that since Oct. 17 eight steamships have been chartered in the United Kingdom to carry steam coal to Japan and that two other consignments are reported. The Port Arthur and Vladivostock freight rates have risen three shillings as a result of competition.

DELUDED DEPUTIES

Allowed a Notorious Swindler to Slip Through Their Fingers

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—Albert E. Bell, the mail pouch thief and forger, who was brought to this city from Denver by Deputy United States Marshals Baker and Davis, eluded his guards and is now at liberty. When the train reached the station Davis and Bell went to the toilet of the Pullman car and while Davis was performing his ablutions the prisoner calmly walked to the platform of the car, mingled with the crowd of passengers and disappeared.

For nearly three hours after Bell had made his escape Davis and Baker wandered about in search of him and finally notified the police authorities. Government and city detectives are now endeavoring to locate Bell, but he has the advantage of a long start and the officers are without a clue.

Bell was arrested while he was ill in a hospital at Denver. He confessed to having stolen a mail pouch containing about 1200 checks from an express train at Germantown Junction, this city, on the night of Sept. 3. He was held in $10,000 bail for his appearance in court here. In custody of Davis and Baker, the prisoner left Denver for this city Friday afternoon. Deluded by the tractability of the prisoner, the deputies failed to guard him carefully and his escape was rendered easy.

Bell is also suspected of having stolen a mail pouch at Sprigfield, Ills. He secured $2400 from the Lincoln Trust company in St. Louis by means of altered checks. He is also suspected of numerous postoffice robberies. He is supposed to have realized $500,000 from the robbery committed here.

Alleged Importation of Miners

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—Twenty-eight persons comprise the party of Welsh miners who are detained in this city on suspicion of being contract laborers. They arrived on the steamship Haverford, from Liverpool. Officers of the United Mine Workers of America are largely responsible for the detention of the party. Miners employed in western Pennsylvania are said to have first discovered the importation of Welsh miners. All of the detained men feel they have been duped and say they will be glad to return to Wales and stand the expense of the trip. The detained miners assert that hundreds of men, lured on by the promise of good wages, have already gone to the soft coal fields and that more are on their way to this country.

Improvement In Army Rations

Washington, Oct. 20.—The troops in the Philippines are now regularly supplied with fresh meats and vegetables. Through an arrangement with the navy department the fresh beef continues to come from Australia. San Francisco supplies the largest portion of the articles of the ration and many sales stores. Chicago furnishes the bulk of the salt meats and meat products and New York furnishes the greater portion of the articles for sales to officers and enlisted men.

Morley Out For Free Trade

London, Oct. 20.—John Morley, M. P., the former Liberal chief secretary for Ireland, is in line against the protectionist policy of the present government. Mr. Morley, who has been busy writing his "Life of William Ewart Gladstone," returned to active political life last night in an eloquent and spirited attack on the new policy, against which, he declared, he was arrayed with the whole weight of authority, both practical and theoretical.

To Become King's Advisor

Washington, Oct. 20.—Edward H. Stobel has been appointed confidential adviser to the King of Siam. He was formerly third assistant secretary of state, and also was minister to Ecuador and Chili. Since that time he has been professor of international law at Harvard university. He is the first American who has been named for the position he has accepted.

Troops Ordered Disbanded

Constantinople, Oct. 20.—In consequence of the understanding arrived at between Turkey and Bulgaria, the latter has ordered the disbandment of 10,000 troops now on the frontier. Turkey must now, in accordance with the agreement, disband 20,000 of her troops.

Wanted by Boston Police

Albany, Oct. 20.—Governor Odell has signed a warrant of extradition upon the requisition of Governor Bates of Massachusetts in the case of Lillian Newcomb, wanted in Boston for larceny.

Death of Ex-Governor Turney

Winchester, Ky., Oct. 20.—Former Governor Peter Turney died here last evening ater an illness of considerable duration.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fire which started in W. F. Livingstone's general store at Anson, Me., destroyed that building and the postoffice building adjoining. The loss is about $5000.

Colonel Roswell E. Goodell died at Denver of Bright's disease. He was born at Pomfret, Conn., in 1827. Although a Democrat, at the request of Abraham Lincoln he accepted the Republican nomination for secretary of state and was elected.

The president has accepted the resignation of Rear Admiral R. B. Bradford, as chief of the bureau of equipment.

Henry J. Fuller, a widely known practicing attorney and a foremost citizen of Taunton, Mass., for 40 years, is dead, aged 69.

HENRY H. FAXON BRINGS TO LIGHT

Some Interesting Bombshells of His Experiences in Recent Years.

Miscellaneous Letters relating to City Affairs,

QUINCY, MASS.

From Quincy Advertiser, Sept. 12, 1899.

WHERE IS IT?

Mr. Faxon Cannot See City's Prosperity.

Real Estate Boom Like a Will o' The Wisp.

Cry of Prosperity Hears But Its Echo in Hundreds of Vacant Houses.

If there is one thing more than another that is of interest to Henry H. Faxon, it is prosperity in real estate matters, for to no other resident of the city does the effect of such a movement strike more closely home than to him. In certain quarters where a most belabored effort is being made to have it appear that the city is climbing skywards in the value of real estate, the words of such a large real estate owner as Mr. Faxon cannot fail to have some weight. In speaking of this matter to an Advertiser reporter, Mr. Faxon said a few days ago:

The manner in which the Ledger has launched a real estate boom and called it "prosperity," leads me to say that "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," and to give you a few reasons for the depression in real estate existing in this city at the present time.

First. Taxes if assessed upon the basis of true valuation would be from $22 to $25 per thousand instead of $19.20. Excessive valuation increases out county and state taxes.

Second. Rents are much lower, especially in remote localities.

Third. There are double the number of vacant houses there were three years ago.

Fourth. The repairs now required in order to secure new tenants and retain the old ones are twenty per cent. more than when houses and tenements are scarce.

Fifth. The losses in rent occasioned by frequent opportunities to change landlords, in consequence of the multiplicity of vacant houses, is much larger than formerly.

Sixth. Undesirable tenants do not pay rents which are due, arguing that it is cheaper to move than to pay back rents.

Seventh. The onerous burdens imposed upon real estate owners by sewer, water, sidewalk assessments and plumbers' bills reduce net incomes very materially.

Eighth. Persons with capital to invest in personal property especially, will not locate in Quincy with a tax rate of two per centum on the valuation and a large debt to pay in the future, which will certainly increase the burdens of those who hold equities in visible property.

With such prospects I conclude that the Ledger's logic in trying to boom real estate in its columns must emanate from a disordered brain, and one that is color blind as well. If hundreds of vacant houses denote prosperity it is an argument which real estate owners do not financially relish, either for themselves or for the welfare of the city.

"In placing the blame for such business, the Democrats cannot be censured any more than the Republicans. They have both had their turn at the city affairs and the fruits brought forth have been identical. Political chicanery is worked by both parties for their own selfish interests and a deceived public has to stand the expense."

WITHOUT PARALLEL.

A Blundering, Incompetent and Extravagant Administration.

I read with interest in the Boston Journal of Nov. 28, the answer of Mayor Keith to the criticisms against his administration which appeared in the same paper Nov. 24.

In his letter he characterizes as Republicans, certain officials among his appointees, many of whom I believe voted for him at the last election. He is very careful, however, not to mention the political complexion of the men employed on the highways, the condition of which the past year has been deplorable. Furthermore, if ever our city had a partisan government, it is the one now in power.

In regard to the claim that the city has been saved $3000 as the result of the political manipulations in the Water Department, the Mayor has failed, as yet to show to the taxpayers, by itemized statement, just where this saving is effected.

Relative to the City Council being largely Republican and responsible for the increase in the city debt, why has not the Mayor exercised his prerogative and vetoed the unwise appropriations passed by that body? His failure to do so is a tactic endorsement of the extravagance of the Council.

Concerning personalities, the Mayor has been discreetly brief in his recent letter. I do not blame him for not desiring to discuss so delicate a matter.

Considerable stress is put upon the fact that although the present Mayor served the City acceptably for four years as clerk, he was displaced by the Republican Mayor who preceded him. In this connection I desire to remind the voters that the qualifications necessary to acceptably fill one position are entirely different from those required by the other.

For the past year the suffering taxpayers have borne the present administration, which for blundering, incompetency and extravagance stands without a parallel in our municipal annals.

SINGLE TAX IDEA AS APPLIED TO FARMING.

Henry H. Faxon Writes a Characteristic Letter Relative to His Recent Offer.

The advocates of the system of assessing taxes upon land only will have to rack their brains in order to solve many difficult problems which will confront them before their pet theory can be put into operation.

The Pingree plan of raising potatoes on vacant land was recently discussed at the Y. M. C. A. in Quincy by William Lloyd Garrison and his enthusiastic friend, Mr. C. B. Fillebrown. As I am a large owner of land, I offered the use of land free to any one who wished to try the experiment. Having made the offer, I studied the situation carefully with the aid of two reporters from the Boston Globe. Several pieces of land were looked over, and were very clearly described in the Globe of Jan. 24. The results of my investigation can be understood if I allude specifically to the first lot examined.

This consists of five and one-half acres of tillage land on Pond Street, Quincy, with some fruit trees upon it and a spring of pure water running through it. The land is assessed for $5000, the taxes upon the same, at $19.20 per $1000, being $96 per year, which together with the interest upon $5000 at 4 per cent., viz., $200, would amount to $296, the sum required to carry the land for one year.

Since the article appeared in the newspaper, I have repeatedly offered this lot, as well as others, free of rent, taxes or assessments, on a lease of three years to any responsible party for the purpose of raising potatoes or other vegetables, upon the condition that the land shall be properly laid down to grass in the fall of the second year, the lessee to have the crop the third year. Bear in mind that the taxes and interest for the term for which I offered this land would amount to $888.

Let us now consider the prospects of financial success on the part of the potato raiser who is operating free land. A diligent and prudent man takes the land and works it with the aid of hired help. While they are thus engaged some political eight-hour per day, Knight of Labor leans upon the the fence, with a pipe in his mouth and a bottle of whiskey in his pocket and informs the hired man that he is a fool to work himself to death. How absurd it is to call this a free country when a few aspirants for political offices can say to the members of an organization which they assume to control, "You must not work for less wages or a greater number of hours than we shall dictate."

The single taxers, social democrats and labor reformers are constantly agitating schemes which they claim will make all men equal, but with result only in pointing a way for loafers to get their living out of those who have acquired a competence by industry and frugality. This generation will have passed away before these theorists can formulate a plan for dealing with this question which will appeal to reasonable men.

Land owners are at the mercy of the assessors. If I complain that vacant land is taxed for more than its real value, the question is asked why I do not sell or build thereon. Last year I tried the latter proposition, and erected three stores on a corner lot in the centre of the city. The cellar alone had been built by the first of May, but what did the assessors do? They assessed the cellar $300, and immediately raised the valuation of the land (about three-fourths of an acre), $12,000. They not only added to the former valuation the cost of the cellar, but also the prospective value of the land. It is a fact that unimproved land is taxed greatly in excess of its real value, and one who builds a house to sell or let will find that taxes, assessments, insurance, repairs, etc., will absorb all the gross income received.

The political jugglery that is practiced upon real estate owners in Quincy and other cities is well expressed by a remark made by one of our officials who said that "If real estate were reckoned at its true value, we should exceed our debt limit."

Henry H. Faxon.

Quincy, Feb. 16, 1900.

PROFITS OF FARMING.

Problem for the Assessors to Solve.

In arriving at the amount lost in interest upon the assessed value of land, taxes, etc., I submit the following as a fair example of the manner in which the real estate owner is getting poor:

I have a farm comprising several lots of land which is taxed for,	$23,700.00
The yearly interest on the above sum at 4 per cent. amounts to	948.00
Taxes on the land (33 acres) and buildings consisting of large old-fashioned house, barn, etc., are	455.04
	$1,403.04
The above named farm is rented per annum for	300.00
Yearly loss on same	1,103.04
	$1,403.04

Now I shall be pleased to have the Board of Assessors inform me through the columns of the press how long a time will be required for me to lose a sum equal to the present valuation of the property.

Viewed from another standpoint, at what price will those who own and work farms be compelled to sell the potatoes, onions, corn, turnips and tomatoes for by the bushel, and what must be the rate per dozen for cabbage heads, in order that all concerned may make a living under the present conditions? I leave this last conundrum to be solved by the Assessors and Council, who regulate the financial affairs of our historic city.

In considering the prospects of the real estate owner it must be borne in mind that there is an additional cost of repairs, insurance and fencing to deduct from the amount received for rent.

I have heard men express themselves as being "land poor." My experience has convinced me that this saying is applicable to those who hold land in Quincy at the present rate of taxation.

Water Street Sidewalk Appropriation.

THE COUNCIL SHARPLY CRITICISED.

For the purpose of enlightening the taxpayers in regard to the recent action of the City Council in appropriating $1000 for a concrete sidewalk on Water street, from Franklin to Quincy street, I have carefully investigated the matter with the following results:

There were thirty petitioners for a concrete sidewalk, who represented that they were "citizens and taxpayers" of Ward Three. Of this number, fifteen pay only a poll tax of $2 each, seven are not assessed for even a poll tax, and the remaining eight property owners pay a tax (including poll assessment) of $370.60.

Eight remonstrants, comprising all the abutters, pay a property tax in Ward Three of $1,509.25, and if any special benefits were to have been derived, these citizens surely would not have objected to anything that would increase the value of their property. The fact is, there are but few sidewalks in the city which are in better order than the one in question; while there are many where the travel is heavy that are not in nearly as good condition.

It surprises me, that in view of the opposition of those who are directly interested, a committee with ordinary intelligence should make a report in favor of so extravagant an expenditure of the people's money, and I cannot believe that they ever examined the premises. Equally astonishing is the action of the Council, even after the Committee's report, in passing the order with but two dissenting votes and this unwise expenditure and arbitrary proceeding further receiving the approval of the Mayor.

My father pastured sheep, and I well remember hearing him say that an old bell-wether would never lead the flock over a fence or wall in the pasture unless he could see that the landing on the other side was safe. If the members of the Council were endowed with as much instinct in financial affairs as the bell-wethers exhibit in caring for the safety of their flocks, the interests of the taxpayers would be better guarded than they now are.

It is deplorable that the great business interests of our city are so poorly represented in the Council. The ambition of a majority of the members of this body is centered in themselves or their rotten parties. There are many councilmen whose chief desire is to pose as the lion of their own Ward, as a passport to further political honors from their constituents.

In order that the Ward Three real estate owners may realize the burdens upon their visible property, I herewith submit a statement in regard to the net income which I receive from an estate which is located upon said Water street, where good sidewalks are to be torn up and replaced by concrete.

PROTECT THE BOYS.

Henry H. Faxon Criticies the Police and asks for Evidence.

Numerous complaints have recently been made to me that school boys are smoking cigarettes freely, and that they are frequenting resorts where gambling, drinking intoxicating liquors and other vices are practiced.

We have a police force which is maintained at a cost of more than five times the sum that was paid the department during the last year Quincy was a town, and yet devilty and crime abound in the community.

There are policemen in this city who must have one or both eyes closed when they are in the vicinity of certain places to which I have called their attention; nothing else can xplain their inaction.

Moreover, when a transgressor is brought before the court, a combination of lawyers and police officers concoct a circuitous story, as a result of which the law breaker's case is placed on file, or the offender is released on probation and is free to again curse this or some other community.

If the citizens who are interested in sustaining the good reputation of our city will advise me of any evidence which they may obtain in regard to the existence of dens of vice in our midst, such information will be treated as strictly confidential, if so requested.

SUNDAY BASE BALL.

Open Letter to Chief of Police.

Walter H. Ripley, Chief of Police, Quincy, Mass.

I look to you in the exercise of your official duties to put a stop to the playing of ball on Sunday, which always causes disrespect of the Sabbath and proves a great nuisance to law-abiding citizens.

For several Sundays a gang, who have little regard for anybody, have indulged in games upon the estate owned by me at the terminus of Summer Street, to the detriment and peace of the tenants. Within a few weeks an outbuilding on the premises referred to, was set on fire, entire sashes and the glass in the same were broken, and other sashes were removed preparatory to being carried away by rascals who destroy or plunder everything of value which comes to their notice. I applied to you for protection, and a so-called policeman was directed to watch the place one evening for midnight prowlers. It may be truly said that no one was seen, and the guardian of the peace lives to tell his experience. What most astonished me was that this efficient (?) conservator of life and property requested me to pay him for his unbroken night's rest.

There are several places in the city where base ball, as well as base actions are going on during Sunday, and it is high time that a police force which costs the taxpayers $12,000 per year, should do their full duty in regard to such matters.

It makes one indignant to observe the many acts of vandalism to which vacant buildings in this city have been subjected.

SUNDAY BASE BALL,

among which may be cited the following: The old fire engine house where more than one hundred panes of glass were broken; the old high school building where cellar and circular windows have suffered; a house on New road in which every light of glass and many sashes were destroyed, and the building was partially torn down after being fired; nearly all the glass in a house on Putnam street was broken out twice, the building set on fire and other acts of raccality were committed. I do not think an arrest was made in any of the cases named. I could mention other instances where the work of this class of transgressors is apparent. I trust, however, that I have said enough to rouse the real estate owners of this city to such a sense of their rights as will lead them to demand greater vigilance on the part of those whose sworn duty it is to protect them in person and property.

FAXON AGAINST IT.

Regards Copeland Street Appropriation as Extravagant.

To His Honor, Mayor Hall,
Quincy, Mass.,

Dear Sir: I notice by the papers that the City Council on the 19th inst., appropriated $24,000 to widen Copeland street. In the present condition of the finances of the city, I regard it as extremely unwise to expend so large a sum for such a purpose. Moreover, there is no certainty that the sum named will not be largely increased before the work of widening the street is completed, judging from what we know of the reckless action of the Council in the past. It is time to call a halt in these unnecessary improvements. Our city government is simply a political beehive, and those who are bearing the financial burdens are being stung to death. I am often reminded that many Councilmen are puffed up with a feeling of wealth when they are spending other people's money. It is very easy for politicians to vote for extravagant appropriations when they themselves are not contributing anything thereto. They also lose sight of the fact that money borrowed on long terms for city affairs will have to be paid with interest by future generations.

I sincerely hope you will veto the Copeland street measure, and thus teach the careless manipulators of the city's finances that it is time the welfare of those who are bearing the burdens of excessive taxation should be respected.

Henry H. Faxon.

GOV. CRANE'S VETOES.

Heartily Endorsed by Citizens Who are Interested in Good Government.

[Quincy Ledger, July 18, 1900.]

On the closing day of the Legislature Gov. Crane vetoed the bill appropriating $755,000 for new parkways in the Metropolitan district, and also a bill appropriating $200,000 for a driveway along the shores of Lynn, Swampscott and Nahant. As the vetoes were sustained there is undoubtedly great disappointment among the promoters, but taxpayers in general will rejoice that the Governor has the courage of his convictions as set forth in his inaugural address. We quote a paragraph from the veto message, which is business-like and to the point:

"My conviction that the cities and towns in the metropolitan district should not undertake new enterprises until the present load of debt has been lightened is strengthened by an experience of six months as the chief executive of the commonwealth. The ease with which great financial burdens are imposed or assumed is a tendency of the times, which, in my opinion, needs to be checked. I have no desire to stand in the way of a progressive treatment of the needs of these districts, but it is clear to me, and I believe it must be obvious to the people who pay the taxes, that there should not be further increase of debt, excepting for purposes which public necessity absolutely demand."

Governor Crane, during the session of the Legislature vetoed nine measures, and upon sober second thought no bills were passed over his veto.

[Boston Record, July 18, 1900.]

Murray Crane did just right in vetoing those boulevard bills calling for the expenditure of $1,000,000. He ought to have vetoed a good many other schemes. The trouble around here is that the taxes are too high. People wonder why real estate is so depressed; why it does not sell for as high as ten years ago; why banks do not wish to loan on it.

The answer is, that in the last decade a large additional financial charge has been put on real estate by the extravagance of the cities, towns and state. That charge comes every year, and, having to be paid, makes property which cannot escape taxation worth so much less. It is no use to dicker with tax rates and debt limits to improve matters; the only way is to spend less.

I trust that the members of our various municipal governments will read the sound financial advice of the Governor, contained in his vetoes of bills involving large expenditures and that they will pursue a similar policy in local affairs.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, July 21, 1900.

$1,100 SQUANDERED

Quincy Avenue Appropriation Reckless.

If the taxpayers of Quincy desire to see where their money has been squandered, let them examine the so-called sidewalk on Quincy avenue for which $1,100 was appropriated by the City Council, whose zeal for making improvements that are not needed, rivals the utter recklessness of past Councils. As a matter of fact there is not enough travel on Quincy avenue to warrant such a waste of public money, as the electric cars furnish a more desirable way for pedestrians. If the above sum had been expended in clearing out the rocks and stones and filling the holes in the road with fine cracked stone, it would have been more to the comfort of man and beast.

There are some men who have represented the citizens in the Councils of the past, who have not had enough business ability to run a peanut stand successfully unless they do it on their pet theory of giving notes on long terms for their stock in trade, with the argument that as their children have eaten the peanuts, they cught to pay the notes.

If money is to be expended, why not improve roads where repairs are sadly needed. For a long time past Granite street, from Swithin's stone sheds to Brewer's Corner has been in a shocking condition and on this street there is ninety-five per cent. more travel than on Quincy avenue. I cannot believe that committees who report favorably upon such needless schemes as have been voted for the past year have ever examined the premises. It is a ruinous policy for the city to make improvements of a temporary character by issuing notes for long terms of years. Any man, corporation or city that gives such notes of indebtedness for future generations to pay, are leaving legacies, a discredit alike to themselves and a burden upon their children.

I will remind those reckless Councilmen who advocate running the city in debt that before the last note or bond on sewers, water mains and sidewalks is paid, many of these improvements will have been supplanted by new pipes or other contrivances and still more formidable debts will be the penalty imposed upon an already over-taxed and debt-ridden public who will be obliged to stand another raid on their resources in order that some pet theory of a political poser may be exemplified.

The Seventeenth Anniversary of No-License in Quincy.

Henry H. Faxon's Speech.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I take this opportunity to thank the good people of Quincy for the encouragement and support which they have given me during the years of my crusade against the dens of vice which at one time threatened to engulf the morals of this historic city, and bring lasting discredit upon its fair name.

When the saloon was present with us, the Sabbath, instead of being observed as a day of rest and devotion was utilized by many as a day of debauchery and blasphemy.

For more than sixteen years Quincy has been one of the most law-abiding, temperate and prosperous municipalities in the Commonwealth. The average no-license majority during this period has been 794, which is a creditable record considering the heterogeneous population which has settled in our midst. Closing the saloon has decreased crime, prevented excessive drunkenness, purified politics and largely increased wealth, prosperity and happiness within our borders. From a careful estimate, I find that more than $100,000 was annually spent in the dram shops of our city, under license, with a population not one-half as large as at present.

The difficulties which I have encountered, the abuse received and the money expended in my battle for the destruction of Satan's strongholds—the former liquor saloons of Quincy—count as nothing, in comparison with the results which have been secured.

For the past twenty years I have expended in the work of the temperance reform in Quincy upwards of $50,000. Had it not been for the giant evil of intemperance and all that follows in its train, this money would have been directly applied to the upbuilding of the moral and religious institutions of our city. However, the extermination of the dram shops has been the most gratifying work of my life, and I owe my success to the influence and assistance of the churches of this place, as well as of the aid which has been rendered me by the noble women who are always on the right side of all moral questions.

I do not believe that there is a city in this State where it is so difficult to purchase intoxicating liquors as in Quincy. Nevertheless, while we are congratulating ourselves on the encouraging features of our present condition, we must not be blind to the fact that our "Yes" vote has averaged 774 during these years, and that there is no security outside of constant vigilance.

The License element that is still holding on here is a constant menace to the best interest of our citizens. In order to perpetuate the good work we must elect none but honest officials at the head of our city government, those who will tolerate no man upon our police force who is derelict in enforcing the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors and kindred evils.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Mr. Faxon Never Before So Hampered.

Honorable Board of Health, of Quincy, Mass.

I would be pleased to have you and the inspector examine the plumbing of the Hancock House and stores and inform me whether in your judgment I can connect those premises with the sewer at a moderate expense. In 1893 the plumbing of the house and stores was done by the day by P. H. Gavin, and his bill alone was more than $1000. Now, in order to conform to the plumbing and sewer ordinances, it is estimated that an additional outlay of not less than $600 must be made before the premises can be connected with the sewer.

I have owned a large number of houses in Boston and Chelsea and have never before been hampered by so many useless restrictions as are now being imposed upon me by the plumbing ordinances of Quincy.

Those who are thinking of connecting their estates with the sewer are courting perplexities of which they little dream at present. Cheap tenants, in many instances, are scarcely half civilized, and use water closets for the disposal of dead kittens, swill, ashes and other refuse.

If those members of the City Council who are chiefly responsible for the arbitrary rules to which property owners are now subjected, possessed some practical knowledge of real estate, instead of being controlled by ignorance and imagination, it would be better for the entire community.

Henry H. Faxon.

Quincy, July 26, 1899.

REMARKS OF HENRY H. FAXON.

At the Welcoming Reception to Father Roche, at West Quincy, January 17th, 1900.

It gives me great pleasure, Father Roche, to welcome you as a permanent resident of our city. Well do we remember your valiant work for temperance and good citizenship when you were with us in the years past. Your present higher sphere of usefulness and influence leads us to expect proportionate results. It is especially fortunate that you should have become a resident of Ward Four which, to its shame and disgrace, gives the largest vote in favor of legalizing the sale of intoxicating liquors, and it is the only one where rumsellers and those who are in sympathy with the whiskey traffic dare to come forward as candidates for important offices. Just here let me say that no man who uses intoxicating liquors as a beverage should be allowed to serve as a policeman, and those in authority should carefully investigate the habits of those who seek such responsible positions. There are now men on the force who are about as efficient as would be a stuffed dummy set up against a lamp-post and labelled "policeman." For the last twenty years it has required eternal vigilance to keep the evils of liquor selling within narrow limits in this part of the city for the reason that some of the police who have been located in this section have been derelict in their duty. Now that you, Father Roche, have taken up your abode here, and as this is also the home of the Chief of Police, I believe that the violators of the law will soon realize the effects of the influence of a staunch temperance advocate re-inforced by a public official who will fulfill all the obligations of his position.

A Financial, Moral and Business Failure.

The Administration of Mayor Keith so regarded.

As the municipal election approaches it behooves every citizen, interested in the welfare of our city to carefully consider the record of the two candidates.

Mayor Keith's administration was without parallel in this city as a financial, moral and business failure. I am convinced that many of the political parasites, who enjoyed living at the expense of the tax payers during that period, are now again striving to get possession of the appropriations, and renew their onslaught upon the public treasury for selfish interests.

The widening of Coddington street will long be remembered by those who observed the methods which attended that piece of work. For instance, during the week preceding and including election day, there were on the average 115 men and 19 teams per day employed, much of the time being spent in political discussion and in smoking T. D. pipes. On the day after election two men only were at work there. Can it be said that such policy was anything but a bare-faced partisan manoeuvre? There were other jobs done for the city which were as truly characteristic of the heeler regime, notably the needless and expensive method employed in removing snow from the streets in February, 1899. This was a piece of political mismanagement on runners.

I did not object to the judicious expenditure of money for necessary municipal improvements, but I could not remain silent when a horde of political bummers were loafing under pay, at the expense of worthy toilers.

The principal cause which led to the defeat of Mayor Sears, when he sought a re-election, was the removal of a faithful public official to pay a political debt. A similar fate befell Mayor Keith and made him a yearling.

Although the latter was elected by the votes of Independents and Republicans on account of his predecessor's unwise appointments, he, too, persisted in the same suicidal policy and removed one of the most efficient officers of the city, displacing Mr. Knowlton as Commissioner of Public Works by the appointment of Mr. Cavanagh, who was already under a water department cloud, and who proved such a burden as to sink the Democratic ship at the next election. If Messrs. Keith and Cavanagh, in their letters of the 26th inst., could have shown wherein the $2500 was saved to the city by the abolishment of the Board of Water Commissioners, and the consolidation of the Water and Public Works Departments, they would have imparted information of great value to an interested public. If they had attempted to do this perhaps Mr. Glover might have been of material assistance.

I have exposed a few of the shortcomings of a Democratic Mayor, but there is a glaring error committed by the present administration which I do not intend to overlook. Among Mayor Hall's appointments none were more objectionable than the selection for the office of Chief of Police of a man who was not in any way qualified for the position, but who was thus rewarded for his campaign services.

A Chief of Police who cannot refrain from profanity in many sentences of his conversation is not a credit to our city. Men have also been appointed to the police force regardless of their fitness for such positions, and, in several instances, men whose drinking habits are well known, were thus rewarded.

I eagerly listened to that portion of Mayor Hall's inaugural which seemed in the nature of a sermon, fondly expecting that he would give explicit instructions to the Chief of Police to vigorously enforce the provisions of the liquor laws. His failure to do this caused me bitter disappointment! Notwithstanding this fact, desiring to make the work of the new Chief as effective as possible I addressed him the following letter:

Quincy, Jan. 20, 1900.

Mr. Walter H. Ripley, Chief of Police,
Quincy.

Dear Sir:—I congratulate you upon your appointment as Chief of Police, and I trust that you will make strenuous efforts to stop liquor selling, crime and lawlessness in the city. I have received numerous complaints that considerable business of a suspicious nature is being done by the West Quincy expressmen; in fact, I believe this class need watching in all parts of our city. I shall be pleased to furnish you with a copy of the Liquor Laws of Massachusetts and other documents of value to you if you will call at my residence for the same. I shall also be glad to give you any information you may desire from my book of experience. If you find that you are hampered by the Council for necessary funds for your work, I shall be pleased to render you financial assistance.

Trusting that your administration of police affairs may reflect credit upon yourself and the city,

I am, very truly yours,

Henry H. Faxon.

While the appointment of Mr. Ripley was a serious error of judgment, yet the present administration as a whole has been clean and beyond reasonable criticism, in refreshing contrast to the unsavory record of some members of the previous administration. I therefor deem it for the best interests of all law-abiding citizens to vote for the re-election of Mayor Hall.

In conclusion, I do not desire to be understood as placing the whole blame upon the Mayor for the mismanagement of the city's affairs. The total lack of business-like methods, which have characterized the acts of a majority of the Council, is responsible for many of the financial burdens which the tax payers have suffered for the past two years.

THE ALASKAN VERDICT

Signed by a Majority of Boundary Commissioners

CANADIANS IN MINORITY

Refused to Sign Section Favorable to Dominion and Left Cabinet Room Before Other Signatures Were Affixed, Creating Painful Impression

London, Oct. 20.—A draft of the decision reached by the Alaska boundary commissioners was signed by a majority of the commissioners last evening. Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette, the Canadian commissioners, refused to sign.

The decision grants all the American contentions with the exception of the one relating to the Portland canal. The signatories were Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, and Senator Lodge, Senator Turner and Secretary Root, the American commissioners. They constituted a majority and ensured finality.

Messrs. Aylesworth and Jette carried their outspoken disapproval of the decision to the point of refusing to sign even that section of the decision giving the Portland canal to Canada and they emphasized their attitude by walking out of the cabinet room in the foreign office before the signatures of the others had been affixed to the historical document, which has already been printed. The only thing remaining to be done at this session is that the majority of the tribunal complete and sign the map which accompanies the decision and which minutely determines the course of the boundary in accordance with the American contentions contained in question No. 5. An engrossed copy of the decision will be signed today.

The refusal of Aylesworth and Jette to coincide in Lord Alverstone's view was only known to a few persons here last night, but at the foreign office and in high government circles it has created a painful impression. There is no hope expressed that the Canadian commissioners will reconsider their attitude and sign the engrossed copy of the decision, which will stand as the international record of the tribunal's finding.

Grout and Fornes Not Endorsed

New York, Oct. 20.—Hugh McLaughlin's victory last night over Senator McCarren in the struggle for supremacy overshadows all other features of the political campaign. McLaughlin carried his point at a meeting of the Kings county Democratic committee against endorsing the nominations of Grout and Fornes by the close vote of 148 to 141, by which a resolution was adopted calling the appointment of a committee to undertake the forlorn hope of harmonizing the warring factions.

Bridge Workers Killed

Pittsburg, Oct. 20.—Nearly a dozen workmen of the American Bridge company were killed by the breaking of the ropes carrying five beams to their position, which allowed tons of iron to fall upon a movable crane at the new Wabash bridge. The workmen were hurled to death by a fall of more than 100 feet, striking the water and two barges beneath. The bodies of eight of the dead have been recovered. Five men are seriously injured and several bodies are pinned under the wrecked barge.

SUIT FOR $10,000

To Be Entered Against City of Boston For Arrest of a Chinaman

Boston, Oct. 20.—Because he was arrested and thrown into jail without a warrant, Yee Chin, who says he is an American-born citizen, is to sue the city of Boston for $10,000 on the ground of false arrest. As soon as he can procure his papers from San Francisco the legal proceedings will be begun by his counsel.

Yee Chin is not alone in his intended suit against the city, for the Chinese consul has discovered that Lue Hee Fong, another American-born Chinaman, has documentary proof that he also was born in San Francisco. This man also claims false arrest.

Acting under instructions from the Chinese embassy at Washington the Chinese consul, Colonel Nickerson, Dr. A. K. Page and a Chinese interpreter, accompanied by a stenographer, made a tour of evidence to be used against the United States in the suit by Chinese subjects.

After spending nearly two hours in Chinatown the party visited the city hospital, where Chin Sing, who was badly hurt in the barge accident, was closely questioned. The findings of the investigation will be turned over to the minister at Washington.

Approves Democratic Program

Boston, Oct. 20.—Although he did not personally attend the banquet of the Massachusetts Democratic club at the Revere house last night, former Secretary of State Olney made his first public appearance in the state campaign in the form of a letter of regret to the club. In this letter Mr. Olney said he was wholly in sympathy with the plan of the Massachusetts Democrats in waging the present campaign upon state issues entirely. It ridiculed the attempt of Republican speakers to put them aside as "trivialties."

Old Heroes Not Forgotten

Boston, Oct. 20.—A memorial to the unknown dead who lost their lives during the siege of Boston or at another time during the revolution while in active service for the country was unveiled in the Dorchester Old North burial ground, where many of these unknown dead were buried. The memorial was erected by the Massachusetts society, Sons of the American Revolution, and is in the form of a large boulder, on which is a bronze tablet.

No More Parades In Nighties

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 20.—As a result of a riot between students and town boys on the occasion of the annual night-shirt parade two weeks ago, in which several of the students were severely hurt, it was voted by the students last night to abolish the custom. In return for this action the faculty will grant one day's vacation each fall immediately after the fraternity initiations.

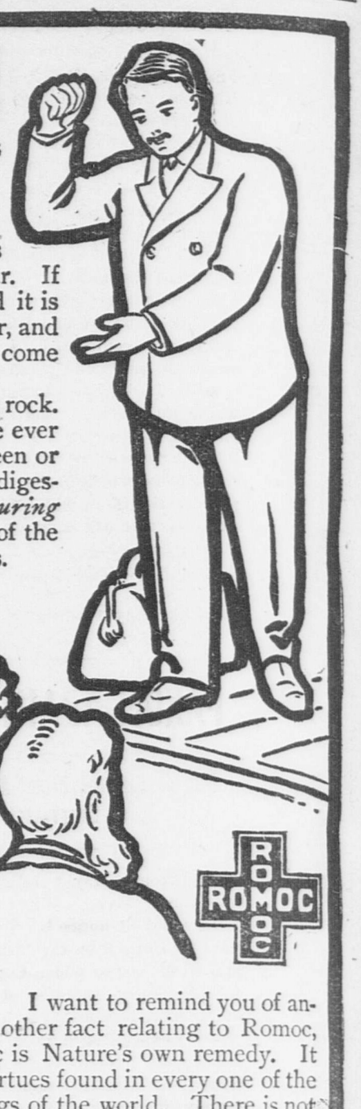
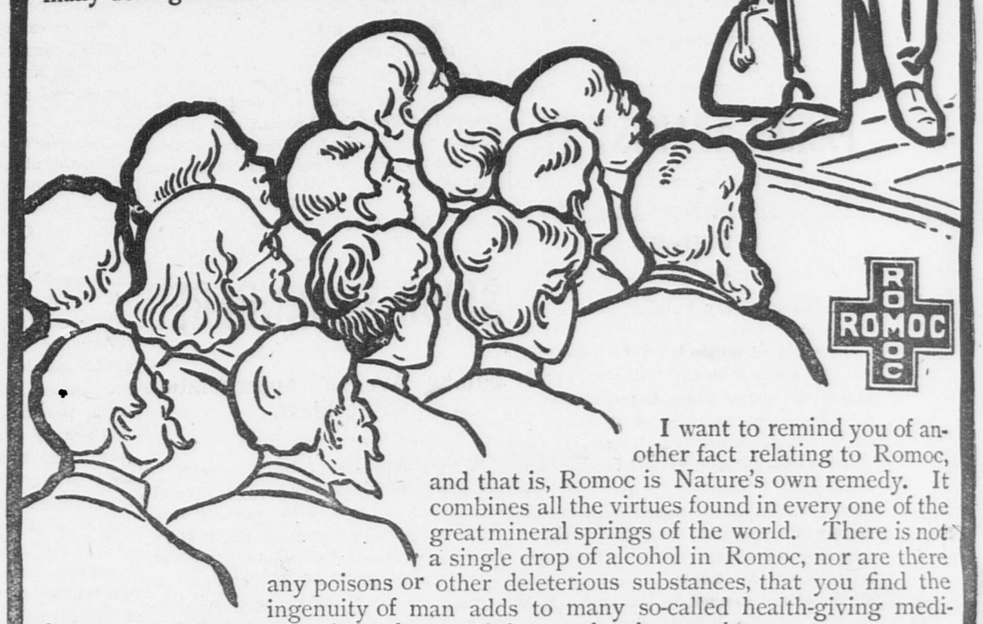
Once more the Romoc man expounds the Theories of Health. This is What He Says:



SEE here, good people, I have only a few words to say in making my appearance again this year. If you need my advice, you probably need it badly, and it is simply this: start in with Romoc, the sooner the better, and fortify yourself against the ills that are bound to come during the next few months.

Remember that Romoc is the medicine made from a rock. There is nothing in this whole, wide world that I have ever found in my travels, or that any of you have ever seen or heard of, that will so effectually cure Rheumatism, Indigestion, Nervousness, and all Blood Troubles, and besides curing these ills, that will absolutely make you well of any of the many derangements that are a result of such affections.



I want to remind you of another fact relating to Romoc, and that is, Romoc is Nature's own remedy. It combines all the virtues found in every one of the great mineral springs of the world. There is not a single drop of alcohol in Romoc, nor are there any poisons or other deleterious substances, that you find the ingenuity of man adds to many so-called health-giving medicines to their detriment, and the danger of the people who use them.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

TRUST COMPANIES FAIL

Receivers For the Union and Maryland of Baltimore

MEXICAN RAILWAY SHARES

Were Held In Large Amount and Could Not Be Marketed—International Company's Affairs Also Appear to Be In a Tangled Condition

Baltimore, Oct. 20.—The Maryland Trust company and the Union Trust company, two of the best known banking houses of this city, have gone into receivers' hands. Except to a few in inner financial circles, the announcement of the Maryland failure came like a thunderbolt from a clear sky. The suspensions caused the greatest excitement.

First came the announcement of the failure of the Maryland Trust company. The cause given was inability to market Mexican railway securities, which the bank held in large amount. Added to this was the failure to negotiate a $2,000,000 loan in London. While business men were anxiously discussing the suspension of the Maryland company another shock was given the financial community by the suspension of the Union Trust company.

The two failures were the cause of numerous rumors. One of these was that, at the request of another trust company, the name of which was freely bandied about, the clerk of the circuit court kept his office open an hour later than the accustomed time to accommodate one more applicant for a receivership. But the applicant did not materialize, and the day ended with only two suspensions and with the assurance of the cool-headed financiers of the city that all peril of a panic had passed and that today would note the dissipation of every sign and portent of further trouble.

The International Failure

New York, Oct. 20.—Assistant District Attorney Miner has begun an investigation into the affairs of the International Bank and Trust company, a concern incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with a capitalization of $10,000,000. Thus far $1,800,000 of stock has been issued. The company did business principally in Mexico. Last Saturday the concern failed and a receiver was appointed by the Mexican courts. On the day of the failure it was learned that $56,000 of the firm's notes were protested here and it was then charged that the company had been doing a banking business in this state without having filed a certificate with the state banking department. Mr. Miner announces that very shortly he will examine the officials of the company.

Seattle, Oct. 20.—The Seattle branch of the International Bank and Trust Company of America has closed its doors and is in charge of a receiver. The assets of the local bank are given as $87,000 and the liabilities $95,000.

San Francisco, Oct. 20.—As a result of the failure in Mexico City of the International Bank and Trust Company of America the branch of that bank in this city is not open for business. The following notice was posted on the door: "Owing to the suspension of our Mexico City branch, this bank is closed pending investigation by the bank commissioners."

Mexico City, Oct. 20.—There has been a run on the banks here as a result of the failure of the International Bank and Trust company.

Shut Out of New Jersey

Jersey City, Oct. 20.—Vice Chancellor Stevenson announces that he will sign a decree restraining the Asphalt Company of America from the exercise of its franchise in New Jersey and from collecting and paying money. The company has been pronounced insolvent by the United States courts and receivers have been appointed.

Liabilities of Nearly Three Millions

New York, Oct. 20.—The schedules of the Stock Exchange firm of Edwin S. Hooley & Co., which failed on July 27, which were filed today, show that the total liabilities, secured and unsecured, are $2,729,672. The assets are placed at $2,417,178 actual value at this market.

Auto Victim Gets $5000 Damages

New York, Oct. 20.—Mrs. Louise Johnson obtained a verdict of $5000 against the city of New York and the Automobile Club of America, jointly, for injuries received in an automobile accident on the South Shore boulevard, in which three persons were killed and several others injured. Mrs. Johnson sued for $20,000.

Oregon Town Held Up

Newburg, Ore., Oct. 20.—For two hours this place was practically under control of a gang of bandits, whose object was to blow up the building of the Bank of Newburg and loot the vault. Though several charges of dynamite exploded the steel failed to give way and the bandits departed. The building was practically wrecked.

Grim Can Stand Pounding

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.—Joe Gans, the lightweight champion, and Joe Grim, the Italian pugilist, who stood six rounds before Bob Fitzsimmons and received severe punishment last week, met last night in a six-round fight. The Italian received a severe pounding, but the colored champion was unable to knock him out

"THE TRULY ELIJAH"

Admits That That He Is After Pocketbooks as Well as Hearts

New York, Oct. 20.—When Mr. Dowie opened his meeting at Madison Square Garden last night he faced an immense throng. When he closed it his audience had dwindled to only a few hundred people besides the "host" he brought with him from the west. He fretted, fumed, threatened, cajoled and finally resorted to the use of epithets, his hearers meanwhile leaving the meeting, several hundred together, drowning the sound of his voice.

His talk was devoted chiefly to denunciation of tobacco smokers, liquor drinkers and newspaper men, all of whom he classed as "dirty dogs" and "dirty birds." Several times the audience hissed Dowie. After one such demonstration he shouted: "We come here and we get your impudence, but I will get your hearts and then I'll get your pocketbooks. There is nothing so joyful as spending money for the Lord. They say I came to New York for money. I do not deny that soft impeachment."

Finally he came to the promised story of revelation. He quoted scripture to show that Elijah was to come a third time. A minister had told him that he was Elijah, but he was loath to believe it, but finally after going over the situation carefully, he made up his mind that he was truly Elijah.

Terrible March Through Wilderness

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—After suffering terrible hardships Captain Ferry and 47 members of the crew of the steamer Eldorado passed through this city en route for Montreal. The Eldorado struck an uncharted rock at the entrance of Hudson bay and sank. Every member of the crew succeeded in getting ashore, but were completely destitute of provisions and saved only the clothing they wore. They marched through the wilderness for 42 days, covering nearly 600 miles. Their suffering was intense, but not a single man succumbed. They struck the railroad two days ago and were taken on board by a passing train.

A Bondsman's Heavy Loss

Paterson N. J., Oct. 20.—Two bonds, one for $5000 and one for $4000, furnished by Philip Geyer for the appearance of Rudolph Grossman and William MacQueen, the anarchists, for trial on indictments charging them with atrocious assault and battery, have been declared forfeited in the court of quarter session. Geyer says he has learned that Grossman is in Canada and MacQueen in England. He offers to pay the expense of extradition proceedings if the state will try to bring the men back for trial.

Chattanooga Won't Be Sold

Trenton, Oct. 20.—In the United States circuit court a writ of replevin was taken out in the case of the cruiser Chattanooga, which was advertised to be sold by the sheriff of Union county today under a judgment obtained against the Crescent Shipyard company. The obtaining of this writ operates to restrain the sale. The cruiser is uncompleted and the government has already paid $600,000 on account. It will cost about $500,000 more to finish the construction of the vessel.

Charged With Theft of $100,000

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 20.—City Marshal Rammage of Haywards has arrested William Carthew in that place on a charge of being a defaulter in the sum of $100,000. It is stated that Carthew was a confidential clerk in a bank in New York, and while acting in that capacity stole $100,000, which was squandered on a woman. It is claimed that he fled from New York and came to California.

Troops' Endurance Tested

Fort Riley, Kas., Oct. 20.—Monday's maneuvers were calculated to test the endurance of the troops and they succeeded admirably. The blues marched far out into the country of the browns, had a skirmish with them and fell back on their own camp. The browns, composed of cavalry, rode over 30 miles during the day, while the infantry marched about 20. The fighting was very spectacular.

Strike Considered Likely

New York, Oct. 20.—The Interborough Rapid Transit company last night refused to grant any concessions to the former engineers, now employed as motormen, and the former firemen, now variously employed by the company. The action of the company will probably result in the men going on strike.

Santos Dumont Has New Balloon

Paris, Oct. 20.—C. P. Bryan, United States minister to Portugal, was a passenger in the car of Santos-Dumont's latest dirigible balloon during a successful test made at Neuilly. The new balloon is 148 feet long and has a capacity of 2010 metres. The petroleum motor produces 60-horse power.

Killing Was Justified

New York Oct. 20.—The coroner's jury exonerated Charles C. Wentisch from all blame for shooting and killing Sylvester L. Reeves on the night of Oct. 16. Reeves died of a shot wound inflicted by Wentisch, when Reeves had tried to break into the home of Wentisch.

Acres of pine trees are close to the house in the rear, and it is a part of this forest that Mr. Kneizel has bought to add to his already attractive summer home.

AFTER THE MIDNIGHT LUNCH.

Take a Dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and You Will Feel All Right in the Morning.

When you feel mean and measly, and your feet weigh a ton the morning after the night before, can you tell what was the cause?

It may be you ate too much, or, possibly, the last glass ought not to have been taken, or something else.

But even if you did know the cause, you would feel just as bilious and mean in the morning.

Fix that stomach so that it will be hungry, and take care of what you put into it? Before going to bed take a dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and then in the morning your head will feel all right, your stomach will digest what goes into it, and your liver will act naturally.

Every bottle of this reliable remedy contains 60 doses of good, honest medicine that will bring health and happiness into the life of everyone who uses it. For years this Specific has been sold for 50 cents, but in order to bring it within the reach of all, the price is now 25 cents. "60 doses, a month's treatment, for a quarter of a dollar."

Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles, and says it is the finest stomach and liver medicine he ever had in his store. If you are not perfectly satisfied with it after using the medicine, he will hand you back your money without question. 20-22-24

CITY COUNCIL.

The first thing was for the citizens to agree upon a lot.

Councilman Hardwick thought as the matter was one of public interest it should be considered by the whole body.

Councilman Langelier—All councilmen could go to Atlantic and hear for themselves. Ladies were interested, and if a stormy night they would not come to City Hall but would go to a hall near their homes.

Councilman Nichols thought convenience of Council should be considered. Every member is entitled to fullest information.

Councilman Reardon believed meeting should be held at Atlantic. He did not think joint committee would make much progress. He suggested the Council hold a special meeting at Atlantic.

The motions of Councilmen Gassett and Nichols were withdrawn.

Upon motion of Councilman Gassett it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be until Friday evening, Oct. 30, at 7.30 at Music Hall, Atlantic, give a public hearing on the school lot.

An order was reported, to add $200 received from the Metropolitan Park Commissioners to the $200 appropriated by the city for the tide gate at Blacks creek, that the meadows may be overflowed for skating. Referred.

Orders making appropriations to repay two sums ($19 and $43.94) for tax titles were referred.

MORE LIGHT.

Councilman Hughes offered an order for two incandescent lights on Rogers street and Hall place. Referred to Executive.

ELECTION ORDER.

Councilman Bass offered the usual order for the State election, to include in addition to the election of officers a, vote on the acceptance of the Luce Act for joint caucuses. Order adopted.

An order for polling places at the State election was also adopted.

The adverse report on the acceptance of Johnson avenue was taken from the table and accepted.

Upon motion of Councilman Piper the Committee on Streets was requested to report Nov. 2 on the acceptance of Federal avenue.

HIGH SCHOOL ORDER.

Councilman Polk moved that the joint committee on Finance and Public Buildings report Nov. 6 on the order for enlargement of the High school.

Councilman Nickerson opposed as unnecessary. Plans were now in the hands of School Committee.

Councilman Polk thought there was a systematic scheme to delay enlargement and that the citizens should know why. He said the committee had voted to report.

Councilman Nichols, City Auditor Sidelinger, and Councilmen Nickerson and Polk took part in the discussion which followed.

The motion requesting a report was lost.

A petition for a light on Adams street was referred to the Executive.

The $9,000 loan order was amended by striking out the Atlantic school lot, and an order for $1,400 for drain was passed.

Councilman Langelier had the resolutions from the Atlantic school meeting taken from the file and laid on the table.

Adjourned at 9.55.

An Excellent Press.

The members of the Suburban Press Association held their regular monthly meeting at the United States Hotel, Boston, yesterday afternoon, and after attending to the business of the meeting, accepted an invitation from E. E. Jameson of Wollaston to visit the Mechanic Fair, and examine a new press the Whitlock Company has on exhibition. Many improved the opportunity and were very much pleased with the excellent machine on exhibition, and wished they had one like it. It is one of the best, if not the very best exhibit in the whole fair. It was doing splendid work, very rapidly, without a jar. We would invite all who visit the fair to examine this press, for we know it will please them.

Y. M. C. A. Bee Hive.

What a busy place the Y. M. C. A. is these days! says the Brockton Enterprise. Those in charge realize full well the excellence of having abundant attractions at all times and to please all classes, and they are preparing a winter's campaign that would have made the eyes of the churchly boys of twenty years ago stick out with amazement. Sports and games and music and good fun—the Y. M. C. A. of Brockton doesn't believe that religion should be regarded as a dull, dark, cold experience calculated to chill the soul and bring the religious one to a feeling that he was passing through the outer part of the evil place while still on earth.

SHOT FROM PARKHURST

Directed at "Prophet" Dowie and His Methods

"ABOMINABLE BEHAVIOUR"

Effervescent Wrath and Coarse Invective Beyond the Bounds of the Respectable—Head Either Twisted or Heart Infected

New York, Oct. 21.--Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst has sent the following open letter, under date of Oct. 20, to Mr. Dowie:

"Rev. John Alexander Dowie,

"Dear sir:

"I do not want to be presuming, but doubt if it is any more presumptive in me to come and try to clarify you than it is for you to come and try to clarify New York; and I do not know which of us has taken the heavier contract. I attended your service at Madison Square Garden last evening and I went determined to enjoy it if I could, and to be benefited by it, and to go away and refute some of the charges that I had heard alleged against you.

"But it was of no use; your behaviour on the platform crushed every throb of sympathy I had with you. I never heard from a public speaker such a discharge of effervescent wrath and coarse invective. I went to hear you preach the gospel and you preached Dowie, Zion City, 'stink pot.' I was ashamed of you and almost ashamed to be in your audience. It was a long way below the standard even of the circuses that I have attended in the same garden.

"The only consolation I could derive was that it was so abominable and so far beyond the bounds of the respectable that even those in your congregation who did not know what Christianity is would have no idea that it had anything to do with what you were saying.

"Of course, the ridiculousness of the performance was only enhanced by the immensity of your pretensions. If you claimed to be only an ordinary man there might be some hope for you, even with what you call the 'rabble,' but the rabble is discriminating and can determine as keenly as the keenest between a prophet and a juggler, between an Elijah and a mountebank.

"I say this in no spirit of anger, but either your head is twisted or your heart infected, or you have blundered badly in your method. You cannot bully people into Zionism nor blackguard them into the kingdom of Heaven. I hope you will take this in the kindly spirit in which it is offered.

"Yours sincerely,

"C. H. Parkhurst."

Dowie talked for two hours last night before a great throng in Madison Square Garden, the burden of his talk being denunciation of the clergy and the press. When he began the huge Garden was crowded and the police say 6000 persons who could not gain entrance were turned away. In half an hour, however, the crowd began to surge out and then the police refused to admit any late-comers, saying they feared a riot.

It was with some difficulty that any semblance of order was kept. The speaker's outpouring of inventive was repeatedly interrupted with hisses and shouts of disapproval. At one point Dowie ordered the police to arrest two men in different parts of the building, who had interrupted him.

Carrie Nation, who occupied a seat near the front, asked "Elijah" to answer some questions. He refused, and ordered her to sit down. Dowie then praised the spirit in which Mrs. Nation had warred on the saloon, but said she used wrong methods. Mrs. Nation again demanded the privilege of asking questions. At once the Zion guards surrounded her and with the help of several policemen hustled her out The meeting was one of continuous disorder.

Dowie had announced that he would reply to an attack by Rev. Dr. Buckley, published in a magazine last year, but he only referred to this subject casually. He attacked Rev. Dr. Henson, Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, J. P. Morgan and others and announced that hereafter he intended to keep the newspaper reporters out of his meetings.

Dowie Looking For Cut Rates

Chicago, Oct. 21.—The Trans-continental Passenger association is unable to decide what to do with regard to John A. Dowie, his elders and his missionaries. An application was received by the association requesting that Zion City be given the privilege of clergy rates, such as is accorded to the ministers and missionaries. A refusal to grant this privilege, according to Dowie, would be a plain violation of the law which prohibits discrimination. The application was finally referred to a committee.

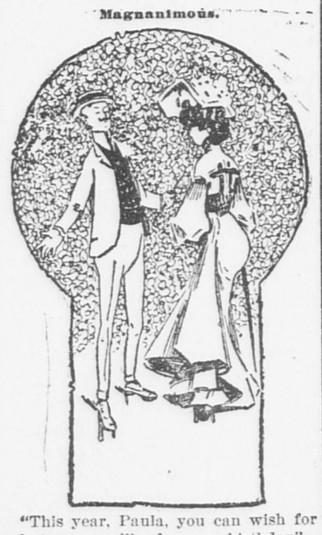
Business Man Killed

Bath, Me., Oct. 21.—E. F. Gannett, a prominent business man of this city, was crossing a street when a hack approached. Gannett did not realize his danger until the horses were upon him. Medical assistance was given, but he died later from his injuries.

Skeleton Probably Identified

Whitinsville, Mass., Oct. 21.—The skeleton found a few days ago in the woods in the edge of Sutton has been identified, probably, as that of Patrick Rawls, a laborer, aged about 50, who disappeared from his boarding place here March 10, 1902.

Magnanimous.



"This year, Paula, you can wish for whatever you like for your birthday"—"Oh, how delightful!"

—"for I shan't be able to give you anything at all!"

Not Quick Enough.

De Soake—Gee, but I'm glad that I'm not a cat!

De Tanke—Why?

De Soake—Because they have to lap up everything they drink with their tongue, a lick at a time.

The following letter was lately sent to a Shefield schoolmaster:

"Dear Sir: Please excuse my boy a scratching hisself. He's got a new flannel shirt on."—Tit-Bits.

Quincy May Wait For Through Cars.

EXPRESS TRAINS

Over Milton Branch Make a Difference.

N. Y., N. H. & H. Do Not Want Opposition.

Steam Railway Tracks Divide Street Railway Systems.

[Special Correspondence of The Ledger.]

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—An interesting story is told at the office of the Railroad Commissioners about the petition in which Quincy people are interested for getting a grade crossing over the Milton Branch near the car barns at Neponset bridge.

Just north of the Neponset river is the car barn to which run the electrics connecting with Brockton, Quincy, Nantasket beach and that part of the country. Perhaps 100 feet distant, or so, stands the car barn for the electric car system on the north side of Neponset river.

But between these two barns runs the Milton branch of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. What the people of Quincy want very much, and what is earnestly desired by the people of that entire section is that there be permitted a grade crossing of this short piece of track. If this could be done, then the electric cars from Nantasket could run through to Dudley street in Roxbury. There they would make connection with the elevated system and so rapid transit would be secured into Boston.

Public hearings have been given and ended on petition, the fact that a grade crossing was desired, necessitating the presentation of a second petition after the first one was in, which asked that the cars from the south side of Neponset might have the right to run to Dudley street.

After the hearings on the entire proposition were closed, early this month, came the determination of the New York, New Haven and Hartford people to increase largely the number of their passenger trains. Formerly the Milton branch had but little service, and if there had been no increase the problem would probably have been comparatively simple for the railroad commissioners. But now it is said that there is a desire on the part of the railroad to run express trains frequently in order to save its patronage from the trolley competition, and it may be desired to run trains around by the Shawmut branch, using that and the Milton branch for circuit trains.

This puts an entirely new face upon the matter. It is said that the new problem will have to be studied carefully by the commission, and it is intimated that the chances of a favorable decision are not nearly as good as they were before.

This does not come directly from the commissioners, nor does it appear that the railroad managers put on the additional trains with any idea of making trouble for the people who wish to improve their electric facilities in connection with the Boston Elevated.

It is said that Mayor Bryant of Quincy has been especially interested in the case, buttonholing the commissioners whenever he met them, and showing much solicitude for the good of his city. But things may go the other way.

Sewer Connections.

The following estates were connected with the public sewer last week:

Ira Litchfield, Washington street.
Forbes Craig, Centre street.
J. W. Pratt, (2) Broadway.
Peter Morton, Bennington street.

The Kilties.

The Canadians and Scotchmen of Quincy have been on tiptoe ever since the Ledger announced that the Gordon Highlanders were likely to visit here and give performances on their return from their Western tour. The "Kilties Band," as the organization is popularly known, gave a matinee and an evening performance in Music Hall on Tuesday, under the auspices of the Quincy City Band, to large audiences.

The "Kilties" are more numerous than when they performed in Tremont Temple last year. Besides the forty musicians mentioned in the Ledger the other day, there are in the organization six Highland dancers, two bagpipers, seven soloists, four British military buglers, and a vocal choir of eighteen voices. All of these have done military service for the late Queen Victoria in various parts of the world, and all appeared in full kilted uniform.

The Study Club.

The second meeting of the season of the Study Club held Tuesday evening in the rectory, Elm street. Subject,—Leading men and results of the French Revolution. A paper on leading men was given by Frank Sargent. A paper on results by Miss Clara Emery. Both papers were very interesting. The next gathering of the club will be an entertainment followed by a lunch and social hour in the parish house of Christ church on Thursday, Oct. 29, to which all the members and their friends are cordially invited.

Naturalization business has been rather quiet at the district court thus far this fall.

BATTLESHIP TRIAL.

The Missouri and the Cruiser Denver off Cape Ann.

The trial trip of the new battleship, Missouri, built by the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, and a sister ship to the new Maine, will occur today off Cape Ann. She will endeavor to break all records attained by battleships.

The board of inspection and survey of the navy met yesterday at the Parker House and held a long consultation with the commanders of the five station ships that will do duty. These members of the board were present: Capt. Charles J. Train, president; Naval Constructor, J. J. Woodward, Capt. L. C. Logan, Lieutenant-Commander Albert B. Canaga, Commander W. C. Cowles; also the commanding officers of the commanding officers of the Buffalo, Chicago, Atlanta, Baltimore and Peoria.

The trial trip of the new cruiser Denver will be held tomorrow morning over the same course, from Cape Ann to Boone Island, Me.

Big Fire at Barre.

NO PRACTICAL BENEFIT

To Canada In Awarding of Portland Canal

WE GET TWO SMALL ISLANDS

Which Destroy the Strategic Value of Wales and Pearse Islands In the Dominion's Hands—United States' Victory Is Almost Unqualified

London, Oct. 21.—Senators Lodge and Turner sailed for New York today on the steamer Cedric. Mr. Dickinson will start for home Saturday. All the American commissioners and counsel express natural satisfaction at the award.

In an interview with Clifford Sifton, the Canadian minister of the interior and agent of Great Britain, the latter said:

"The award was substantially in favor of the United States all along the line. We have, it is true, succeeded in establishing two of our main contentions—firstly, as to the Portland canal, and secondly, as to the existence of a mountain boundary line; but, while finding in favor of our contentions upon these phases of the case, the tribunal has worked out a line in such a way as to deprive us of all practical benefit. While we get Wales and Pearse islands, which the Americans have been in possession of for some years, they are deprived of value to Canada by the fact that the two islands which lie immediately outside and command the entrance to Observatory inlet and to Port Simpson are given to the United States. I do not profess to understand the principle upon which these islands are given away.

"The mountain boundary line, while adopted as contended for by Canada, is drawn so far back that the United States gets practically all she has seriously contended for.

"As to our position on the subject of the heads of inlets, it has apparently received no consideration from the majority of the tribunal."

A Canadian who has been most intimately and prominently associated with the Alaska case, said: "It is the hardest blow the imperial tie has ever received. The place Lord Alverstone filled was clearly that of agent for the British government. It will be a shock to the Canadian people to know that, notwithstanding all the professions of friendship and sympathy, the solemn formalities of the international court have simply been used for the purpose of handing over Canadian territory to the United States. Canada has been not only spontaneous but zealous in defense of British territory, and has not hesitated to sacrifice blood and treasure in defense of the motherland. She must now face the fact that when imperial interest or friendships require it her territory may be handed over without the slightest hesitation. This marks a most serious epoch in the relations between Canada and the mother country."

"From a British viewpoint the best that can be said of the settlement of the Alaska boundary dispute is that it is over." In the foregoing words The Graphic strikes the keynote of London press comment on the decision of the Alaska boundary tribunal. This decision is generally denominated "the surrender of British rights on the altar of American friendship."

The United States wins a nearly unqualified victory in the Alaska boundary award. Our chief contention, that we were entitled to an uninterrupted strip of land along the coast and all its inlets is sustained. Canada is deprived of any access to the Pacific north of Port Simpson. The new line about the head of Lynn canal is substantially that fixed by the modus vivendi of Oct. 20, 1899.

The variations of the new line from that set out in the modus vivendi are to our advantage, confirming the United States title to White pass and Chilkoot pass. These are the only practicable avenues from the Lynn canal to the Klondike country. The Canadian custom house in White pass must now give way. We also gain the right to the supposedly rich gold fields on the Klehini river.

The Portland channel line, at first reported as granting the Canadian contention, turns out otherwise. The main channel of the northern inlet is taken as the route of the line, and this, while giving to Canada Wales and Pearse islands, leaves in possession of the United States two smaller islands, Kannaghunut and Sitklan. These command the entrance to Portland channel, and the ocean passage to Port Simpson, and destroy the strategic value of Wales and Pearse in Canada's hands.

The Canadian commissioners, Jette and Aylesworth, are especially bitter upon this point, and besides refusing to sign the award, they have issued a statement which shows the strength of their feeling that in this point Canada's interests have been "betrayed."

One English-Speaking Nation

Limerick, Ire., Oct. 21.—Referring in a speech in this city to emigration, Andrew Carnegie said that "Ireland's loss in this respect is America's gain." He looked for the day when the United States and Canada would have a population of 250,000,000, and with the British Isles would form one nation. "We are an English-speaking people," he said, "and we are aliens to the nations of Europe."

TRACEWELL CRITICIZED

But President Is Satisfied as to Integrity of Action as Comptroller

Washington, Oct. 21.—Some minor matters affecting the various departments were considered at Tuesday's cabinet meeting, but no announcement was made concerning action upon any of them. Some consideration was given, it is understood, to the report of Bonaparte and Conrad on phases of the postoffice irregularities. The report was made directly to President Roosevelt and dealt particularly with the charges made by former Cashier Tulloch of the Washington postoffice.

In some respects the report is said to criticize the official acts of Comptroller Tracewell of the treasury, but both the president and Secretary Shaw are agreed as to the integrity of Tracewell's actions. Intimations have been made that as a result of the Bonaparte-Conrad report Comptroller Tracewell might be dismissed from the service, but it can be said there is no foundation for such a statement. The president has not discussed with anybody such a proposition. Mr. Tracewell will remain in his present position so far as anything now is known.

Leaves Prison to Face Death

Boston, Oct. 21.—After having served four years of a life sentence for assault and roobery, Thomas F. Logue of Lawrence was pardoned by Governor Bates, released from Charlestown state prison and sent to his home to die of consumption. The brutal nature of the crime with which he was convicted had evidently precluded all hope of leniency. Until yesterday J. B. Cover, whose life nearly paid the penalty of the murderous attack, was bitterly opposed to Logue's release. When, however, Cover heard that Logue could not possibly live long he yielded.

Pettingill Stirs Up Hornet's Nest

San Juan, P. R., Oct. 21.—The witnesses who testified before the federal grand jury when it found an indictment against Collector of Customs Cruzen for having received unlawful emoluments of smuggled goods, and who were accused of perjury in the endorsement with which United States District Attorney Pettingill nolled the indictment, are furiously angry with Pettingill and are threatening to sue him for slander. The local press sustains the grand jury in its action.

Easier Feeling at Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 21.—The arrival here of $4,000,000 by express from New York, Philadelphia and Wahington has cleared the financial atmosphere and there is every confidence that the crisis in the financial district of the city has been safely passed. Conferences were held last evening between various interests and it was stated late last night that no further trouble among the banks or financial institutions of the city was probable.

For Reciprocity With Canada

Detroit, Oct. 21.—The Detroit board of commerce last night adopted a resolution favoring Canadian reciprocity and urging the immediate reconvening of the joint high commission for the purpose of negotiating a new reciprocity treaty with Canada. The resolution declares that the most intimate trade relations would be mutually advantageous.

Railroad to Cross Canada

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The National Trans-continental railway bill has passed the senate. The bill provides for a new railroad from the Atlantic to the Pacific through the agricultural districts of northern Canada and practically new territory will be tapped. The new bill will now become a law on receiving the royal assent.

Advance In Price of Soft Coal

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—At a meeting here of soft coal operators of the Clearfield region it was decided not to sell coal at the mines below $1.50 a ton for a period of one week. This in an advance of from 25 to 50 cents a ton. If it is found that this price can be maintained the $1.50 rate will be continued.

Embezzlement Charged

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Samuel J. Windler, for more than 10 years secretary of the Riverside, N. J., Building and Loan association, is missing and a warrant has been issued for his arrest, charging him with embezzlement from the building association.

Bandmaster Sousa Laid Up

Washington, Oct. 21.—John P. Sousa, the bandmaster, was thrown from his horse while riding in the city. He fell on his head and hip and was unconscious for a few minutes. His physician expects him to be out again in a week.

Colombia Grows More Poor

Panama, Oct. 21.—The minister of the treasury at Bogota has announced that the national revenues are 30,000,000 pesos, paper currency, less than the expenses.

WOMAN'S WORLD

A COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

By Ability and Over Difficulties She Has Made Her Way.

Foremost among the names of the great educators of this country stands that of a woman, Dr. M. Carey Thomas, the president of Bryn Mawr college. As the leading exponent of higher education for women she has achieved a worldwide reputation. In 1895 she was elected to the board of trustees of Cornell university, the first and only time a woman has been thus honored. She was the leader of the movement to have the Johns Hopkins Medical school opened to women on the same terms with men. When the University of Pennsylvania opened its graduate department to women she was chosen to make the principal address.

Doubtless much of her enthusiasm in this cause comes from the memory of her own struggles to obtain a doctor's degree. She was born in Baltimore about forty years ago, at a time when college education for women was practically unknown. Cornell university gave her an A. B. when she was only nineteen, but the heart of the ambitious young student was set upon obtaining a Ph. D. In pursuance of this goal she went to Leipsic, but after three years of study there her application was refused. Still undaunted, she repaired to Zurich and entered the university. In eight weeks' time she passed with the highest honors the oral examinations, made extremely difficult by the faculty because she was a woman.

On her return to this country she was made dean of the faculty of the then infant college of Bryn Mawr and co-operated with its president, Dr. Rhodes, in plans for organization. So effective was her work that on the retirement of Dr. Rhodes in 1895 she was unanimously chosen by the trustees to succeed him. It is the building up of this great college for women, with its self government and group systems which have served as models for similar institutions, and its graduate school attracting students from all parts of America, that President Thomas as regards as her life monument. To this work she has given all the forces of her brilliant mind and magnetic personality, and the outcome is more than fulfilling her hopes.

The new buildings which Bryn Mawr has added from time to time have always been full to overflowing, and this in spite of the fact that the standard of entrance requirement has been frequently raised.

Training of Nervous Children.

There are two types of nervous children—the active child, always on the go, inquisitive and acquisitive, but delicate as the mimosa leaf, shrinking back into itself at the first repulse or harsh word, and the pale, quiet, sensitive child, intelligent and thoughtful, but retiring. The child of the first type develops into the inventor, the active philanthropist, the promoter, the schemer, the adventurer, or the leader of criminals, according as his training has been wise or foolish. The child of the second type becomes the philosopher, the thinker, the man of letters, the poet, or the misanthrope, the sour recluse and the plotter against society and government.

One great mistake in training a nervous child is to try to strengthen the nerves by opposition. A nervous child must be guided, not driven; if afraid of the dark it must not be forced to sleep in a closed room without a glimmer of light. It should not be laughed at for its timidity, but should be gently convinced by argument of the groundlessness of its fears. At the same time its physical constitution should receive careful attention. Tonics, good, digestible food, an open air life, avoidance of long hours of study, frequent changes of air and scene are all not only serviceable, but, one might say, indispensable, in the transformation of the child of nervous disposition into the well poised man or woman.

Points on Flesh Gaining.

One woman advises one who wishes to gain flesh to follow these simple rules:

To gain flesh eat a hearty breakfast and dinner and a light luncheon.

Bread, butter and stewed fruit and milk are necessary articles of diet. Let the bread be brown, or gluten loaf, and have the milk hot, but not scalded; take some often during the day, but eat no solids between meals.

Olive oil and fresh green salad and cream with baked bananas are fattening foods.

Before retiring take a warm bath to induce sleep, which aids in increasing flesh. Devote ten hours to sleep, and if possible rest for ten minutes every afternoon.

Spend one whole day in bed each month, sleeping as much of the day as possible.

The only true way to rest is to lie down in a darkened room with closed eyes and think of nothing.

Even five minutes of such rest is valuable; the muscles of the face relax, and one does not get a hard, set look, which adds many years to the appearance.

Take time to eat your meals. If you have not time to get a meal leisurely go without it, as it will not injure you a quarter as much as to eat it in a hurry.

Needs Much Tact.

"In giving a small dinner," says a hostess of experience, "it requires considerable forethought to prevent husbands and wives from sitting together or even directly opposite each other. Some married people have the disconcerting habit of criticising the remarks made at social gatherings by the partners of their joys and sorrows. 'What made you say that?' or 'Why did you mention this or that?' is the not infrequent sequel to an evening abroad, and it promotes sociability to arrange things so that this kind of conjugal criticism cannot take place. With a party consisting of four married couples this is a difficult thing to do, and it is advisable therefore whenever possible to invite two married couples only, with two women and two men who are unrelated to one another. This may seem an unimportant detail, but the neglect of it is responsible for many dull dinners."

Musty Rooms.

To remove the close, "old" smell about a room it is necessary to take up the carpet or matting if there should happen to be either. The carpet should be beaten and fumigated by letting it lie on the ground for several days, removing it at night. Finally it should be covered thickly with dry salt, allowed to stay in the sun for several hours, then swept thoroughly. Before replacing scour the floor in hot water and carbolic acid. The walls, if papered, should be stripped and washed with chloride of lime. If painted scrub with carbolic acid soap. When dry have them repainted or papered. If all this is performed thoroughly there should be perfect freshness and cleanliness in place of the musty odor.

Rice Cream.

Rice cream makes a very good Sunday pudding, as it must be prepared the day before it is required. Wash two tablespoonfuls of rice in several waters and cook slowly in one pint of milk, adding more milk if necessary by degrees. Soak half an ounce of gelatin in a little water and when the rice is perfectly soft add the gelatin, with two ounces of loaf sugar. Stir till all is dissolved and mixed. Pour into a basin, flavor to taste and when cooled a little add a gill of whipped cream. Mix all together, put into a wet mold and set to cool.

An Erect Pose.

You can look taller by holding yourself erect without the least bending of the knees, which must be drawn in firmly, but not held tensely. This erectness of pose can be acquired without stiffness by practice. Draw the hips well back and throw out the chest. Carry the head high and well poised. Reach up with the right arm, as though trying to touch the ceiling, then with the left, then with both arms. This exercise lengthens the line from the waist up.

Duty of a Cheerful Face.

To wear a cheerful face when the heart is aching is not deceit. When a good housekeeper cleans the front steps and porch before she sets the house to rights she does not mean to deceive passersby. She merely shows some pride in her house and some consideration for her neighbors. We conquer our heartaches more quickly when we begin by considering the friends who are near us.

A Hand Bath.

When a woman's hands state in sign language that she is her own cook and housemaid she should try the effect of a corn meal bath. Dip the hands first in warm soapy water, then in corn meal, rubbing the meal thoroughly over them. Rinse, and it is surprising what soft, white hands will be brought to view.

Tongue on Toast.

Tongue or ham on toast is a perfect dish. Chop the tongue or ham fine, beat the yolks of two eggs, add them to the tongue or ham with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard and a little cayenne pepper, stir until the eggs are cooked and serve on squares of buttered toast.

Women should take five minutes a day from work and lie flat on the back, all muscles relaxed and eyes closed. This will be found a wonderful preserver of health, beauty and strength.

Felt shoe brushes are now used by the young woman who cleans her own shoes. They are said to be superior to the old time bristle brushes.

The women's clubs in Germany exert their influence to prevent girls from serving in hotels.

A warm sponge bath will relieve nervous strain.

ROBBERS OVERHAULED

Through Persistent Efforts of Maine Sheriffs and Posse

CLOSE TO CANADIAN LINE

When They Were Captured at a Remote Point—One "Winged" Before They Surrendered—Found to Be the Reynolds Brothers

North Anson, Me., Oct. 21.—After the most exciting and tedious burglar hunt in the criminal history of the state deputy sheriffs and a posse succeeded in capturing the remaining two of the four men who escaped from the clutches of 200 or more armed citizens of Norridgewock, Mercer and adjacent towns on Wednesday of last week. The men were taken at a remote point in the wilds of northern Maine, about 50 miles northwest of North Anson, and 20 miles south of the Canadian boundary. Before they surrendered the posse in pursuit were obliged to fire on the fugitives, wounding one of them in the leg.

It is learned that the robbers are not Fred and John Burns, as was stated by the other two of the quartet who were captured after a running fight of several miles in Mercer, shortly after the burglaries in Norridgewock. The authorities here state that the fugitives just taken are John Reynolds and his brother Fred, alleged criminals hailing from Colebrook, N. H., and for whose capture for offences said to have been committed in that state the authorities some time ago offered a reward of $250 each. The correct names of the first two men captured are George M. Coville and John Nutting, and they hail also from northern New Hampshire, where they are wanted for crimes alleged to have been committed. When they were arrested at Mercer they said that their names were Charles Smith of Pittsburg, N. H., and John Morrison of New York.

The large posse in pursuit of the men who proved to be the Reynolds brothers surrounded the section of woods in which the brothers had taken refuge. The spot adjoined a section of swampy land, and owing to its boggy nature it was not thought the robbers would attempt to cross. But they managed to elude the posse and headed for Stark and Anson. This entire section of Somerset county was aroused, telephone and telegraph messages were sent to officers and citizens of various points through which it was anticipated the men would pass in their efforts to make the Canada line, which lies about 20 miles northwest of here.

Deputy Sheriff Varney of Mercer village was in charge of the man hunt up to Wednesday night, and he and a dozen other deputies, several constables and citizens continued the search until this week. The men were chased to Anson, New Sharon, Industry, Farmington, North Portland, Kingfield, Carrabassett and Eustis, but at this point the limit of the telephone and telegraph was reached.

During the past day or two the officers had reason to believe the men were nearing the Canada line and were probably not a great many miles from Beaver pond, near the Quebec boundary.

Judging that the fugitives would attempt to cross over into Canada, Deputy Sheriffs Emory, Durgin and Priest made a detour and went into Quebec province in order to head off the robbers. The latter were followed in the rear by Deputy Sheriffs Dunbar and Millay, accompanied by a small posse, and guided by John Parnell. Occasionally this party discovered traces of the fugitives, but their movements after leaving the end of the telephone system are not known in detail.

Last night a telegram was received from Megantic, Que., from Deputy Sheriff Emory, stating that the posse on the Maine side, headed by Deputies Dunbar and Millay, had located the burglars in the wilderness. When called upon to surrender the outlaws opened fire with their revolvers but the shots went wide.

The fire was returned by the deputies and one of the fugitives was hit in the leg. Both men then surrendered. The fact of the message being received from Emory is accounted for by the arrival of the deputy and party on the scene from Quebec just 30 minutes after the capture of the Reynolds brothers by the party under Dunbar and Millay. It is thought that Deputy Sheriff Emory and his men heard the firing and were thus able to locate the other officers.

Owing to the almost impassable nature of the country between the point where the capture was made and Skowhegan the prisoners will be brought here by a roundabout way.

Judgment of $1,900,000 Sought

Minneapolis, Oct. 21.—A suit in which judgment is asked in the sum of $1,900,000 has begun in the district court of Hennepin county by stockholders in the Star Petroleum company, to restrain the officers of the company from removing the books of the concern to Texas. The suit is to compel the officers to account for their actions. It is alleged that the defendants have misused the funds.

To Help Bay State Republicans

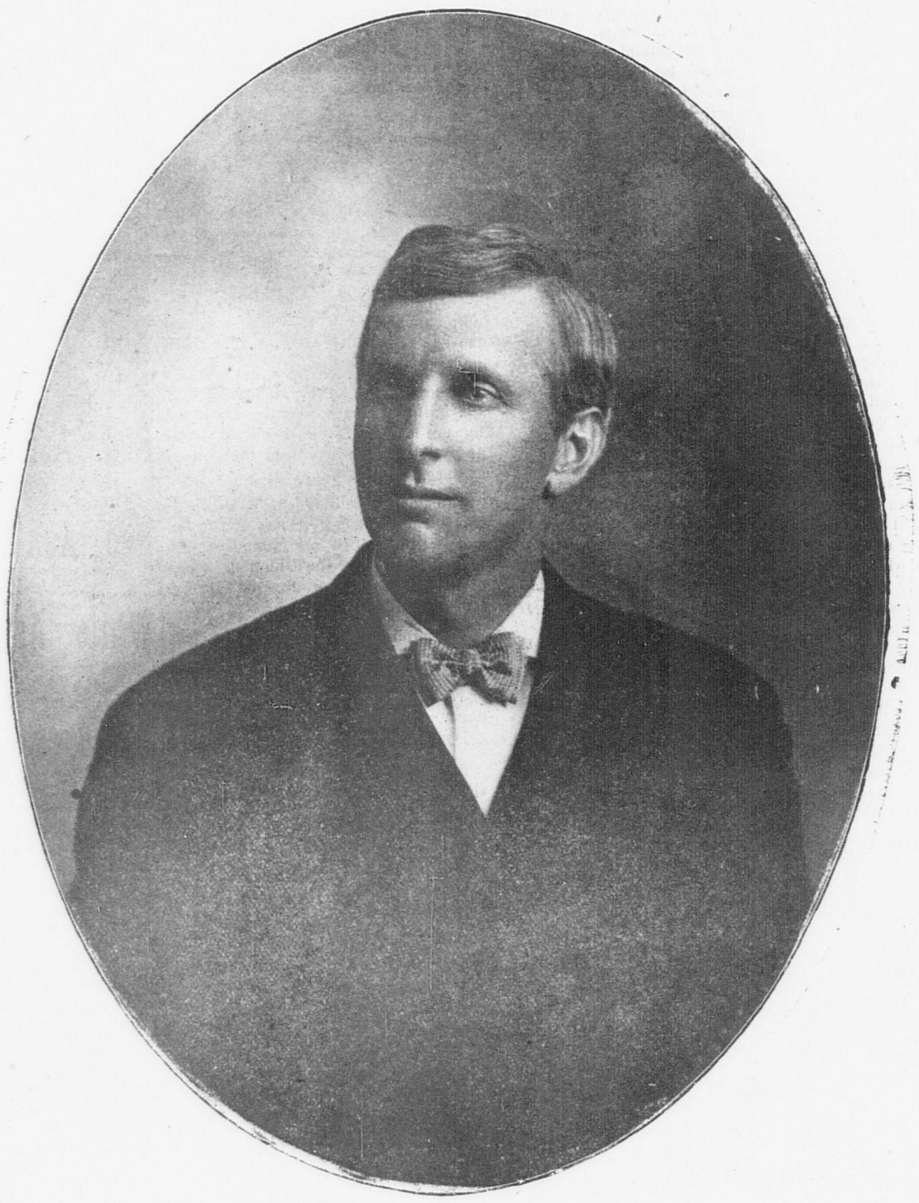
Des Moines, Oct. 21.—Secretary Shaw has notified the state central committee that he will make but four campaign speeches in Iowa, instead of 15, as was originally planned. This is due to the acceptance of an invitation to speak at Boston the night of Oct. 29.

VOTE FOR

ARTHUR W. NEWCOMB

FOR MAYOR.

At the Republican Caucuses, WEDNESDAY, Nov. 4.



IT MEANS:

No city employee under pay from City Hall working at the polls election day.

No political combine among high city officials to retain themselves in office.

No professional services at a discount offered in exchange for votes.

No parasites.

BEAUTY SPOTS.

A few waving locks about the forehead, temple and ears are becoming to a thin face.

If you will apply a little pure white vaseline to your eyelashes every night it will aid their growth and strengthen them.

Don't become too stout. Although plumpness of contour is by no means unbecoming, corpulence is a thing to be avoided.

Onion sandwiches are said to clarify the complexion. The onions must be sliced very fine and salted, then placed between thin slices of bread and butter.

The arrangement of a woman's hair will either enhance or mar her appearance. The wise woman will wear her hair in the style that proves becoming, whether it be fashionable or not.

Don't think that because you are forty and fair you also should be fat and that nature has laid down a law that women shall accumulate layers with years, like a magnolia or any other tree.

Don't wash your face in cold water if you have been weeping. It only makes a bad matter worse. Instead bathe with rosewater and then put a soft cloth saturated with rosewater over the eyes.

Before a Girl Promises.

Whole hearted affection is, in the majority of cases, absolutely essential to married happiness, but it must be combined beforehand with practical common sense, which will enable a girl to gain a clear insight into the character of the man she proposes to marry. Girls nowadays are apt to think that a handsome, attractive and fascinating lover must necessarily make a good husband, whereas it frequently happens that he is totally unfit for the responsibilities of married life. Before a woman promises to be the wife of a man it is a duty which she owes to herself to learn everything about him. It is not inquisitive or mean, as many girls seem to imagine, to inquire into his private life and affairs. The time to find out if your fancy for a man's looks is indorsed by his life's history and whether his habits are good and his tastes congenial is during courtship days. Each girl should scrutinize her prospective husband's character as carefully as she would a new hat or gown, and then she should be able to decide fairly easily as to whether he is the right man for her to marry.—American Queen.

To Avoid Nervousness.

Dr. H. T. Patrick says: "If you wish never to be nervous live with reason, have a purpose in life and work for it; play joyously, strive not for the unattainable, never regret the unalterable, be not annoyed at trifles, aim to attain neither great knowledge nor great riches, but unlimited common sense; be not self centered, but love the good and thy neighbor as thyself. The time to start such an ideal life is in early childhood. Two capital errors in the training of children are deplored by the author: (1) Leading children into pleasures and duties beyond their years, and (2) magnifying their importance in the family and in society. It is quite as dangerous to give to children the pleasures of adults as to require of them the labors of the mature."—Woman's Life.

The Linen Closet.

Every housewife takes or should take a lively interest in her household linen, and, unlike her sisters of old, she is not obliged to spin her bedclothes with her own fair hands. She may, of course, embroider or hemstitch by way of decoration, but that is all. The housewife of today takes as much pride in her store linen as did her grandmother in the work of her own hands. The closet may be either an old carved oak chest or a low box converted into an ottoman and draped with cretonne. Failing one of these, an old trunk may be utilized or there may be some recess at the landing of the stairs which could very well serve the purpose.—American Queen.

To Make Beds.

The greatest attention is given in hospitals to the proper making of beds. The nurses sometimes spend months chiefly in learning to make a bed. One of the hospital ideas may well be copied in every family where there are invalids or weak people. This is to stretch the under sheet as tight as possible and pin it firmly to the under side of the mattress with safety pins. Wrinkles in the under sheet are a fruitful source of discomfort to a sick and restless person. This system of pulling the under sheet taut and fastening it so it will stay in place will prevent such annoyance.

Women and Advertisers.

How important advertising has become is suggested by the observation of a smart man that there are but two great editors in the country—"one is the American woman and the other is the American advertiser," says the Philadelphia Record. The woman's taste has much to do with the character of the leading journals, and the advertiser's enterprise makes everything possible to the newspapers. It is because women read the newspapers that most advertisers buy its space.

Room Lights.

The difference between gas and oil lamps in the matter of vitiating the air of a room is significantly indicated in the fact that florists use lamps in their greenhouses, gas never. Too frequent emphasis can hardly be put upon the necessity of airing a room thoroughly that must be slept in after having been gas lighted throughout the evening, a precaution too often neglected.

Good Afternoon

The name of Mr. Albert Crane should be added to that of his beloved father Thomas Crane, as one of Quincy's greatest benefactors. Perhaps to the son belongs the honor of being the greatest benefactor. The late Thomas Crane at his death requested his family to erect a memorial at Quincy. The original plans called for a Public Library building to cost about $20,000 The family found the sum inadequate to erect such a work of art in Quincy as they desired, and resulted in the erection of a building costing upwards of $50,000. To this the widow of Thomas Crane added $20,000 for the purchase of works of art, repairs and improvement. Smaller amounts have been given from time to time.

Then, last year came the gift of the Joseph T. French estate by Albert Crane, which was cleared of buildings, improved and added to the Library grounds at a cost of about $8,000. Now, Albert Crane proposes to purchase all the estates owned by the Quincy Hospital corporation on Washington, Coddington and Spear streets, and after clearing them of buildings, add them also to the Library grounds, at a cost of upwards of $20,000.

The cash gift of the Crane family to the city will therefore aggregate over $100,000, which is more than the original requests of President John Adams or Dr. Ebenezer Woodward. The Adams Academy and the Woodward Institute had to wait a great many years before building, for a sum to accumulate. The Public Library received a completed building seven years after the death of Thomas Crane, and the fact that over 99,000 volumes were loaned at the Library last year shows that it is appreciated by Quincy people.

A common mistake among some of the petitioners for and against school lots at Atlantic is to assume that it is a ward affair. When it was proposed to build a new schoolhouse at Quincy Point the residents on Elm street or even Union street did not put in a petition remonstrating against the location of the building at Washington court. The children on Elm street and Edwards hill will not attend the Washington school and therefore have nothing particular to say relative to the location of a schoolhouse at Quincy Point. It would have been different had it been a Ward Two affair.

So it should be at Atlantic. Norfolk Downs has its school, the Massachusetts Fields building, amply large for some years yet to accommodate all the children in the school district which it now covers. In this district is Billings road and some of the streets to the north. Therefore, residents of these streets should not have any voice in the location of a schoolhouse at Atlantic, any more than the residents of Ward One.

We maintain that if the present Quincy school building at Atlantic is to be abandoned that the new building should be erected on the same lot. If the present building is to be continued in commission, the location of the new building should be north of Squantum street and should be settled largely by the residents north and west of Squantum streets.

POPE AWARD.

For Land Taken for Metropolitan Boulevard

Settled in Court by Agreement

The Estate of Mrs. Hannah Pope Will Receive $4,272.50.

The petition of the estate of Hannah Pope at Atlantic, for the assessment of damages for land taken by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners for the Quincy Bay Shore reservation, was in order for trial at the Norfolk Superior court at Dedham this week. The land was taken March 14, 1900. By agreement, the estate of Mrs. Pope will receive $4,272.

The petitioner was represented by T. E. Grover, R. E. Belcher and C. T. Gallager. The Commonwealth was represented by R. G. Dodge.

This probably completes the settlement for all the land taken for this reservation, and it is hoped a start may be made early next year on the parkway which will be a great benefit to Quincy and the South Shore.

FEW WERE TARDY.

And Quincy Schools Have Excellent Percentage of Attendance.

The High school led in percentage of attendance during the first four weeks of school, ending Oct. 2, but the Massachusetts Fields and Willard were a close second, all with over 96 per cent. Benjamin Johnson and Perley A. Glass sail on the Commonwealth from Boston on Thursday for a trip to England, France and Germany. They go to introduce a new shoe hook machine recently invented by Mr. Glass. This machine is a wonder in its way. Up to the bringing out of this new invention, the best machine in use would only put in 120 hooks a minute and the holes for them had to be punched separatedly. This machine will punch the holes and put in 480 hooks a minute.

Mr. Editor:

We noticed in the Patriot recently a communication expressing a desire a neighbor had, that the old shack of a building on the post office lot might be removed.

But, Mr. Editor, can you guess why it has not been moved ere this? Perhaps you can, but the writer bets $5 to doughnuts that no woman in the city can guess correctly why the owner has not moved it. Tom.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903-1904.

ADVERTISE IN THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

SOCIALISM LOSING

Its Former Champions Leaving It Continually.

Increase in Its Number Few and Far Between.

Looked Upon as an Exploded Doctrine in Massachusetts.

The tendency of political third party movements to speedily disintegrate, when the stimulas of exceptional circumstances is removed, has been frequently noted, and receive additional exemplication in recent developments within the Socialist party of Massachusetts, which last year, under the abnormal conditions prevailing during the coal strike, made such formidable accessions to its vote as to cause its partisans to indulge in wildly optimistic claims as to its future growth.

Recently, however, a manifest reaction against the ultra Socialistic propaganda has shown itself in the very ranks of the party itself, not solely among its recent proselytes, who have had their eyes opened as to the sinister nature of its policy, but among some of its hitherto prominent leaders, who have formally renounced their affiliations with the party and given public reasons for their course of action.

The June number of The Federationist, the official journal of The American Federation of Labor, contains a somewhat notable article entitled, "The Labor Problem cannot be solved within the Political Arena." The writer of this article is Martha Moore Avery, until recently the leading light of the Socialist Party of Massachusetts, and one of the strongest advocates, with the pen and upon the platform, of the so-called "class-conscious" political organization of labor.

During the past ten or twelve years Mrs. Avery has contributed possibly more than any other one individual to the upbuilding of the Socialist Party in this State, devoting her entire energies to writing, teaching and speaking for the Socialist platform, and her eminent abilities have been freely conceded, even by those who disagreed most strenuously with her theories. After years of close study and analysis, Mrs. Avery has finally reached the conclusion that political Socialism is impracticable as a working force, and expresses her further conviction that the Socialist Party as at present administered, is hostile to the interests of morality; that it attacks religion, and would undermine the very foundation of the social order by destroying the sanctity of the family tie.

Not only this, but she has learned from bitter personal experience that this party, which professes an ostensible desire for greater freedom, is itself governed by intolerant principles, and denies liberty of discussion, even to its own membership.

In The Federationist article, Mrs. Avery takes the same ground that in the ultimate the labor problem is an economic problem, and cannot therefore be adjusted within the political arena, She sums up by saying, "The trade union is today the supreme factor in maintaining the standards of American living, and for that reason alone it well deserves and is commanding the respect and enlisting the services of those who would aid in making righteous conditions for this work-a-day world.

Another important defection from the Socialist leadership is that of David Goldstein, an influential member of the State Committee, and the first Socialist candidate for Mayor of Boston. In his letter of resignation to Chairman Carey Mr. Goldstein says: "Socialism stands for the dissolution of civil law, and the destruction of those institutions which promote and sustain civilization." Mr. Goldstein tenders his resignation from the State Committee and from the various local sections in which he was formerly an active untiring worker. He also announces that he has in preparation a mass of documentary evidence, "which will prove to the candid mind that a vote cast for Socialism is a vote cast for the destruction of the church, the State and the monogamic family."

Of even greater significance, from the point of view of organized labor, are the reasons stated in the resignation of William R. Dyer, former treasurer of the Boston Socialist City Committee and Chairman of the Ward 7 Committee. Mr. Dyer is the business agent of Boston Lodge of the International Association of Machinists, and organizer for the Metal Trades Federation of America. Mr. Dyer charges, and has certainly been in a position to know whereof he speaks, that the attitude of the Socialist towards the trade union movement is that of using it for political purposes with no regard or respect for its economic advancement. He further alleges that the Socialist party is aiding and abetting the "Socialist American Labor Union" in its vicious work of trying to break down the power of the legitimate trade unions. For himself he asserts that the trade unions offer a field large enough for him to use his entire energy, and great enough to hold its entire loyalty.

It is evident from these few sample cases of withdrawal, cited from among many in various portions of the State, that while the Socialist Party may be able to make a few new converts, it will have a difficult task to hold those it has already gained, and that the problem will become more perplexing as the real antagonism of Socialism to all that true Americans hold dear is borne in upon the minds of the wage-earning citizenship.

Chas. C. Hearn Tells How to Get Well for This Small Sum.

I want to say just a few words on the causes of sickness, and how to get well. Constipation and dyspepsia are responsible for more suffering than all of the other diseases combined. I have been selling, for the past few months, a medicine that has made many remarkable cures,—"Dr. Howard's Specific" for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia. This was introduced at half price, but the sale having been so remarkable, they have decided to make 25c the regular price in the future, and I am glad to say that I shall be able to continue to sell 60 doses of the best Specific in the world for the small sum of a quarter of a dollar, and guarantee to return the money if the remedy does not cure.

Dr. Howard's Specific is not a "cure-all." It is simply intended to cure constipation and dyspepsia, and it will do it; if it does not I will refund the money on your simple say so. Each package contains 60 doses of the most reliable and successful medicine in the world.

I shall expect to have my sales on this Specific doubled within the next two months. Tell your friends that they can get well for a quarter of a dollar, without running any risk of losing their money. Oct. 19, 21, 22

Prompt and Kind.

The following notice complimentary to Officer Bradley appeared in a recent issue of the Globe:

"If just the art of being kind is all this sad world needs," the supply met the demand in Boston one evening this week. A Lowell woman who was an eye-witness of the gracious act, felt it incumbent upon herself to send the following account of the incident:

"A mother and her son were passing through a crowded terminal when the boy suddenly fell in a fit. Before the awfulness of being alone in a strange city had been fully comprehended two men sprang to the woman's assistance and carried the unconscious lad to a retired place and gave him every attention until the attack had spent itself, and even then the mother was not left until her son had been taken in a wheel chair to the fresh air and fully restored so that he could walk to his train."

"The names of these kind men are Patrolman W. W. Randolph of division 1, Hanover street and P. H. Bradley of the police department of Quincy, who was detailed on special work at the time. The gratitude of those assisted was beyond expression, and the tact, skill and kindness of these men prove their fitness to occupy the positions they hold."

LAVANDERIA'S DEBACLE

By ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

Copyright, 1903, by Eliza Archard Conner

EMILE ZOLA employed the word "debacle" to signify a great catastrophe, a rupture, a deluge, a bursting forth. A bursting forth is a breaking out, and if ever woman broke out on this planet that woman was Lavanderia. So we say "Lavanderia's debacle."

The first time the boarders saw Lavanderia was on a high church holiday, one of those grand occasions which intervene, let us say, about twice a week in Manila. When it comes to observing saints' days there is more religion to the cubic inch in the Tagalo than in any other living creature. Wild horses could not drag him to his ordinary vocations on such a day. In the morning he stands at the street hydrant with as little clothing on him as the law allows, none at all if there be no policeman by, and pours water upon himself till he is wet all over, which is his idea of taking a bath. Then he dries himself in the sun, puts himself into his new embroidered holy week shirt and smokes and meditates and sometimes steps out to church in all his glory.

The little brown Tagalo wife, more modest and devout, pours water over herself in her own little patch of back yard, greases her black hair with cocoanut oil, patting it down till it shines like a mirror, then dons her grandest attire and goes to church.

It was on her way to church that the boarders first saw Lavanderia attired in the style of Filipino high art and fashion. She was bareheaded, and behind her in the dust dragged some eighteen inches of the rounded red cotton tail of her gown. No Tagalo lady would be "dressed up" without that terminal to her skirt. Her little brown feet were bare save for small wooden soled slippers that clattered and dragged upon the ground as she walked.

Thus festively attired, Lavanderia floated like a vision past the house of the boarders one high saint day. Astride her left hip rode a child of two years or thereabout, her left arm encircling him. This is the Tagalo way of carrying babies. The boy wore a shirt reaching down to his waist; beyond that nothing. This is the Tagalo way of dressing babies. It gives them ringworm to clothe them below the waist, the saying is. The boy did not belong to Lavanderia, however, as she carefully explained to the boarders when she came to know them better. He was merely "the son of her brother of her," and she was minding him out of pure good nature. To add to the attractiveness, as it were, of the picture she made that day, she carried between her lips a huge Manila cigar that looked like a young battering ram.

As she passed she lifted her face and deliberately measured with her eyes the white men who were looking down from the windows. She had thus adorned herself to make an impression on them, had this fiery hearted, red, black, brown creature. And not all the redness of her train and the shine of her greased black hair could obscure the brightness of her eyes as she threw their glance upward. They were strange eyes, large, black and glittering like the eyes of a cat. In spite of her cigar and the young one aride on her hip, she looked impressive, like a volcano goddess.

She was a lavandera, which sounds grand in Spanish. Like so many other things grand in Spanish, however, it becomes only mean and measly when turned into blunt English. In brief, she was a wash lady.

She came to the house next morning humbly enough, asking to be permitted to do the laundering of the gentlemen's dazzling white linen suits. She was a widow—a "viuda"—she told them, and very poor. Her husband had run away and joined the insurgent army and got himself killed by the soldados Americanos. If the senores would give her their linen to renovate it would enable her to buy food. Those of the boarders who were up in literature thought of Du Maurier's Trilby and granted her petition. Besides that, they gave her the name of Lavanderia.

So it happened that Lavanderia became wash lady in ordinary to the white men of the Manila boarding house. She did the linen skillfully at first and even returned it no more than a week later than she had promised. Then the Tagalo nature got the better of her, and she began to lapse. Aaron Burr of the famous motto, "Never do today what you can put off till tomorrow," would have been enraptured with the Tagalos. Not only will they not do today what they can put off till tomorrow, but they never do it at all until forced by dire necessity. So Lavanderia of the weird, passionate eyes began to lag with the linen. Worst of all, as time went on she manifested an uncomfortable tendency to court the boarders. This was before the shock came. Singling out two likely bachelors, she bestowed on them lavish attention. She brought them bouquets for their rooms. She sat beside them, close as the torridity of the temperature would permit, and manifested a disposition to stay there forever, smoking meanwhile as many cigarettes as the benevolent white men were willing to supply her with.

Plainly, Lavanderia wanted to marry one of the white gentlemen. Such things had been, and white men, Spaniards and Frenchmen, now and then an Englishman, had wedded brown women in the Philippines. At least if one of the big hombres Americanos would not take her permanently he might marry her for a little while, and even that was better than being tied to a brown stableman or house servant for a whole lifetime.

One of the bachelors escaped and went elsewhere to lodge, leaving the other to bear the whole brunt of Lavanderia's lovemaking. This was hard on the man who was left. Lavanderia came at early morn and dewy eve, sitting sadly silent, fastening her shining dark eyes upon the one face, transfixing with their tender gaze the bachelor who was left. She persecuted him with her attentions; she bade him to her hut of woven nipa palm; she invited him to attend in her blissful company native dances and feasts of roast pig and rice till he could scarce stir from home without the uncomfortable consciousness that somehow the brown wash lady would discover it and know where he went. He was a tender hearted youth, although city born and bred, and he could not think of taking away the laundering from Lavanderia. Did she not depend on this work for her bread? Presently the whole neighborhood began to take an interest in Lavanderia's love affair. The evil minded world, ever ready to believe wrong of a man just because he is a man, could not be convinced that he had not taken the initiative in the case. He groaned inwardly as he thought to himself, "If mother could only see me now!"

One Sunday afternoon, "dressed to kill," a new red gingham train streaming behind her like the fiery tail of a comet, her hair shining with an extra greasing and patting, the fair brown widow came to invite and accompany the object of her affections to a native dance. The tender heart which at all times stood in his way so restrained him that he did not wish to hurt her feelings even then. He told her to go on to the ball, and he would come by and by.

"Poco tiempo?" (in a little time) she asked.

"Yes, yes," answered the embarrassed bachelor.

"In an hour maybe?" persisted the enchantress.

"Yes, yes," again replied the troubled bachelor.

"Then I wait," said Lavanderia. She dropped her straw slippers outside the threshold, tucked her fiery train about her knees and squatted down, Tagalo fashion, in the very front door of the mansion, in full view of all who passed. "I wait," she repeated tranquilly.

For a young white man to be seen walking on the open street of a Sunday afternoon with a brown widow dressed in the height of all her heathen finery, with scores of waggish American soldiers and all his own acquaintances looking on at the show, was more than his nerves could bear. But to have the same "viuda" squatting barefoot and familiarly upon his front door step in sight of all the world was even worse. The bachelor softly withdrew from the chair in which he had been sitting near the door.

The hour passed by the clock. The brown widow with the fiery train sat the bachelor out fair and square. Perspiration had gathered upon his brow. He pulled himself together and informed Lavanderia in his broken Yankee Spanish that in the nick of time he remembered how he had made an engagement for that afternoon, and it would consequently be impossible for him to attend the Tagalo ball at all. Thereupon, murmuring her regrets in broken Tagalo Spanish, Lavanderia gathered up her brilliant train, stuck her toes into her slippers and tore herself away.

The bachelor breathed once more. It seemed to him life was again worth living. He gave the fair lavandera time to get clean away to the ball. Then he donned his best white linen suit and his best white Manila hat with the folds of ivory silk around it and sallied forth, anywhere, anywhere to escape the atmosphere of that dread presence. Thus he rushed unconscious on his soul's trial. With that spiritual intuition which, we are told, still lingers pure and unadulterated in savage races Lavanderia had perceived his strategy and balked it. She drew her dusty bare feet up under her upon a table in front of a palm shed near the street crossing and waited for her prey. When it came she pounced upon it. Like a cat, she jumped from the table to his side and started to convoy the handsome white youth in triumph to the dusky ball.

His feelings at that moment he could never afterward find language to describe. Only a professor of profane language could have done justice to the situation, and that the young man was not. He had not been in Manila long enough. He simply broke heartlessly and ruthlessly from that tender, detaining clasp and ran for his life. Lazy Manilese dwelling along a quiet side street who had awakened from their afternoon siesta were astonished at the spectacle of a long legged young man clad in snowy white running as if the fiend were after him—as it was, indeed, only that time it could not catch him.

What wonder that under the burden of Lavanderia's love the bachelor became pale and restless and could no longer sleep nights! It was harder on him than being in love himself. He grew dyspeptic and smoked more than was good for him.

The Spanish word for "trouble" is of the masculine gender, and very properly. One morning early a chewed up little brown monkey of a man was seen to enter the leafy hut where dwelt Lavanderia. He carried a shabby, small yellow trunk that might have contained either clothing or ammunition to be smuggled to the insurrectos.

Immediately arose a tremendous commotion. Dogs barked, poultry cackled, children screamed. Presently emerged from the dusty litterage Lavanderia. She was in a state of volcanic eruption. Never since the days of the bacchantes was enacted a drama more furious. Lavanderia hurled things about all over, boxes, rags, red robes, slippers, ironing boards, mats and saints' pictures. You have read in novels how people tear their hair, but perhaps have never seen anybody do it. Lavanderia did it literally. She dragged the confining comb from her long, oily locks and clawed them this way and that till she looked like a fury. She was a fury for the time. Her climax was to rush to the shallow ditch beside the street, throw herself into it and roll over and over. She tore up handfuls of grass and dust and scattered them over herself and upon the surrounding air. Her brown neighbors and friends did not interfere with her, but gathered in a ring around her off at a safe distance to see the show.

All the while there issued from her lips strange, monkeylike screams and jabberings, half Spanish, half Tagalo—to wit:

"Matrimony no good, husband no good, no want husband, no want matrimony, husband much bad, matrimony much bad, no want matrimony, no want husband—ang pang bang, macayuyung, matrimonio mucho malo, marido mucho malo, pag bag dagumag!"

This performance was merely the proper Tagalo manner of expressing the unpleasant emotions of the delicate feminine mind.

The truth was Lavanderia was not a "viuda" at all. She had a living husband, large as life—large as Tagalo life, that is, which is not much of a size. She was a-weary of him and desired to change him for one of the tall white gentleman boarders opposite. Her husband had been in Aguinaldo's army fighting the Americans, but had got away and come home.

Never was a husband more unwelcome than this withered up looking little brown man. The shock was more than Lavanderia could bear.

Suddenly she stopped rolling upon the ground, raised herself to a sitting posture and glared about her. At the diagonal street corner stood two American soldiers doing police duty in that part of Manila. They were beardless boys, yet tall, good looking and well grown. They wisely deemed it unnecessary to interfere with Lavanderia's show. The fact is they wanted to see the fun as much as anybody. Lavanderia perceived them and, with heaven knows what wild, yearning thoughts in her breast, made a dive for them.

"Ang pang bang igalang, marido mucho malo!"

The soldier nearest her was very young, pink cheeked and curly haired, yet having withal a sense of humor befitting the finished man of the world. He waved his arms toward her tragically and "shooed" her off.

"Go way, woman!" he cried. "Go way! I don't want you! I'm a married man!"

STRUCK A REEF

Twenty-One on Board Steamer South Portland Are Probably Lost

Marshfield, Ore., Oct. 21.—Steamer South Portland, which sailed from Portland, Ore., last Sunday loaded with wheat for San Francisco, struck on Blanco reef during a heavy fog.

Of the 39 people on board 18 have been rescued and 21 are still missing. The boat which is still out with several people has not been sighted since it left the sinking ship. Even if it has not been stranded it is almost certain that some of the weaker occupants will succumb.

Captain McIntyre was not inclined to talk for publication as to what course the ship was traveling or whether she was off her course when she ran on Blanco reef.

Field's Fight For Reinstatement

Rutland, Vt., Oct. 21.—President Roosevelt having determined to grant the request of Senator Proctor that the case of Fred A. Field of this city, who was recently dismissed from the office of United States marshal of Vermont, be reopened, Congressman Foster has gone to Washington and the other members of the Vermont delegation in congress will hold a meeting there for the purpose of determining a method of procedure. Field has also gone to Washington to assist the Vermont delegation.

Army Employes Charged With Fraud

New York, Oct. 21.—The war department is investigating charges of wholesale fraud in the quartermaster's department on Governor's island. James R. Seville, who resigned his clerkship in the quartermaster's department late in August, makes the charges. He directs his accusation against M. V. Kelly, superintendent of construction at Governor's island, and E. H. Ewald, chief clerk of the quartermaster's department at that post.

Russia Said to Control Manchuria

Berlin, Oct. 21.—The special correspondent of a Berlin newspaper quotes a journal published in the far east as authority for the statement that Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China, has concluded a treaty with China which gives Russia practical control of Manchuria, although under a nominal Chinese government. Russia undertakes to conduct any war arising with a third power from the new treaty.

Miners Not All Released

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Twelve of the 40 Welsh miners who arrived here on the steamer Haverford have been permitted to proceed to their destination. Evidence has been secured which leads the commissioners to believe the miners were brought here in violation of the contract labor laws. Mine owners at Ellsworth, Pa., it is charged, have brought many miners here under contract from Wales.

Weidenfeld Remains Suspended

Albany, Oct. 21.—The court of appeals has sustained the judgment of all lower courts in their refusal to grant a writ of mandamus to Camille Weidenfeld to secure his reinstatement as a member of the New York Stock Exchange, from which Weidenfeld was suspended for alleged improper participation in the suits to restrain the Northern Pacific merger.

Bishops' Pan-American Conference

Washington, Oct. 21.—Fifty-five bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States and of the church of England and Canada and the West Indies are attending the Pan-American conference of bishops here. The meetings are private and only such matters will be given for publication as the conference may authorize.

Stern Pleads Not Guilty

Washington, Oct. 21.—Leopold J. Stern, the Baltimore contractor arrested in Toronto under two warrants charging false pretenses in the supply to the government of satchels for rural free delivery carriers, was given a preliminary hearing in the police court here. Stern pleaded not guilty. The case is unfinished.

Meet With Moody's Approval

Washington, Oct. 21.—Secretary of the Navy Moody has approved the plans adopted by the majority of the board of construction for the two 13,000-ton battleships authorized by congress. These plans provide for a battery of four 12-inch, eight 8-inch and 10 7-inch guns and a speed of 17 knots.

Brakemen Meet With Accident

Portland, Me., Oct. 21.—By the breaking apart of a freight train at Sebago lake Brakemen Perry and Welsh were badly injured. Perry is the worst hurt, internal injuries being feared in his case. Welsh is expected to fully recover. The damage to the train was small.

Fishing Schooner Wrecked

North Sydny, N. S., Oct. 21.—Fishing schooner Catherine was wrecked on the rocks at Point Aconi. The wind and sea dashed fiercely on the little craft which in a very few minutes went to pieces, the crew having barely time to escape with their lives.

Inclined to Press Prosecution

Washington, Oct. 21.—It is believed here that the government will ask for an immediate retrial of the case of Miller and Johns at Cincinnati, involving transactions in connection with a turf investment case decision of the post-office department.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Accordion Plaited Skirts Still Popular—Chiffon Roses.

The accordion plaited skirts are really fascinating, and in the autumn they will be revived for evening wear, especially among girls. A good many in net voile and chiffon have been seen in various trousseaus, and the accordion plaited blouse, too, will have a revival of favor. It was always a smart mode and suited all slight women.

Many gowns are made of linon de soie incrusted with two or three different makes of lace in the form of medallions.

Chiffon roses are still used as trimmings, even on afternoon frocks. It is a lovely but perishable mode. The

LARCENY OF $50,000

Charged Against Former Treasurer of Lamkin and Foster Company

Boston, Oct. 21.—Legal proceedings growing out of the failure here of Lamkin & Foster, shoe dealers, led to the arrest of the former treasurer of the concern, Elmer E. Leavitt, charged with larceny of $50,000 from the National Union bank. When arraigned in the municipal court Leavitt pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 for his appearance on Nov. 4. The amount of the bond was furnished and he was released.

In addition to the complaint by the Union bank that Leavitt obtained from it wrongfully $50,000, the National Exchange bank figures in the case indirectly, the sum of $50,000 having been loaned by it to Lamkin & Foster upon representations made by the treasurer, but beyond attaching property in Medford, owned by Leavitt, for $75,000, that institution has taken no proceedings in the case. A similar attachment was filed by the National Union bank.

Before the failure of Lamkin & Foster Leavitt, as treasurer of the concern, was practically the head of it, and transacted most of the business. The defense asserts that the case is one for the civil, rather than for the criminal court.

After the failure of Lamkin & Foster, Leavitt ceased to have any connection with the business, and subsequently a reorganization of the concern was affected. The reorganized concern has no connection with the present case.

Carpetings, Rugs and Mattings.

If we had costly Boston rents to pay, we wouldn't be selling floor coverings at our low prices. Highest Grade Mattings for instance we sell at 35 cents. The same mattings are retailed in Boston's largest Department stores at 50 cents.

This is only an illustration, you can see for yourself if you will but take the time. Some folks take it for granted that whatever price a Boston Store asks, must be right. Shrewd buyers trade here for everything in the House Furnishing line. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Accordion Plaited Skirts Still Popular—Chiffon Roses.

The accordion plaited skirts are really fascinating, and in the autumn they will be revived for evening wear, especially among girls. A good many in net volle and chiffon have been seen in various trousseaus, and the accordion plaited blouse, too, will have a revival of favor. It was always a smart mode and suited all slight women.

Many gowns are made of linon de sole incrusted with two or three different makes of lace in the form of medallions.

Chiffon roses are still used as trimmings, even on afternoon frocks. It is a lovely but perishable mode. The

CITY BREVITIES.

See what W. G. Shaw has to say about "rocker comfort."

The "hosiery store" of Mrs. C. J. Miller in City Square has hosiery in variety, some as low as ten cents.

There was quite a crowd outside of Music hall Tuesday night listening to the band concert.

The coal men are the busy people just at present. They report however that they have an ample supply on hand.

About 1,500 are in attendance at the annual convention of the Massachusetts Sunday school convention at Brockton, which opened Tuesday.

The meeting of the City Council at at Atlantic next week will be the first time in the history of the City that the City Conncil has met other than at City Hall.

The lecture course by Leon H. Vincent, under the auspices of the Quincy Tennis Club will be opened Saturday evening, when he will speak on "Washington Irving as a humorist.

Four of the aged residents of Quincy Neck, who attended the first schoolhouse in that district, have issued a souvenir for the dedication of the new Washington schoolhouse at Quincy Point.

Auctioneer Johnson will have three real estate sales in a small radius on Saturday: The Thompson estate, on Copeland street; the H. H. Faxon property on Kidder street, and the George L. Miller property on Miller street.

The Quincy office of the Old Colony street railway has been made a receiving office for the Quincy division, and hereafter the work of issuing day cars, making up accounts, etc., which has been done at the Brockton office, will be done here requiring two additional clerks. The new order went into effect this week.

PLANS APPROVED.

Secretary Moody Favors Two $13,000 Ton Battleships.

Bids will soon be asked for the building of more battleships. Secretary Moody approved this week the plans adopted by the majority of the board of construction for the two 13,000-ton battleships authorized by Congress. These plans provide for a battery of four 12-inch, eight 8-inch and 10 7-inch guns and a speed of 17 knots.

Kindergarten.

Parents of children between four and six years of age are cordially invited to visit the kindergarten room at Miss Spear's any morning between nine and half-after.

The airy room on the Goffe street floor is heated by furnace and open fire, and on pleasant days is brigthened by the sun throughout the day. There is a piano to accompany the songs and marches which the children love. By a glance through the window chipmunk and gray squirrel are seen gathering nuts for their winter store. An occasional visit to the tower affords a grand view of the surrounding country and the sea with its interests. There are ample grounds for play and walks, and in the spring each child has a garden for growing vegetables and flowers. These are all advantageous factors in the educational development. Children are chaperoned to and from neighboring centres and under an efficient teacher during the session.

BLACKWELL LOT.

Valuable Piece of Land at a Low Price

Location Adapted to Present and Future.

"Observer" Replies to the Letter of "A Large Taxpayer."

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

"A large Taxpayer" in the Quincy Patriot of Oct. 17, speaks of the Faxon road site for schoolhouse as an ornament to the town and being pointed out "in ten years from now" as "one of the important and possibly ornamental public buildings worth mentioning in Quincy."

Now, though it is very desirable to have "important and possibly ornamental public buildings" that can be "pointed out" by patrons of our "anticipated boulevard," it is far more important that the needs of the present school population should be dealt with fairly.

Wherever the schoolhouse is built it should be an ornament, and the Blackwell lot affords an opportunity with streets wholly laid out on two sides, laid out half its length or more on the third side and possibly an opportunity for a street on its fourth, with 265 feet of concrete sidewalk on its front and fine shade trees well grown and in excellent condition.

The Ward Six Playground is directly opposite which insures light and air and an opportunity for the pupils to engage in games immediately on leaving their school limits.

Then, too, the "boulevard" if it is built as originally proposed will be but a very short distance from the schoolhouse as the land at the corner of Atlantic and Hancock streets has already been taken by the Park Commissioners and it is but a few rods from the Atlantic station and right in sight of it. At this point in one direction it is to proceed up Atlantic street a short distance, and then, somewhat to the north of it. In the other direction it is to follow the banks of the Neponset toward Milton. It is not impossible that the schoolhouse may be spied from that roadway in some of its reaches and certainly if it should become well-known as a remarkable building it would be but a drive of a minute or two up Prospect street from the boulevard to view it.

Beside, if the number of people who are to be pleased with a sight of the building is important where could there there be a much better place to find them than in the electric and steam cars which would be constantly passing in sight of it.

Taxes have been paid on the Blackwell lot for over one hundred years, it being originally a part of what is now Boston but was formerly Dorchester.

The reference to "the result of digging the cellar at the Atlantic station" is entirely misleading, and has nothing to do with the Blackwell lot, which has always been upland with a slope and with gravelly soil.

It might be cited that several large houses on Faxon road were vacant for years because the cellars were so wet and damp that people could not live in them.

Also it may be said that the proposed Faxon road lot is in a bleak locality and for pupils who have long distances to go might be especially objectionable.

We have never heard that the Wollaston people were intending to replant their schoolhouse on one of their high hills to prevent its being in an "inconspicuous locality" or that "Adams Academy" and the "Quincy City Hall," were to be moved to Houghs Neck on account of the near vicinity of the steam cars.

With a view to both the present and "the future well being of the scholars who are presumably to attend the school," we should feel it an injustice not to locate it in the centre of the already populous district, where are now the pupils to fill it and allow the imaginary population to await their numbers to erect in ten years from now an edifice suitable to their needs.

With the purchase of the Blackwell lot the city will become the owner of a valuable piece of land at a low rate, possessing advantages which ought to be apparent to a fair-minded observer.

HOUGHS NECK.

The summer season at Houghs Neck is at an end, and few outside of the all-the-year residents now remain.

Many cottage owners have been down this week to see if their property was damaged in any way by the storm. None of the cottages, however, suffered much.

Considering the severeness of the storm the yachting fleet had a lucky escape. The yachts that dragged their moorings and went ashore were damaged some but to no great extent.

The indications are that there will be considerable building at the beach next year, and several new cottages are under way.

Dennis Kelliher is building a cottage on Sea street in the rear of the Birds' Nest.

Charles Ryder is building a cottage on Cottage street.

Philip Catarius is building a cottage on the corner of Winthrop and Parkhurst streets.

HENDRIE --- BASSETT.

A Pretty Wedding Last Evening at St. Chrysostom's.

St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church was filled to overflowing Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock with a large assemblage to witness the marriage of Miss Evelyn Bassett and Mr. Charles Robert Hendrie, the event being a most interesting one to a large circle of friends of both the bride and groom.

The church altar and chancel were handsomely decorated with autumn foliage and pink and yellow chrysanthemums, the altar lights adding a soft glow.

The Episcopal marriage ritual always so impressive, was read by the Right Rev. Carlton P. Mills, rector of St. Chrysostom's church. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, Mr. Lucius A. Bassett, was preceded by the vested choir, ushers and maid of honor. Just before their arrival Miss Viola Wicknell of Hingham sang Hastings' "A Red Red Rose" with organ accompaniment.

The bride's gown was of exquisite lace over white silk, her long veil held back by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. The bride's sister, Miss Ruth Bassett, was maid of honor. She wore pale blue Mexican tulle over blue taffeta and a large blue picture hat. Her flowers were daybreak pinks.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Ernest Hendrie, as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Charles Gutterson, Mr. Nathaniel Caulder, Dr. William Walton and Mr. Harry Soule.

A small reception followed at the home of the bride, 75 Walker street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hendrie left for an extended trip through the Berkshire Hills.

St. John, Oct. 22.—Dr. William Bayard, for 40 years connected with the New Brunswick board of health and president for many years, has tendered his resignation. Differences of dealing with smallpox have, it is said, something to do with his action. Dr. Bayard is 90 years old.

AROUND BLUE HILL.

The Charles Eliot Pathway Will Add to the Attractions.

Good progress has been made this autumn, says the Herald, in the survey for the Charles Eliot pathway, which is to surround Great Blue Hill, in one place bridging over a ravine with the beautiful memorial bridge which has been given by friends of the late artist. The work is still in its preliminary stages, and the actual construction of the pathway will probably not begin until next spring.

All the preliminary preparations are, however, being carefully made, and it is expected that the various points of outlook, which will be created at intervals in the scrubby growth hat surmounts the summit of the hill, will add greatly to the scenic attractions of the top of the hill.

The bridge itself, as has been before noted in these columns, is to be built at a cost of about $3000, and will be simple and substantial and thoroughly artistic, in consonance with Charles Eliots's tastes. The prospect from it over Marigold valley and the wooded stretch of the Blue Hills will be particularly fine.

Another important piece of work in the beautificatson of this noblest and largest reservation of the Boston system, is the branch footpath, which has been practically completed, leading upward from the base of the hill at the point where the cars of the Blue Hill Street Railway Company stop, parallel to the Administration road, and meeting the old bridle path near the summit of the hill.

Since the opening of the new trolley line the attendance on the hill on Sundays has been enormous, in some cases aggregating 15,000 or 20,000 people, and on other days of the week a great many more people are noticeable than in former years.

The Class of 1905 Defeats the Class of 1906 by 24 to 0.

The first basket ball game in the girls' inter class series at Quincy High school was played on the Goffe street grounds Wednesday afternoon, the Juniors easily defeating the Sophomores by a score of 24 to 0. The game was too one-sided to be very interesting, but a goodly number of pupils assembled to witness the match.

The members of the junior team were their opponents' superiors at every point of the game. For the winning team, Miss Blacklock, Miss Barbour and Miss Todd played the best game. Miss Bates and Miss Miller did well for the sophomores.

The line up follows:

Massachusetts Worse Off Than Any Other State.

Pointers for Working Men Who Vote.

Protection, in the economic sense, is a word which has been so abused and maltreated of late that it has come to mean only a high tariff tax on something which the people want to buy. So handily has this word served the purposes of the men who have used the machinery of government to enrich themselves at the expense of the public for so many years that they claim a monopoly of its use, and refuse to admit that any kind of protection can exist except in the form of a tax. These interests hold of the home market in their clutch at their own fancy prices, and every time the consumer tries to protect himself, they tell him to "stand pat" and let things alone; that he is endangering "protection."

It was men of this type who made the people pay over a million dollars in duties on bituminous coal last year, and ran the price of anthracite to eighteen dollars a ton. It is this class that has kept a duty of two dollars a thousand on lumber of which the houses of the people are constructed, when there is not enough lumber in the country to supply the natural demand; that forced a duty of nearly fifty per cent. ($3,295,872) on the common vegetables the people imported for their tables last year, and of thirty-five per cent. ($1,217,409) on provisions, and ninety-one per cent. ($15,548,240) on woolen goods. It is these men whom senators of the United States are serving when they resist the demands of the business men of New England for cheaper raw materials and a larger market for their goods.

The prices of coal, iron, lumber and food stuffs have reached such proportions that building operations are in many cases checked, and the families of even well-to-do are compelled to economize on such necessities as table supplies while the poor have suffered; yet every request of the people for protection against such conditions, whether by the simple means of the reciprocity treaty (as with Canda), or by direct legislation, is met by political dictators with the command that the tariff be not touched, lest "protection" suffer.

The average voter is coming very rapidly to understand the nature of the gold brick which has been worked off on him, and he is studying public questions. The more he studies, the more plainly will he see that the men whose duty it is to represent New England in the United States Senate care more for personal power than for the welfare of New England, and are ready at all times to sacrifice New England at the behest of the great moneyed interests whose lobbyists at Washington have given the order to "stand pat" on the tariff. They resent any suggestions from their constituents which run counter to their own personal desires. They deny even, that the legislatures which elected them have a right to point their course.

Massachusetts is a manufacturing state able and anxious to compete in the markets of the world. She leads the country in the volume and quality of her product, and asks only that she be permitted to trade with foreign nations on fair terms. These terms are denied her, on the plea that "protection" will suffer if New England interests are given the protection which comes from an increased commerce.

In the first nine months of the present fiscal year, the port of Boston has shown a greater loss (twenty-four per cent.) of exports of domestic products than any other large seacoast port in the country, while other ports like Baltimore, New Orleans and San Francisco, have made tremendous gains.

In other words, these and other figures prove clearly that business is going away from New England, and unless something is done to check it, the decline will reach serious proportions.

What the people of New England, now demand is statesmen who will study how to promote, and not to ignore New England's interests; who will place business above party considerations, and do their best to solve, instead of to smother, the grave commercial problems which changed conditions have brought forth.

Great Woods For Skeletons

Southbridge, Mass., Oct. 22.—A mystery of four years concerning the disappearance of Mrs. Ann Devlin of Charlton was solved by the finding of her skeleton in an unfrequented spot near the shores of a pond in Charlton. This is the third skeleton found in Worcester county woods in the last two weeks. Mrs. Devlin, while partly deranged, disappeared from her home May 28, 1899. Peter Devlin, her husband, last night identified the skeleton as that of his wife by certain peculiaritics of dress.

Still on the Stage at 83

Boston, Oct. 22.—Scores of congratulatory messages from men and women prominent in the theatrical profession were received by Mrs. G. H. Gilbert, who is playing in "Mice and Men" at the Park theatre, upon the 83rd anniversary of her birth. Flowers were rained in profusion upon her and her dressing room just before last evening's performance was a perfect bower. Mrs. Gilbert today distributed her numerous floral offerings among the Boston hospitals.

Damages For Death by Fire

Bangor, Me., Oct. 22.—In the case heard in the supreme court arising from a fire in Ladd's restaurant, during which three persons lost their lives, the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $1000. The action was to recover $5000 for the death of Minnie Carrigan, it being claimed if there had been a fire escape she would have reached the street. A motion for a new trial has been filed.

May Charged With Murder

New London, Conn., Oct. 22.—Judge Coit found probably cause in the case of John May, charged with the murder of Charles Parleman on Oct. 3, and held him without bail for the superior court. Paul Brown, who was also charged with the murder, was discharged. Brown, it is understood, will be the state's principal witness against May, who is his brother-in-law.

Little Fellow's Fatal Mishap

Boston, Oct. 22.—While running for a touchdown in a football game in East Boston Edward Cook, aged 13, plunged head first into an entrenchment 20 feet deep. When his companions found him lying unconscious after the fall they summoned an ambulance, but the boy was dead before a hospital was reached. The skull was fractured by the fall.

No notice has yet been received of any political rallies to be held in Quincy.

AFTER THE MIDNIGHT LUNCH.

Take a Dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and You Will Feel All Right in the Morning.

When you feel mean and measly, and your feet weigh a ton the morning after the night before, can you tell what was the cause?

It may be you ate too much, or, possibly, the last glass ought not to have been taken, or something else.

But even if you did know the cause, you would feel just as bilious and mean in the morning.

Fix that stomach so that it will be hungry, and take care of what you put into it? Before going to bed take a dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and then in the morning your head will feel all right, your stomach will digest what goes into it, and your liver will act naturally.

Every bottle of this reliable remedy contains 60 doses of good, honest medicine that will bring health and happiness into the life of everyone who uses it. For years this Specific has been sold for 50 cents, but in order to bring it within the reach of all, the price is now 25 cents. "60 doses, a month's treatment, for a quarter of a dollar."

Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles, and says it is the finest stomach and liver medicine he ever had in his store. If you are not perfectly satisfied with it after using the medicine, he will hand you back your money without question. 20-22-24

18.22 KNOTS AN HOUR

Missouri Makes a New World's Record For Warships of Her Class

Boston, Oct. 22.—The new battleship Missouri proved herself the queen of the seas in her class in a speed trial trip over the Cape Ann course with weather conditions of a considerably handicapping nature. Steaming over a course of 33 nautical miles and return, the battleship made an average speed of 18.05 knots an hour, which, with unofficial tidal corrections greatly in her favor, is advanced to 18.22 knots, a new world's record for a warship of her class.

Against a semi-gale from the northwest she valiantly breasted a high running sea, reduced the odds against her, and triumphantly swept past the last stake on the course, reducing the record with an achievement unsurpassed in the speeding annals of naval history.

The best previous record ever made by a battleship of the Missouri's class was that of the Maine, a sister ship of the Missouri, which was 17.98 knots an hour, this being now eclipsed by the Missouri's performance of 18.22 knots, showing an increased speed of .24 knots an hour. On the southern run of the course, the Missouri made the remarkable record for a batteship of 33 knots in 1 hour, 47 minutes and 9 seconds.

Objection to Bryan Bequest

New Haven, Oct. 22.—As a climax of a hearing on the application for the probating of the will of the late Philo S. Bennett, accompanying which was a sealed letter which William J. Bryan of Lincoln, Neb., testified was a request that he accept $50,000, Judge Stoddard, who represents Mrs. Bennett, declared that if Bryan insisted upon receiving the fund, she would contest the mill. Mr. Bryan, in reply, said that he would not allow either his wife or his children to receive the money unless Mrs. Bennett were willing. He intended to ask the court to decide the validity of the bequest so that in case it was declared legal he could distribute the money among educational and charitable institutions.

POSTOFFICE REMOVALS

Axe Falls on the Heads of Two Departments

POINTS IN BRISTOW REPORT

Led to Summary Action by Postmaster General—Clerk Who Enjoyed Confidential Relations With Beavers Also Loses His Job

Washington, Oct. 22.—Postmaster General Payne has removed from office Michael W. Louis, superintendent of supplies of the postoffice department; Louis Kempner, chief of the registry division of the third assistant postmaster general's office, and C. B. Terry, a $900 clerk in the postoffice department, and directed the postmaster at New York to remove Otto Weis, a clerk.

These removals are the first result of Fourth Assistant Postmaster Bristow's report on the irregularities in the postoffice department. Information of the contemplated discharges did not leak out at the department until after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and at 4:30 the postmaster general made an official announcement of his action as follows:

"Michael W. Louis has been removed from the office of superintendent of the division of supplies because the recent investigation shows that he influenced the awarding of contracts for supplies to favored bidders; that he has been extravagant and wasteful in the administration of his office, and that he has paid excessive prices for supplies to favored contractors.

"Louis Kempner, superintendent of the registry system, has been removed for incompetent and negligent administration; for wasteful and reckless extravagance in sending expensive manifold registration books to a large number of fourth class postoffices, and for violating the revenue laws by a system of petty smuggling.

"C. B. Terry, a clerk in the division of supplies, has been removed for making false affidavits, attempting to obtain money from clerks under the guise that he could influence their promotion, and general inefficiency.

The postmaster general also stated that the postmaster at New York had been directed to remove Otto Weis, a clerk in the New York office, for collecting money from clerks to influence legislation and to procure promotions.

In reply to questions, Mr. Payne said the discharges were the result of disclosures made by the Bristow report. "I have read the report," he said, "and am free to say that my action today was the result of its perusal."

He declined to say whether there would be other removals as a result of the report, but it is understood that while a few others may follow, there will not be any wholesale dismissals. It is stated that there are three or four other employes upon whose conduct there is some reflection, and whose cases hang in the balance. They were not implicated so much as those whose cases were acted upon yesterday and some of them may remain permanently in the postal service, though possibly not in their present positions.

Weis, the New York clerk, who has been relieved, is said to have enjoyed confidential relations with George W. Beavers, late superintendent of the salary and allowance division, and he is charged with having acted as a medium through which other clerks in the New York postoffice were communicated with.

Terry is from Indiana. He was temporary clerk in the postoffice department and was afterwards removed. He made charges that he had been discharged from his position by John M. Masten, then chief clerk of the first assistant postmaster general, but now assistant superintendent of the railway mail service, because he had refused to give money to Masten for his retention, and the president directed his reinstatement. It is understood that the investigation failed to substantiate Terry's charges, and his permanent removal is the result of the failure.

Surrender to Tammany

New York, Oct. 22.—The Brooklyn Democrats are again at peace with each other, or appear to be. Whether peace was brought about by the surrender of Hugh McLaughlin to McCarren and Murphy, or through concessions from Tammany in promises of patronage, is not known, but it is certain that McLaughlin has fallen into line, and his campaign committee will now work in harmony with the Tammany committee.

Injunction Against Strikers

Chicago, Oct. 22.—An injunction has been granted to the publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. against Franklin Union of Press Feeders, restraining the latter from interfering with the business of the complainant, picketing its plant and intimidating its employes.

Funeral of Archbishop Kain

St. Louis, Oct. 22.—With all the pomp and ceremony befitting his high rank in the Roman Catholic church, the remains of Archbishop John J. Kain were laid to rest in Calvary cemetery. Cardinal Gibbons, five archbishops and 10 bishops were present.

To Lay Off Railroad Men

Albany, Oct. 22.—The Delaware and Hudson Railroad company will lay off 200 men, equivalent to 10 percent of the working force. Second Vice President Culver says that increased efficiency of administration is the cause of the reduction.

Prisoners of War.

The annual reunion of Massachusetts Asseciation of Union ex-prisoners of War was held Wednesday at East Boston. At the close of the business meeting the comrades were received by the W. R. C., No. 3, Department of Massachusetts, and invited to the hall, where a free and bountiful dinner was served. The president of No. 3 welcomed the ex-prisoners. The reunion was most successful. A vote of thanks was tendered the ladies of East Boston. Remarks from the Andersonville Monument Commission, of which T. H. Newcomb of Quincy is a member, were interesting. They visited Salisbury and were at the dedication of the monument at Andersonville where 13,700 Union soldiers rest. There were present from this city: Thomas Magee, William Bird, J. W. Hayden, H. O. Studley, S. D. Deforrest, A. A. Hayden, John Faircloth and T. H. Newcomb. An invitation was received from the W. R. C. to meet in Lynn next year.

Twenty Thousand People Outside Madison Square Garden

SCENE OF WILD DISORDER

Meanwhile the Head of the "Restoration Host" Orders Reporters Excluded and Refers to Them In Language Unbecoming a "Prophet"

New York, Oct. 22.—Many people narrowly escaped death in front of Madison Square Garden last night, while vainly endeavoring to get into the Dowie meeting. After 10,000 persons had been admitted the doors were closed, leaving, the police say, 20,000 outside. When it was found that the doors had been shut the wildest disorder prevailed, and the police, 400 strong, were for a time utterly unable to cope with the mad rush of the crowd. Men and women were knocked down and trampled on and despite the fact that the police reserves were called out, it was not until the meeting had been suddenly terminated by Dowie shortly after 9 o'clock that anything could be done with the crowd.

In the surging of the throng, Grace George, the actress, was swept off her feet, and trampled on and had her clothing torn. She accused the police of handling her roughly. Mrs. W. J. Buckley was caught in the crush and fell fainting to the street. She was badly bruised. Inspector Walsh was near the woman when she fell and with the aid of 15 policemen he rescued and carried her to safety. W. A. Brady, theatrical manager and husband of Grace George, Lorenzo Winter, a broker, and Channing Pollock, a playwright, were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

The crowd blocked all traffic in Madison avenue, Twenty-Sixth and Twenty-Seventh streets for more than an hour, and could not be dispersed until convinced that the meeting inside the Garden had ended.

Within the great hall the scene was comparatively tame. There were slight demonstrations from a thousand Columbia students and one of the students and a man in a gallery were arrested for disturbing a religious meeting.

For the first time Dowie ordered reporters excluded and those who were seated at the reporters' table were escorted to the door at Dowie's orders to his guards "to clear the tainted vipers out of here. Be careful how you handle them, not to get any of their filth on you. Now get out, you mean dogs, you yellow scoundrels of the press. We will have no more of you in here. I am paying for this place, you liars. This is my building. Hurry up, guards. The sight of them disgusts me. Don't waste any restoration talk on the liars. It is useless. They have sold their souls to the devil. I never hope to convert a reporter. They would be backsliders."

Dowie spoke only 15 minutes. He announced his subject as "divine healing," but when the meeting was closed to terminate the disturbance outside the doors he had gotten no further than a description of the Illinois Zion and a laudation of its founder.

A squad of inspectors from the health department invaded Madison Square Garden and ordered sweeping changes in the method of quartering the Zion guards and a part of the host of 4000 there. An order was posted that only a certain number of persons could sleep in each room and that there must be better ventilation. The inspectors also visited the kitchens and watched the preparation of the meals. The fact that 43 members of Dowie's followers whom he brought here are sick warranted the health department in taking action, Commissioner Lederle said.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole. Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903-1904.

Carpetings, Rugs and Mattings.

If we had costly Boston rents to pay, we wouldn't be selling floor coverings at our low prices. Highest Grade Mattings for instance we sell at 35 cents. The same mattings are retailed in Boston's largest Department stores at 50 cents.

This is only an illustration, you can see for yourself if you will but take the time. Some folks take it for granted that whatever price a Boston Store asks, must be right. Shrewd buyers trade here for everything in the House Furnishing line. We are saving money for thousands of families, we can do the same for you.

$5,000.00 GIFT

For Memorial Ward to Her Late Husband.

Trustees Accept and Discuss Plans.

Mrs. Lois K. Wales of Coddington Street the Benefactor.

From Brockton comes the news that Mrs. Lois K. Wales of Coddington street, Quincy, widow of Welcome H. Wales, a highly respected resident of Brockton, has placed in the hands of President George Clarence Holmes of the Brockton hospital her check for $5000 to enable the hospital corporation to build a memorial ward in honor of her husband.

The gift was accepted at a meeting of the executive committee Thursday evening and plans were discussed for building the ward. This $5000 is the first gift received by the corporation for a stipulated purpose. The only other large gifts have been $10,000 from Daniel S. Howard, $5000 from Lucius Clapp of Avon, the residue of the estate of George Stevens, amounting to $4000, and $1000 bequeathed by Mrs. R. P. Kingman. A H. Fuller, treasurer of the hospital, received on Thursday the $4000 from the Stevens estate. These amounts bring the endowment fund to $22,550.

Welcome H. Wales, in whose honor the memorial ward will be erected, was a native of North Bridgewater, now Brockton, and town clerk for 16 years. He was then collector of taxes and held that position till his death, July 2, 1879. He represented the town in the legislature in 1869 and 1871, and was made selectman in 1873, being reelected each succeeding year. His widow is the daughter of the late John W. and Almira C. Kingman.

TODAY'S COURT.

Massamino Dellasando was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on Sabino Amatucci at Weymouth. Case continued until next Monday.

Catherine Piper and her two sons Alonzo and George L. Piper were arraigned for drunkenness at Milton. Mrs. Piper and Alonzo were released without arraignment and George L. was sent to the State farm.

Carmine P. Gardiner was arraigned for assault on Louis S. Cleaves at Quincy. Case continued until Oct 28.

Spellbinders In a Riot

Cincinnati, Oct. 23.—Congressman Baker of Brooklyn, W. E. Hicks of New York and others have been holding day meetings here in the interest of Mayor Johnson's candidacy for governor. Hicks was addressing an open air meeting when A. J. Scholer, driver of a sprinkling cart, came very near running over Baker, who protested. The driver then used his whip on Baker and turned on the water, greatly to the discomfort of the crowd. A small-sized riot followed. Scholer was arrested.

Peaches on Smuggling Gang

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., Oct. 23.—Jack Lynch, who was arrested here with three Chinamen, whom it is alleged he was trying to smuggle across the border, has made a written confession, according to the officers, telling the story of an organization which had for its purpose the smuggling of Celestials and opium into the United States. He says there are several people in the Canadian Soo engaged in the traffic. Lynch says that he has been in the business for years.

Dan Patch's Wonderful Feat

Memphis, Oct. 23.—Dan Patch has made himself the king of pacers by going a mile in 1.56 1-4, thereby clipping 3-4 of a second from the world's record, held by Prince Alert. Beside making a new world's record the son of Joe Patchen lowered his own record by 2 3-4 seconds. The mile was paced without a wind shield and at the finish Dan Patch seemed as fresh and vigorous as at the start.

A beautiful shower at noon, but not appreciated by those who go to dinner t 12 o'clock.

Social at Wollaston.

The first social and supper given by the Alliance at the Wollaston Unitarian vestry Thursday evening called out an unusually large number. The tables were all filled and a most excellent supper was furnished. Those who had charge of the supper were the officers of the Alliance, Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Pratt, Mrs. Sprague, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Parlin. After the tables were cleared Mrs. Gurney entertained the company with a humorous recitation. The young women and young men who officiated as waiters made merry over a table of "Jenkins up." Piano selections were contributed by some of the young folks.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that next week is Hospital week.

Flax Night.

The pupils of the Quincy Mansion school listened to an interesting talk Thursday evening by Miss Clara West on "Flax." She spun the flax as she talked, and while she recited a poem on spinning. During her travels abroad she had picked up a bit of rare linen, a century old, made by a nun near Seville, Spain. Quotations from the poets relating to spinning were given by the pupils. Mr. Henry added to the enjoyment of the evening by playing on the pianoforte a spinning song of his own composition.

Took the Net Prize.

Two members of the Wollaston Golf club qualified on Thursday in a large list for the Country club cup, C. B. Cory and B. C. Wright. The net prize went to H. F. Amsden of the Wollaston club. In the match play Mr. Cory has as a rival, Mr. Gourlay of Country club, and Mr. Wright will play G. F. Willett of Oakley.

Other Wollaston men entered in the tournament were: F. W. Lawrence, J. A. Campbell, B. L. Pratt, J. F. Morril, E. C. Tarbell, A. L. White, G. A. Noyes, G. A. White, R. R. Freeman and C. A. Proctor.

Trains Delayed.

A freight car off the track, at the point where the tracks from the new freight yard join the main line, delayed all outward and inward trains this morning. The car jumped the track about 6 A. M. blocking the outward track. It was 9 o'clock before the line was cleared. In the mean time trains going both ways used the inward rail, this caused some delay.

Incendiary Fire.

The alarm from Box 41 at 8.35 Thursday night called the department to the old Woods barn on the corner of School and Fort street. The interior of the barn had been saturated with oil but the promptness of the fire department stopped the attempt of the incendiary.

Quincy Daily Ledger

ESTABLISHED IN 1889.

THE ONLY DAILY in Norfolk County Massachusetts.

Good Afternoon.

The sword of justice seems powerless against the pistol in South Carolina.

The free traders in England have started a free food league. It will probably suffer the same fate as the free silver league in this country.

If the Socialist editors of Germany continue to discuss the Kaiser, the prisons in the Fatherland will have to be enlarged.

Mr. Bryan's paper explains that a man may amass a fortune without being a plutocrat. It cites former Governor Hogg of Texas as an example, but it doubtless refers to its own editor.

The building of the new fire station at Houghs Neck seems to have been premature, in view of recent action by the City Council. The building was completed several months ago but has never been occupied. The sum of $3,000 was wanted to equip it with horses and permanent men, but $500 is all that the Council thinks it can afford to appropriate now, and that will all be needed for horse, harness and ladders. The Councilman from that section of the city says $500 would simply be a waste of money, and the order has been referred back to the committee.

Probably no one was more surprised than the Councilmen from Ward Four that the order for $6,000 for the paving of Willard street should have passed the City Council this week. The matter was referred to this Council by the Council of 1902. It was originally for $10,000 but the Committee on Streets amended the order June 22 reducing the amount. For nearly four months the order slumbered in the hands of the Finance Committee, until winter was almost here, when suddenly under a suspension of rules it is put through without a dissenting voice. It is not surprising that there is comment outside. It is openly charged that the money will be expended largely as a campaign fund.

Drift of Opinion.

☞There is nothing more ridiculous in the whole history of Mr. Bryan's ridiculous career than the ambition attributed to him to travel in Europe on the footing of royalty. It is true that certain eminent Americans, like General Grant, have been received at the European courts in a manner in no way distinguishable from that sovereigns show to one another. It is highly probable that Mr. Cleveland, who has been twice president of the United States, would be received in some such such way, if he chose to travel in Europe. But the international status of a man whose only claim to distinction is that he has been twice defeated for the presidency, is not quite the same. If Mr. Bryan is distinguished in Europe from any other traveler, we should imagine he would be treated more like Don Carlos or the Bonaparte pretender to the throne of France. It is not enough to gain distinction merely to pretend; one must also succeed.—Minneapolis Tribune.

☞The whole country will owe a large debt to Joseph W. Folk, if he succeeds in getting the extradition treaties of the United States modified so as to secure the return of fugitives boodlers. It is only in the newest treaties that men can be brought back for either giving or taking bribes, and many former public officials who deserve punishment are enjoying their plunder in Europe. It would be the easiest thing in the world to secure this modification if care is taken to prevent the new power being used against purely political offenders. If the crime of booding has not become common since most of the extradition treaties were made, the habit of prosecuting it has. It will only be necessary to point out to foreign nations the scandal of giving security to men whon the laws and courts of all countries condemn, to secure their consent to new treaties.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Jerome Refutes Murphy's Statement

New York, Oct. 23.—Charles F. Murphy yesterday said that District Attorney Jerome had asked him to institute John Doe proceedings against Dock Commissioner Hawkes. When the statement was shown to Jerome he said: "I never made any such request of Mr. Murphy." Hawkes is the present dock commissioner, having been appointed to that position by Mayor Low.

A Naval Object Lesson

Washington, Oct. 23.—With the object of making a memorable and impressive ceremony of the transfer from Cuba to the United States of the naval station at Guantanamo, the navy department is arranging to have Admiral Coghlan's gulf fleet assemble at that port Dec. 10 to take part in the transfer. Admiral Barker's battleship squadron also may be represented.

Overstocked With Coal

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 23.—Beginning Oct. 29, all of the 25 collieries operated by the Lehigh Valley Coal company in the Wyoming region will be idle for one week because of excessive supply. Other collieries of the various coal companies will also shut down for the week and suspension of operations for the week will be general throughout the entire anthracite region.

A Gruesome Spectacle

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 23.—Felix Hall, a negro, was hanged here for the murder of Norwood Clark, white. When the drop fell the rope slipped and the condemned man hung for 10 minutes, only half choking. He was hauled up and the rope readjusted. This time the fall broke his neck. Hall's last act was to write a declaration of his innocence.

Kings County With Tammany

New York, Oct. 23.—The executive committee of the Kings county Democratic committee met in Brooklyn and adopted the report of the harmony committee and will give its unqualified support to the whole Tammany ticket. The only dissenting vote was cast by Chairman Bainbridge of the county committee.

Business Advantage Thrown Away

Canadian Reciprocity the Plaything of Politicians.

Col. Wm. A. Gaston's Speech at Holyoke, Wednesday, Oct. 4, 1903.

Now take this question of reciprocity with Canada; why does it mean more to the people of Massachusetts than almost any other question now before us? For the simple reason that if the Canadian trade were shut off, many of our mills and factories would have to close for an indefinite period, because Canada buys more New England manufactures than any other country in the world.

Shut down our mills and factories, or curtail their product and the farmers suffer directly, as well as the persons employed in those mills and factories, because the manufacturing centres supply the market for his product. In some of our manufacturing cities the farmers' market would be absolutely taken away; for when the mills are not running a large percentage of the workmen go back with their families to their Canadian homes. You cannot strike at the factory without hurting the farmer, no matter how you try to prevent it.

There is another large class in this State who are actually thrown out of work by the scarcity of the raw material which we want to buy from Canada. I mean the carpenters and masons who are erecting our buildings, both large and small. It is the general rule in the offices of the Boston architects that no more new work will be considered until spring, and this condition is largely owing to the extravagant cost of lumber and other building materials. The building business is one of the hardest hit as a result of our inability to trade freely with Canada.

We had our chance for a useful reciprocity life with Canada in 1866, when we abrogated the Elgin treaty. That treaty was denounced for political rather than commercial reasons. Today it is said to have been a bad thing for the United States, because in the last year or two of the treaty's existence the balance of trade happened to go against us. I would remind these critics, in the first place, that the balance of trade is not a fair measure of the real value of a treaty, and this statement is backed by many good and convincing arguments. In the second place, in spite of the fact that the treaty was abrogated in 1866, the balance continued in favor of Canada for several years or until our industries had recovered from the shock of the Civil War. I shall not here enter on an analysis of the old Elgin treaty, but if the statistics of the term of its operation are studied it will be found that the trade fluctuated directly in accordance with the laws of supply and demand, which were afforded free and natural operation in raw products in the terms of the treaty. Leading commercial bodies of the country were unanimously opposed to the repeal of the Elgin treaty. In short, it is beyond question that that treaty operated for the benefit of Massachusetts and New England.

Canada wanted to continue the treaty and would have made any reasonable concession, even in our manufactures, to aid in the saving if it. Modifications could easily have been made and from the basis already existing a line of friendly negotiations could have been carried on to the present day.

Even as late as 1874 Canada proposed a new treaty, which was accepted by the Secretary of State. It provided for the free exchange of natural products and placed agricultural implements and about forty other manufactured articles on the free list. Further, it recognized New York as the port of export of Canada and made provision for a canal to connect the St. Lawrence with the Welland Canal. Had it been ratified, it would have turned the whole course of Canadian traffic across United States territory for export in American ships. This treaty was rejected by the United States Senate, acting under the orders of certain highly protected special interests.

Some headway toward a treaty was made in 1898, but negotiations ceased because of a dispute over the Alaskan Boundary question, which in itself had nothing to do with trade relations.

The Canadian government was so disappointed over the outcome that the Premier vowed that he would never ask the United States to resume negotiations. Last February Senator Fairbanks of Indiana, chairman of the Anglo-American Commission, which is still in existence, made overtures to the Dominion government for a re-assembling of the Commission, and that result may come about this coming winter.

Meantime, however, Canadian opinion has changed. Our best customer has become hostile. She believes that she can get along without reciprocity and so is not willing to make many concessions. The high protectionists of that country are doing their utmost to gain control of the government; and if they do, we must expect a prohibitive tariff on American goods and a clos commercial union with Great Britain. Mr. Chamberlain's proposition for preferential trade within the colonies has been eagerly assented to by Canada, and reciprocity, once the anxious desire of the Canadians, is now a secondary consideration.

Should a high tariff take the place of the present schedules, New England would suffer more comparatively than any other portion of the country. The thriving boot and shoe trade of Lynn, Brockton, Haverhill, North Adams and other centres would be materially damaged. In place of the duty of 30 per cent on jewelry, an important industry of our State, the impossible duty of 60 per cent is demanded by our neighbors to the north of us. In the finer lines of iron and steel, including machinery and machine tools, the expected duties would cut off a profitable business. In fact, every line of skilled manufacture, for which Massachusetts has a deserved reputation, would be severely shaken should the high tariff sentiment prevail in the next session of the Dominion Parliament.

Should a fair reciprocity treaty be negotiated, we would demand, and would have the right to expect, that our manufactured products should have reasonable opportunity to enter the Canadian market. These amount to over $70,000,000 a year, of which more than $20,000,000 are now on the Canadian free list. This includes some $15,000,000 of farm products; of which class of goods, it may be stated in passing, Canada buys twice as much from us as we from her. The Canadian proposition is, in the absence of reciprocity, the transfer of some $30,000,000 of our free exports to the dutiable list.

This is the situation that now confronts us in our relations with Canada, and the question must present itself to the mind of any fair-minded man if it is one to be regarded with indifference. We cannot pass it over carelessly, for in the working out it comes close home to every man, woman and child within the confines of New England.

In spite of the fact that Canadian reciprocity has been advocated in Republican platforms and by persons high in the counsels of that party and is believed in by a vast number of Republicans in Massachusetts, it will never be brought about and accomplished while Henry Cabot Lodge remains in control of the Republican machine in Massachusetts. It can only be accomplished by and through the agency of those who not only believe in it and advocate it, but who cannot be stopped in their effort to secure it by the order of a political chief.

A DISAPPOINTMENT

Cruiser Denver Fails to Make Her Contract Speed of Seventeen Knots

Boston, Oct. 23.—The second-class protected cruiser Denver, in her official trial trip on the Cape Ann course, failed to make the speed called for in her contract. Commander Cowles of the trial board gave out 16.28 knots as the average speed made by the cruiser during the run over the measured course, while her contract calls for 17 knots an hour for four consecutive hours. Tidal corrections may help the cruiser a little, but will not bring her up to the required speed.

The failure of the Denver to make 17 knots was a great disappointment to President Seddinger of the Neafie and Levy Ship and Engine Building company of Philadelphia, as she is the first cruiser built in that concern's yard, and he was so confident of making at least 17.40 knots all the way over the course that he feels the failure keenly. Members of the trial board did not care to express an opinion as to the cause of the slowness of the cruiser.

General Closing of Copper Mines

Butte, Mont., Oct. 23.—As a result of the handing down of decisions Judge Clancey awarding the Minnie Healy mine, valued at $10,000,000, to F. A. Heinze, and then granting an injunction against the Boston and Montana company, the principal property of the Amalgamated Copper company in Montana, all the properties of the Amalgamated Copper company in Montana were last night ordered closed for an indefinite period. It is estimated by officials of the company that 20,000 men will be idle before tonight.

Editor Lost In Wilderness

New York, Oct. 23.—Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., whom traders returning to St. Johns from Labrador report as lost in the Labrador wilderness, is the assistant editor of Outing. He left New York last July to explore the heart of Labrador. About 10 weeks ago he started from Rigolette on the east coast of Labrador, with a Cree Indian guide and one white companion. They were to travel to a point is 700 miles beyond the last Hudson Bay company's post. No white man has ever penetrated as far as Hubbard intended to go.

Senate May Consider Canal

Washington, Oct. 23.—While President Roosevelt designated in his proclamation calling congress into extraordinary session only the subject of Cuban reciprocity for consideration, it is reasonably certain now that the senate, at least, will have the isthmian canal question brought directly to its attention. Senator Morgan will demand consideration for the question raised and the senate probably will devote some time to the matter.

Labor Federation's Warning

New York, Oct. 23.—The American Federation of Labor has informed the officials of the Inter-borough Rapid Transit company that that company cannot employ members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes to operate the trains on the elevated lines in the places of the motormen in the event of the latter declaring a strike. This action materially strengthens the position of the men.

DISCLOSURES OF NIXON

Warned Big Combination of Default and Bankruptcy

WAS OPPOSED BY SCHWAB

Unsuccessful Effort to Get at History of Mysterious Check For $250,000 Which Was Put Through Banks by Trust Company of the Republic

New York, Oct. 23.—Lewis Nixon occupied the witness chair again yesterday before an examiner of the United States shipbuilding case and gave much valuable testimony covering the finances and general affairs of the corporation. He testified that he had opposed the Sheldon reorganization plan and had himself, as a counter proposition, urged that the stock be assessed in order to raise the amount necessary to save the combination from default and bankruptcy. His plan of assessment was opposed by Charles M. Schwab, holder at that time of $20,000,000 of the stock, who, according to Mr. Nixon, declared that the stockholders would not pay the assessment. Mr. Schwab, so Mr. Nixon swore, declined to put up any more money unless the Bethlehem bonds were given preference as a lien upon the shipbuilding plants to the first mortgage bonds.

Mr. Nixon's testimony also developed the fact that there was a wide discrepancy as to estimated earnings in letters written by Treasurer Gary to members of the reorganization committee, and Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the bondholders, asked if it did not show that there had been an attempt to minimize the value of the shipyards and magnify the value of the Bethlehem plant, but the witness would not say so.

Much time was taken up with an unsuccessful effort to get at the history of a mysterious check for $250,000 found at the Trust Company of the Republic. It was drawn to "Lewis Nixon or ourselves" on the same day the checks were made out for the payment of the cash given to the vendors for their plants and property. Nixon swore that he had never seen the check before and that he knew nothing of its history. Both sides disclaimed knowledge of its history and the destination of the amount of money for which it was drawn, and the only explanation offered from any source was that it had been made out by mistake and had simply been put through the banks by the Trust Company of the Republic. The effort to get the history of the check will be renewed later in the hearing.

Nixon testified that he knew as early as last April that unless the combination could get some money from the Bethlehem property or elsewhere it must fail, and warned his associates on the directorate that they must husband resources. It was brought out on cross-examination that the share of promotion profits set aside for Schwab, of which Nixon told, had never been paid. None of the commitments on account of promotion were paid, so Nixon testified.

The hearing goes on this afternoon and at the close will probably be adjourned for 10 days on account of set engagements of counsel. This adjournment will probably prevent the taking of the testimony of Messrs. Schwab and Pam until some time the week after next.

Hospital Employes on Strike

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—Twenty-four men and five girls employed at the municipal hospital are on strike for pure and nourishing food. The force at the hospital is crippled and physicians are acting as ambulance drivers. The strikers claim that the matron furnishes them with tainted meat, half cooked sausage and hard potatoes.

Alleged Boodler Caught In Mexico

Guadalajara, Mex., Oct. 23.—Charles Kratz, a member of the St. Louis city council, indicted on a charge of bribery, who jumped a $20,000 bond, was arrested here by the local authorities on orders from the federal government at the City of Mexico. He will be held until officers with requisition papers from the United States arrive.

Schwab's Wife Very Sick

Philadelphia, Oct. 23.—A special from Altoona says that Mrs. Charles M. Schwab is very ill at her home at Loretto, but her condition is stated to be favorable to recovery. Mrs. Schwab's condition, the dispatch says, was at one time so dangerous that all the members of her family were sent for.

Ice Company Frozen Out

New York, Oct. 23.—Joseph D. Carroll has been appointed temporary receiver for the People's Co-operative Ice company. The liabilities are about $190,000 and the nominal assets $102,730. Unusual depression in trade, poor collections and small sales are given as reasons for the application.

Mangled by L Train

New York, Oct. 23.—Thrown from the platform by the surging crowd that was forcing its way forward to board an incoming train, a man whose identity is not yet known, was horribly mangled last night at the elevated railroad station at Fulton and Pearl streets.

A Long-Winded Document

Washington, Oct. 23.—It is stated that the report of Mr. Bristow on the postal investigation may not be submitted before next Monday. It is a document of approximately 100,000 words and is now being revised by Bristow.

MILKMEN'S DEADLOCK

May Result In Strike of Producers and Consequent Famine In Boston

Boston, Oct. 23.—At a meeting of the New England Milk Producers' union here it was voted to order a general milk strike on Nov. 1 unless the milk contractors agreed to the terms proposed by the milk producers. To avert the threatened strike the contractors must agree to submit their differences to settlement by the state board of arbitration unless they pay 37½ cents for every can of 8½ quarts of milk delivered in Boston under a contract which contains no kind of surplus clause.

This ultimatum to the contractors was decided upon at the close of a heated discussion over the questions at issue. The 100 or more milk producers who were present at the meeting left for their homes at the close of the session, saying that if the strike should come that a milk famine would result in Boston. The trouble between the farmers and the contractors over the price of milk and the method of its delivery from the farm to the city has engaged the attention of both sides for a year or more, more noticeably within the last three weeks. Several attempts to settle the questions at issue by arbitration proved futile.

Railroad Trying to Break Strike

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 23.—The first determined attempt on the part of the officials of the Boston and Albany railroad to break the blacksmiths' strike in the West Springfield shops was made when two non-union blacksmiths were put to work. The boilermakers expect orders to go out unless the non-union men are removed. They have already received instructions not to handle work done by non-union blacksmiths. The machinists take the same position.

Enforcing Law In Earnest

Rockland, Me., Oct. 23.—Last Friday an order was issued commanding all those engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquor in Rockland to close up their places of business. The term of grace expired at midnight Wednesday and since that time it has been impossible to procure liquor by the glass. This is the first time within the memory of the oldest inhabitant that Rockland has been strictly dry.

Against Wine at Launching

Meriden, Conn., Oct. 23.—A resolution addressed to President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Moody protesting against the use of wine in the ceremony of launching the battleship Connecticut was adopted at the annual convention of the Sons of Temperance of Connecticut in this city. Copies of the resolution are also to be sent to the Connecticut senators and congressmen.

Race of Coasting Vessels

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 23.—Schooners Princess, Captain Ryan, and Bessie, Captain Everett, who for years have plied between this port and the provinces engaged in coast trade, have left this port in a race to Digby, N. S. The wager is a cargo of wood. The race is the outcome of many discussions as to the merits of the two craft. Both captains received a hearty send-off.

To Build Hotel on Historic Land

Bristol, R. I., Oct. 23.—Mount Hope park, the site of the old home of King Philip and for many years a shore resort, has been disposed of at private sale to John Coughlin of Fall River and R. F. Haffenreiffer of this place. The property consists of about 60 acres of land and a number of buildings and wharves. A hotel will be erected upon the property.

Refused Medical Treatment

Woman and Daughter Burned

Dover, N. H., Oct. 23.—By a fire resulting from the overturning of a lighted lamp last night, Mrs. Topple, 35 years old, was terribly burned about the hands and arms and is in a critical condition. Her 9-year-old daughter had her hands burned while attempting to extinguish the flames.

CASE OF MARSHAL FIELD

Shows President's Intention to Ignore "Pulls"

REFUSAL TO REOPEN CASE

Decided Upon by Attorney General Because There Was Nothing New Offered by Vermont Delegation In Popular Official's Behalf

Washington, Oct. 23.—Fred Field, the United States marshal of Vermont, who was accused of culpable negligence in the escape of certain Chinese immigrants, is out of the service, in spite of efforts of the Vermont delegation to keep him in. A misunderstanding of the President's attitude toward this case appears to have been widespread chiefly owing to the accidental collation of two paragraphs in a press report. The first of the paragraphs cited an official statement given out at the White House regarding another matter; but in the customary indirect phraseology, the second with only the paragraphic break, stated that the president was going to hold up the removal of Field for further consideration at the instance of Senator Proctor.

The impression thus conveyed was that it was, like its predecessor, an official White House announcement. On the contrary, the president had no idea that any mention had been made of it till a caller drew his attention to it after the whole matter had been settled and the marshal had quitted his office. It is assumed that some member of the Vermont delegation made a statement to a newspaper representative after a visit to the president.

The simple fact was that after the marshal's removal had been decided upon, the Vermont delegation came in to assure the president that a very serious mistake had been made to the damage of an innocent man. The president answered that if they had any new evidence to produce they must take it to Attorney General Knox, who had charge of the matter, and if Mr. Knox was satisfied that there was enough in it to justify a review of the case, the case would be reviewed. The delegation went to see the attorney general, who after hearing what they had to say, reported, that the points adduced in Field's behalf made no difference in the main status. The order of removal went into effect at once, and there is an end to the whole matter.

What the president did in this case is the same that he has done in every case where he was not personally familiar with all the facts. When the committee of Typothetae came to Washington last summer, for instance, in behalf of a rehearing for Superintendent Metcalf of the money order service, the president told them that on their statement, unless further damaging evidence were forthcoming it looked as if Metcalf had committed a very bad blunder, rather than a crime, and that when the air was clear once more his case might be reheard. There was no hint of political or legislative interference in that instance. The same thing has been done again and again for persons who could not be even most remotely suspected of a "pull."

A further misapprehension seems to exist as to the fate of the Bonaparte-Conradi report, which will be made public. It will show what its authors believe regarding a number of persons who are not now under indictment and probably will not be indicted, either because their offences were openly committed so long ago that the statute of limitation has attached, or because, while their guilt is proved to the satisfaction of all reasonable men, no petty jury would feel justified in rendering a verdict against them, and it seems a bad policy to indict where there is no chance of conviction.

Canal Opposition Continues

Panama, Oct. 23.—News has reached the isthmus that congress has agreed to adjourn on Nov. 14, notwithstanding the wish of many congressmen to postpone adjourning until a decision on canal matters may be reached in the American congress. The Bogota newspapers contain the political platform of Joaquin Velez, a presidential candidate, the principal feature of which is the absolute rejection of any and all foreign control of the canal.

Fisherman Short of Coal

Halifax, Oct. 23.—The American fishing steamer Alice M. Jacobs has arrived at Whitehead for water. Captain Jacobs says that he had to cut the trip short, as his supply of coal is nearly exhausted and the Canadian government refused him a permit to replenish his bunkers. He reports no mackerel schooling and that when he left Sydney there were 11 American seiners there without any fish.

Bank Teller Leaves Prison

Washington, Oct. 23.—The president has pardoned Joel G. Tyler, formerly teller of the Safety Fund National bank of Fitchburg, Mass., who has served 2½ years of a five-year sentence in prison for appropriating several thousand dollars to his own use. Tyler pleaded guilty and made the money good.

San Antonio Isolated

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 23.—The state and federal authorities have taken charge of the yellow fever situation here. San Antonio is now shut off from all neighboring towns by local quarantine and so far as business is concerned is completely isolated from the rest of the world.

AFTER TWENTY-NINE YEARS

Chief Landvoight Leaves Postal Service at Request of Payne

Washington, Oct. 23.—William H. Landvoigt, chief of the classification division of the postoffice department, has presented his resignation to Postmaster General Payne. The resignation was requested by Mr. Payne as the result of the investigation by the inspectors of charges growing out of the employment of Landvoigt's son in the General Manifolding company of Franklin, Pa., which had a contract for supplying patented register books to the department.

Mr. Landvoigt presented his resignation to Payne in person. It merely called attention to the fact that the only criticism of him was the employment of his son with the company. Mr. Payne expressed his regret at the necessity of the action, but stated that the employment of the son with the company involved a principle which must be enforced.

Mr. Landvoigt has been in the postal service about 29 years. He says that the request for his resignation carries no intimation of any wrongdoing whatever and that the only question is the principle involved in his son's employment.

Eleven Men Probably Lost

Newport News, Va., Oct. 23.—On the Newport News schooner John K. Kirkman, which arrived here last night, are two seamen of the crew of the Gloucester fishing schooner J. T. Williams, which went to pieces on a reef off Cape Cod light in the storm last Friday. These are probably the only survivors of the 14 men on board when the schooner struck. The rescued men are Walter J. Harris and Charles Keeler. The lost vessel was a 70-ton schooner engaged in Bank fishing and was owned by Captain Gill, who went down with her. Most of the crew were New Englanders.

Police Had Little to Do

New York, Oct. 23.—A great crowd filled Madison Square Garden last night at the Dowie services and a still greater crowd massed outside the big building. Two hundred and fifty police were gathered there to preserve order, but their services were little required. The subject of Dowie's address was "The claims of Christ as universal king." There was no disturbance at the meeting.

Denial May Be Technical

London, Oct. 23.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Yokohama says the government has issued an official denial to the statement published in a Conservative newspaper that a preliminary mobilization order has been issued to the Japanese army. There is considerable belief in local circles, continues the correspondent, that this denial is merely technical.

PERFECT HEALTH for 25 CENTS.

Chas. C. Hearn Tells How to Get Well for This Small Sum.

I want to say just a few words on the causes of sickness, and how to get well. Constipation and dyspepsia are responsible for more suffering than all of the other diseases combined. I have been selling, for the past few months, a medicine that has made many remarkable cures,—"Dr. Howard's Specific" for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia. This was introduced at half price, but the sale having been so remarkable, they have decided to make 25c the regular price in the future, and I am glad to say that I shall be able to continue to sell 60 doses of the best Specific in the world for the small sum of a quarter of a dollar, and guarantee to return the money if the remedy does not cure.

Dr. Howard's Specific is not a "cure-all." It is simply intended to cure constipation and dyspepsia, and it will do it; if it does not I will refund the money on your simple say so. Each package contains 60 doses of the most reliable and successful medicine in the world.

I shall expect to have my sales on this Specific doubled within the next two months. Tell your friends that they can get well for a quarter of a dollar, without running any risk of losing their money. Oct. 19, 21, 23.

When Autumn turns away, a glowing flush
Lies on the face of Earth. Her youth seems gone.
And as her beauties one by one are shorn
From off her, she, in shame, gives sudden blush:
The taunting winds sweep round her form and rush
Her dritting foliage in a whirl of scorn
Down the long turning of the night and morn,
Into the silence of a winter's hush.
The colors of the wood, the field, the sky,
Turn from their brighter tones to somber gray,
And stand on guard, as though to certify
The year had won its rest. Its form of clay
Must sleep if it would waken by and by
To rise into another year's long day.

New Schoolhouse Dedicated The Finest in Quincy.

THE WASHINGTON

The Pride of Quincy Point People

Informal Exercises in All the Rooms Yesterday.

The dedicatory exercises of the new Washington school were held yesterday afternoon. The weather in the early afternoon was rather agninst a large attendance. It would, however, take more than an ordinary storm to keep Quincy Point people at home on such an occasion. While a few may have remained away, there were a large number present, and it was generally regretted that there was not a large hall in the building for such occasions as this.

The parents and friends began to arrive at 2 o'clock, and a half hour was pleasantly passed in an inspection of the building, and in admiring the beautiful pictures, busts and casts with which every room was adorned. While the school is perhaps better supplied in this line than most of the other buildings in the city, there is room for more. A list of these gifts with the donors was published in Friday's Ledger.

There were quite a number of distinguished guests present, and first among these was Mrs. Sally Harris of Quincy Neck who will celebrate her 90th birthday next month, Mrs. Harris is one of the four surviving pupils of the first school building at Quincy Neck. She also enjoys the distinction of being a pupil of Master Seaver as well as a classmate and childhood friend of Thomas Crane, Quincy's benefactor, whose centennial birthday was celebrated last week.

Others present were: Supt. Frank E. Parlin, Rev. Leon H. Austin, Col. Edward Anderson, Councilman George E. Adams, ex-Representative T. H. Newcomb, ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb and George M. Wadsworth of Somerville the predecessor of Master Pollard, who also taught at the Willard school.

Exercises were held in all of the rooms. The speaking however was in the room of the principal, Mr. Thomas B. Pollard.

The exercises here opened with an address of welcome by Bessie Powers which was followed by singing by the school. Then came short paragraphs on education and the public school by William Avery, Ruth Bass, Carl Cranshaw, Henry Devaney, Arthur Dorley, William Huber, May Oliver, John Pinel, Lucy Smith, William Thayer, Maurice Smith, Winnifred Baker, Catharine Callahan, Marion Flowers, Rita Lothrop and Christie Moody.

Another song by the school was followed by short statements and compositions about the pictures and casts presented to the school. The Belden Lion, Helen Burke; Madonna of the Chair, Robert Carey; Signing the Declaration of Independence, Harold Clark; The Capitol at Washington, Olive Costello; Parliament Buildings, Virginia Curney; The Aurora, Irene Dasha; Bust of Longfellow, Annie Dorley; Sir Galahad, Arthur Fish; Old Ironsides, Leon Hastings; St. Peter's Cathedral, Mary Keenan; Reading from Homer, Carl Lane; Thorwaldsen, Philip Levowich; Corot, Katherine Moran; bust of Washington, Roy Smith; York Cathedral, Alice Thayer; Christ Blessing Little Children, George Butters.

These selections were interspersed with a solo by Eleanor Crane. Clarence Frazier read the statistics as to the cost of the new building, and Daniel McQueen briefly outlined the history of schoolhouses at Quincy Point and Neck.

Singing by the school and a salute to the flag closed this part of the program.

Principal Pollard took occasion to mention the gifts that had not been included in the composition given by the pupils, and then introduced as the first speaker Supt. Parlin.

Mr. Parlin said this was a day of rejoicing after a long struggle. How nice it would be if we had a hall for these exercises. We are grateful, however, for what we have got. This building cost $55,000. What is it for? It is for you. Do you appreciate what is being done? The best way to appreciate it is by your conduct. It is all for your education. A boy making good use of his time deserves as much credit as the President. Learn to apply yourself faithfully. This was the best building in Quincy. He knew of no one who could have succeeded in equipping it as had Mr. Pollard. These decorations are a great help to education. In closing, he congratulated all the children and teachers no the advantages they had for work, and he predicted good work from them.

Both Mr. Parlin and Mr. Pollard spoke of the regret of Fred H. Smith, the member of the School Committee from this ward, at his inability to be present.

George W. Wadsworth, a former principle of the Washington school, said that seventeen years ago last Monday he was the object of curiosity to the children in this part of the city. Clothes do not make a man. It may be sometimes they help a boy to be a man. Many eminent men have come out of poor schoolhouses.

It is true that schools do not make scholars, but finished and equiped like this they do help. It is for you to set such example for the classes to follow you that this building will ever shine. I was master here only four months but I never forgot it. I hope the scholars will set such example that those who follow will have all they can do to imitate but never excel.

Councilman George E. Adams was introduced as a graduate of the school. He complimented the architect on his taste, also the builder and Commissioner Knowlton. He knew all were loyal to the Washington school. It was the best school in the United States. He then briefly outlined the history of the old school lot, and read the deed made in 1808 and executed by William Adams, who gave the lot for school purposes. He did not sell the lot but gave it for school purposes. Continuing, he said, an old deed like this shows how much interest they took years ago in education. The Commonwealth is pledged for school purposes.

The Legislature has made laws compelling school attendance. The city is under great expense to maintain the schools. You can not tell but your work will reach other states and help pupils far away. Do all you can to keep the name of the Washington school among the leading schools of the city and the state.

Ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb added his word of congratulation on the new building. People had no idea how much work had to be done in the City Council to keep the school on the old lot. Take sentiment out of life and you take out 90 per cent of life. This year the city of Quincy appropriated abot $108,000 for schools. One hundred years ago the town of Quincy appropriated $400 including the cost of one building at $270. This section got $11 out of the $400. In 1647 every township of fifty families was compelled to have a grammar school. This building was the sventh building in this section for school purposes. He remembered the first sentence he ever composed and recited in school. It was this "The sun is up and it is day, the dew is on the new mown hay." Will you with this building and appliances make more of yourself than did the children eighty years ago. It is in your hands and he hoped they would make the best of it.

Col. Anderson said that in his introduction Mr. Pollard had forgotten to state that he was a graduate of the Washington school. It was not in Quincy but in Roxbury. That was reason why he often visited the school. one He felt safe in this buil ing. He did not in the old building. He used to think of the bravery of the children when they marched and the building shook. He congratulated them that they were to have a course of study in this beautiful building. He then compared it with the old log schools in the west. It was not the school that made the scholar, and he told how President Lincoln got his education. He also congratulated the scholars on the kind of study they were getting, and compared it with the method used when he first attended school. He hoped Mr. Pollard would continue to teach here until he taught your children and your grand children.

Ex-Councilman T. H. Newcomb gave his remembrances of the Washington school lot. The first building was a little building not much larger than this room. There was a wide aisle in centre and seats on each side. The floor was laid on a slant. The scholars averaged from 5 to 16 years. After 16 they were obliged to pay a school tax. This was in 1830. He thought an addition was built. Then it was moved back and another story added. It was now located opposite the church and was part of a tenement house. After this the building just vacated was built. The trees were set out about forty years ago. He remembered going with others to the woods and digging up the trees and setting them out. Contrasting the old building with this; looking back to the difficulties we had, it seemed as though he could hardly realize it, as he looked with astonishment at the new beautiful school. He hoped the children would appreciate it and have a greater incentive to study and work hard to get an education. Do make the best of your time to get an education, for anyone without an education is not of much account.

Charles H. Johnson, the truant officer, was glad to rejoice with the pupils, and congratulated them on their new building. He supposed that his labor would be less now, as there will not be a boy who will want the dishonor of being the first truant.

IN OTHER ROOMS.

The exercises in Miss Hatch's room consisted of concert recitations, and singing by the class, readings by Vernan Macauley, Carl Wheble, William O'Brien, Seth Eldridge, David Melvile Joseph Pinel, Marion Matherson, Margaret Smith, Alice Mahoney, Mabel Dorley, Roy Sidelinger and a salute to to the flag.

Bad Morals and Bad Business.

No Profit in Our Philippine Policy.

Col. Wm. A. Gaston's Speech at Pittsfield, October 13, 1903.

Those who follow events in the Philippines, and I take it most of our citizens are interested in them, cannot fail to be impressed with the apparent utter failure of the Republican party to make any considerable progress in the assimilation of the people of that tropical possession. Indeed we have reached the stage, under the guidance of Republican leadership, where we no longer, save in a spirit of sarcasm, claim "benevolent" assimilation. We are still holding possession of the Philippines to martial music, but to what purpose? The sullen resistance of the Fillipinos has taught us that only by force can empire be created and maintained. Occasionally we learn of deeds of bravery of American soldiers, but the same cable that conveys this intelligence discloses also the evils of our holding the Philippines by force, and informs us of the faithlessness of American appointees in great and small places. The very latest instance of defalcation describes the criminals as fleeing from the island of Luzon and committing piracy on the high seas to facilitate their escape.

President Lincoln describes the principle that no man is good enough to govern another man without the other man's consent, as the sheet anchor of American government, and the Democratic party has taken a firm stand against criminal aggression in the Philippines. That, of course, is what it has come to.

Putting aside for the moment, the moral and patriotic aspect of the question and assuming that our duty is to commerce, instead of the preservation of our Democratic institutions, how does the occupation of the Philippines benefit us? Let us see if, as a business proposition, the policy of the Republican party as to the Philippine Islands is a good one. For I think that you will agree that the three things which regulate commerce are competition, supply and demand. The flag makes very little difference to trade. The great bulk of our exports go to England where our flag flies over nothing except by courtesy the consulate buildings; and our exports to Canada, where our flag flies in like manner, is rising $80,000,000 in value.

"We import juke, hemp, cigar wrappers, and sugar from the Philippines and export little." Trade has not followed and it will not follow the flag in any great volume to the Philippines.

What is the commercial and financial value to the United States of these islands, for after all, whatever may have been the motives of those originally responsible for the retention of these islands, I think that most of our Republican friends will admit, if they are honest, that the ruling motive that influences our occupation of the Philippines today is not ethical, but materialistic.

The cost of the war with Spain and of the subsequent warfare upon the Fillipinos to the end of the last fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, was over $850,000,000, the addition in that fiscal year being not less than $150,000,000. This charge is increasing rather than diminishing.

At the end of the present calendar year, up to December 31, 1903, we shall have expended in war and warfare not less than $920,000,000, which sum will be slightly in excess of the outstanding bonded debt of the United States bearing interest. Of this sum, about $300,000,000 is commonly assigned to the cost of the war with Spain. There are no exact data outside the government accounts by which this can be apportioned.

Over $600,000,000 therefore may be charged by tax-payers to the effort to deprive the people of the Philippines of their liberty and to hold the islands. The excess of the expenditures of this country due to the warfare in the Philippines, with the cost of the increase in the regular army and other expenses engendered by a military spirit during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, varied but a fraction from two dollars ($2) per head of the population.

There is no claim on our part but that the conduct of the work of imposing a form of goverment upon these people without their consent has been administered by able and upright men, who have used their utmost effort to overcome the evil inherent in the conditions. The pretext of developing commerce by holding dominion over these islands has ceased to impose upon intelligent people. All that we import from the Philippines now we may continue to import whoever holds them, the principle article, hemp, being free of duty. Our insignificant exports have fallen off with the withdrawal of a part of the troops and with the increasing disability on the part of the inhabitants to buy even articles of necessity, such being the poverty and distress which our rule has brought upon them. The proof of these statements may be found in the official reports of our government.

For thirty years, from June 30, 1872, to June 30, 1902, covering the administration of Hayes, Arthur, Cleveland (first term), Harrison and Cleveland, (second term), the average annual expenditures on the different branches of government service per capita were as follows:

Civil Service, including Indians and postal deficiency	$1.48
War Dep't, including fortifications and similar works	.75
Navy Dep't, including the construction of what was known as the "new navy"	.35
Interest on the public debt	.90
Pensions	1.52
Annual average	$5.00

The annual average expenditures in five years of war and warfare under Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt have been as follows:

Civil Service	$1.58
War Department	1.90
Navy	.80
Interest	.47
Pensions	1.86
Annual average	$6.61

During the last fiscal year—a year of so-called peace—the expenditures per capita have been as follows:

Civil Service	$1.58
War Department	1.47
Navy	1.03
Interest	.36
Pensions	1.72
	$6.35

Comparing the last table with the first one of the three we find an excess over the normal of twenty years of peace, order and industry, of one dollar and thirty-five cents ($1.35) per head.

But this does not show the whole case. During the twenty years prior to the Spanish war, the cost of pensions and interest was two dollars and fifty-two cents per head ($2.52). Had it not been for debts incurred and pensions to Spanish war veterans, these charges, which had been reduced during the last fiscal year to two dollars and eight cents ($2.08) per head, would not have exceeded one dollar and eighty-eight cents ($1.88) the past fiscal year—the falling in of pensions through lapse of time now moving on with accelerating speed.

These differences per head may seem to be of trifling importance, but when computed on the population of June 30, 1903, estimating the population at 80,400,000, the customary manner by which expenditures are distributed by the Treasury Department, their startling import may be seen as:

The excess of expenditures in the Civil Service at 29 cents per head comes to	$23,316,000
The excess of expenditure on the Army at 72 cents per head comes to	57,888,000
The excess of expenditure on the Navy at 68 cents per head comes to	54,672,000
The total of actual excess of expenditure during the warfare in the Philippines and the tendency to militarism in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903	135,876,000
If to this be added twenty (20) cents per head, by which the interest and pension charge would have been diminished except for war and warfare, we have	16,080,000
And we find that the waste in war and warfare in the last fiscal year was a fraction less than	$152,000,000

The present tendency is to increase, rather than to diminish, and when the expenditures of the present six months ending Dec. 31, 1903, are audited, the proof will be complete that the cost of the war with Spain, which a strong administration would have avoided, and of the "criminal aggression" upon the Philippine Islanders, which a weak administration brought upon the country, will have cost the tax-payers $920,000,000, a sum slightly larger than the entire bonded debt of the United States, bearing interest, now outstanding.

The pretext of expansion of commerce in the East in justification of closing the door to trade in the Philippines to other nations, while strenuously urging the open door in China and other parts of Asia, has been exposed, and it now excites derision only. In the computation of the cost of war and warfare to June 30, 1902, estimating that our Philippine expenses were to that time about $400,000,000, we find that we had been paying for five years $1.05 per head of our population to secure an export which amounted to six and one-half cents (6 1-2) per head, on which there might have been a profit to some one of one cent per head of the whole population. The figures of the last year are even more grotesque. The cost of criminal aggression in the Philippine Islands during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, was not less than $1.25 per head, after making any allowance that any reasonable man could make for the alleged necessity of increasing the army and building battleships to meet every contingency. The exports from the United States to the Philippines have fallen off to less than five cents per head of our population.

We are still wasting the lives and health of the American soldiers and still bringing poverty and suffering upon the people of the Philippines, under the pretence of benevolence. We cannot have the satisfaction of even claiming that it is justified by business reasons.

SCHWAB'S DEFENSE

Will Attempt to Show That He Tried to Be Honest With Creditors

New York, Oct. 24.—The nature of the defense which Charles M. Schwab will make to the charges that have been made against him in connection with financial affairs of the wrecked United States Shipbuilding company was sharply outlined during the latter part of the hearing before Examiner Oliphant late yesterday.

Lewis Nixon was still on the stand and under cross-examination by W. D. Guthrie, counsel for Mr. Schwab. There was an effort to show that the corporation would not have succeeded if the $2,000,000 promised under the Sheldon plan of reorganization had been made available and that it could not have continued its existence even if it had received the much sought for $900,000, which it is alleged was wrongfully withheld by the Bethlehem company.

Guthrie showed by Nixon that the $900,000 would have been absorbed without relieving the company of all of the financial embarrassment which it suffered and then asked if it would have been honest to the other creditors if the interest charges on account of bonds had been paid on July 1, the date of the crisis in the affairs of the concern. The examination of Nixon was not concluded and will be resumed at the next hearing, which is set for a week from Monday.

Two Men Blown Up

Butler, Pa., Oct. 24.—William Marks was instantly killed and Patrick Hardy fatally injured here by an explosion of nitro-glycerine. The men found an empty can which they supposed had contained maple syrup from the small bit of sticky substance adhering to the top. Marks commenced to cut out the top so as to transform it into a water vessel. The small portion of the nitroglycerine at once exploded and Marks was blown to pieces. Hardy was badly mangled.

Would Not Leave Old Home Alive

South Berwick, Me., Oct. 24.—Rather than leave the old home where he had spent the 35 years of his life and where his father and grandfather before him had lived and died, and which had been sold over his head, George W. Ford last night greeted the newcomer and calmly remarked that he would never leave the old home alive. Drawing a revolver, he placed it against his right temple, discharged the weapon and fell dead.

Missing Man Returns

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 24.—Edward F. Lange, the shoe manufacturer who left this city June 24, returned last night, broken in health, and at once placed himself under the care of a physician. He refused himself to all callers. Mrs. Lange said that her husband had been in the state of Washington for some time, and that in all probability he would not remain permanently in this city.

Sympathy With New York Brethren

Chicago, Oct. 24.—In sympathy with fellow-workmen in New York, 1600 United Garment Workers employed by the International Tailoring company in Chicago have gone on strike. The strikers quit work in response to a telegram received from eastern officials of the union requesting sympathetic action in Chicago.

AFTER THE MIDNIGHT LUNCH.

Take a Dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and You Will Feel All Right in the Morning.

When you feel mean and measly, and your feet weigh a ton the morning after the night before, can you tell what was the cause?

It may be you ate too much, or, possibly, the last glass ought not to have been taken, or something else.

But even if you did know the cause, you would feel just as bilious and mean in the morning.

Fix that stomach so that it will be hungry, and take care of what you put into it? Before going to bed take a dose of Dr. Howard's Specific, and then in the morning your head will feel all right, your stomach will digest what goes into it, and your liver will act naturally.

Every bottle of this reliable remedy contains 60 doses of good, honest medicine that will bring health and happiness into the life of everyone who uses it. For years this Specific has been sold for 50 cents, but in order to bring it within the reach of all, the price is now 25 cents. "60 doses, a month's treatment, for a quarter of a dollar."

Chas. C. Hearn has sold hundreds of bottles, and says it is the finest stomach and liver medicine he ever had in his store. If you are not perfectly satisfied with it after using the medicine, he will hand you back your money without question. 20-22-24 of the ambulance bell that is so frequently heard could be frequently obviated, remarked the Romoc man.

ROMOC

You see it is just this way, nine out of ten people who are overcome by fainting spells, vertigo, weakness, palpitation of the heart and many other ills that cause unconsciousness are the victims of Indigestion.

Indigestion is not always indicated by severe pains in the stomach. It is such symptoms as I have described above that indicates its presence and are often the first warning that the stomach does not work right.

If more people would only take that greatest of Nature's remedies, Romoc, there would be less stomach disorders. Like all of Nature's remedies, Romoc acts directly on the seat of the trouble. No harm ever follows its use as is the case when remedies containing injurious drugs and alcohol are resorted to.

Romoc tones up this great life centre of the body, and, what is more, it purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves and creates a healthy, normal appetite.

Won't you please buy a bottle of Romoc, on my assurance that it will do you good and you will become one of the many in this city who advocate the use of this harmless yet potent medicine.

Ask for ROMOC LAXATIVE TABLETS—SURE CURE FOR CONSTIPATION.

We have investigated Romoc. We know that all that is said by the Romoc man pertaining to this wonderful remedy is true, and we will refund to anyone the price of the remedy not satisfied with the results obtained. Remember, Romoc is guaranteed and sold by

Watterson Says Longest Purse Brings Down Biggest Titles

MONKEY AND THE SWELL

Have Not Yet Become Interchangeable Among the Great Army of Noble American Commonalty, Which Is Classed as Real Society

Pittsburg, Oct. 24.—Henry Watterson delivered his lecture on "Society" last evening at Allegheny, before a small but enthusiastic crowd. The unusually cold weather that prevailed during the evening was responsible for the light audience. He said in part:

Something over a year ago a most lamentable tragedy, taking for its scene the very vestibule of the temple of fashion—the sanctum sanctorum of the Four Hundred—led me in the line of my duty as a writer for the press to say some exceedingly plain, and it may have been thought some very harsh things, about the nouveaux riches; the idle rich, the God-forgetting, world-defying, pleasure-seeking rich, who set themselves as a law unto themselves; who submit to no restraints except those fixed by nature and the surgeon's knife; who have no intellectual perspective except that the longest purse brings down the biggest titles, nor rule of conduct except that impelling them to eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow it may be some one else's turn; a code which I am told became altogether the rage in Babylon some centuries ago.

Must the monkey and the swell be accepted as interchangeable types, as alternating measurements of human breeding and beauty? Indeed, one would think so, reading some of the reports that come to us from the inner circles of that apotheosis of boredom, that incarnation of stupidity and affectation, which takes its cue from Leicester Square and the Corinthian club in London; which emulates the demi-mondaine of Paris; which eddies round the abodes of luxury and alimony at Newport, and thinks no more of running down an ordinary pedestrian in its automobile that you and I would think of brushing away a spider or a fly.

I, at least, have never wasted many thoughts or nursed any serious fears about such cattle, nor shall I do so until monkey-dinners become as popular in Pennsylvania as they seem to be in Rhode Island. I know that in each of our centres of population and wealth there is a little coterie of silly women and simpering Johnnies which would imitate the imitators; but they are too shallow and too scattered to make much headway against society, and by society I mean not merely those who, by their character, their genius and their good fortune, have earned the right to dwell in great houses, without the suspicion of the ostentatious display of wealth; to have picture galleries and libraries and horses and carriages, and, if they please, yachts and automobiles, but behind them that great army of the well-bred and well-to-do, that noble American commonalty, clean of birth and clear of grit; those cultivated men and women who live without scandal and travel without adventure; not rich indeed, but quite able to pay as they go; the rose and expectancy of true manhood and womanhood, the very buttress and bell-tower of our free republic.

These constitute what I call society. Radiating from the home—thrice-blessed in "dad" and "mam" and "granny," yea, in "Bill and Joe, Sis and Co."—its influence penetrates the dark and the light, reaching from the fireside to the counting room, from the counting room to the asylum, and the hospital, and, somehow, finding its way back again to the rooftree and the hearthstone via the schoolhouse and the house of God; never a thought of the divorce court, not so much as the shadow of "a noble lord" to disturb its serenity or to frighten its dreams. May that society be forever true in its politics to the lesson of the greatest good to the greatest number; in its religion, to Christ and Him crucified.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Patrolman Lewey Is Charged With the Murder of Louis Brandt

Boston, Oct. 24.—A member of the Boston police department, Edward F. Lewey, was held for the grand jury without bail on a charge of murdering Louis Brandt of South Boston on the night of Oct. 15. As Judge Bolster gave utterance to the decision a piercing scream rang through the court room and the wife of the prisoner sank into her chair among the spectators, shrieking and crying hysterically. Attendants and witnesses went to her aid and she was carried out, her cries echoing down the long corridors of the big court building. Two sisters and a sister-in-law of the prisoner, who were present, watched the scene, and when Mrs. Lewey was carried out they too became hysterical. The prisoner himself was almost overcome with emotion.

Lewey, who is one of the best known patrolmen in the city, he having received medals for bravery, is accused of striking Brandt with his fist and causing injuries which resulted in death an hour later. A dispute, apparently trifling, which arose in a barroom, is said to have led to the assault. The officer was not on duty at the time.

Lewey's attorney requested Judge Bolster to permit the charge to be changed from murder to that of manslaughter. On this point the court will later make reply.

A Pawtucket Mystery

Pawtucket, R. I., Oct. 24.—The police of Pawtucket are investigating the strange death of James Fury, aged 54. Early last evening Fury was found lying partly on the sidewalk and partly on a vacant lot of a street near his home. The man was unconscious, having sustained a fracture of the skull, hemorrhage of the brain, abrasion over the left temple and several fractures of the ribs. He died on the way to a hospital. The police suppose that Fury was run over by a team, the driver of which dragged him from the street and placed him where he was found.

ANTI-TAMMANY FORCE

Composed of Democrats Not In Search of Office

A NEW POLITICAL HOME

For Those Who Cannot Force Themselves to Go With Tammany and Will Not Ally Themselves With Republicans—To Be Without Bosses

New York, Oct. 24.—The new Democratic organization, which was started at a Cooper Union mass meeting Tuesday night, has already an enrolment of 3000. Its leaders are the old-time Cleveland Democrats like William H. Hornblower, Everett P. Wheeler, Peter B. Olney, Wheeler H. Peckham and Robert G. Monroe. It is the purpose of those men to form an organization free from boss control, which every anti-Tammany Democrat in the city can join. The success of the movement seems to be assured, and it looks now as if Tammany would have a real Democratic rival soon, no matter what the result of the municipal election may be.

Robert Monroe says that the new organization will be very different from the late Greater New York Democracy and the other "Democracies" which have been swallowed by Tammany Hall in the last dozen years. The Greater New York Democracy was formed in this way: John C. Sheehan, Jacob A. Cantor and other men who had been turned down by Tammany during the Van Wyck administration banded together, went to prominent anti-Tammany Democrats and secured the use of their names and then held a big meeting at which these names were the chief attraction. For a time Sheehan and Cantor kept in the background and the movement looked like the real reform article; but as soon as offices were in sight, the Sheehan crowd came forward and the fine names figured thereafter only on letterheads and as vice presidents of meetings, which their owners never attended, while the politicians assumed full control. It was the old story of anti-Tammany Democratic movements in this city.

Mr. Monroe says that the new organization will keep clear of control by the professional politicians from the beginning. Deserters from the Sheehan ranks and from Tammany will be admitted, but, he added: "They will have to take muskets and go out on the firing line." The plan is to form an organization of Democrats who do not depend on politics for a living and who can be relied upon, therefore, to resist such offers from Tammany as led to the dissolution of the Greater New York Democracy.

"There are many thousands of Democrats in this city," said Monroe, "who are looking for a political home. They cannot force themselves to go with Tammany and they will not ally themselves with the Republicans; these are the men we are addressing, and the response so far shows that our organization fills a long-felt want. If Tammany is defeated next month, there will be a rush to our organization, but no matter how the election goes, the organization has come to stay."

At present the anti-Tammany Democrats are devoting their energies to the support of the fusion ticket. After the election they may become an important figure in state politics; they intend to take part next spring in the election of delegates to the conventions, which will elect delegates to the Democratic national convention and select the state ticket. Tammany's defeat at the polls would put them in such a position that they could not be ignored by the state machine. Meanwhile the organization is doing effective work in dispelling the impression that Tammany is trying so hard to create—that the municipal campaign is a straight fight between Democrats and Republicans.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It seemes strange to the outside world that labor of any sort is not abundant in the southern states, where there are supposed to be the greater number of ten million of Negroes. Nevertheless the fact remains that there is in many parts of this section a scarcity not only of farm labor but of domestic servants. The movement of the Negroes to the cities is most active because there they hope to find persons of their own race who will harbor them and help them to employment. A negro who has once lived in a city will not go back to the country on any terms, and he even scorns the smaller cities and considerable towns where in some cases they are not wanted but meet with serious opposition, whereas they can go to the great cities without being noticed. So extensively has this migration of Negroes northward been in progress that the next census will show astonishing results.—New Orleans Picayune.

Quincy High Wins Again, Milton High Shut Out.

SCORE, 24 TO 0.

At the Foot Ball Game Yesterday

Third Victory for Quincy High.

And Only One Defeat This Season.

The Quincy High school foot ball team had an easy time in defeating the Milton High eleven on the playground at East Milton Tuesday afternoon. Quincy scored four touchdowns, two in each half, from which the goals were kicked, making the final score, 24 to 0. The day was not an ideal one for a game of foot ball, but nevertheless, a goodly number found their way from Quincy to Milton to witness the contest. The Quincy supporters at the game gave their team good support by lusty cheering on several occasions, while the Milton pupils were heard several times, when their team made decided gains.

A deplorable feature of the contest was the presence of a hundred or more spectators on the field throughtout the game. The police officers were conspicuous by their absence, and it kept the officials busy to prevent some of the more forward spectators from participating in the game. The play was delayed several times while the crowd was forced back to the side lines.

The contesting teams were fairly well matched as to weight, the Quincy boys on the line having a slight advantage over their opponents in this respect. The Milton team played a snappy game throughout, but for some unexplainable reason was not able to stop the rushes of the Quincy backs.

It would be an injustice to the other members of the Quincy team, to say who did the best work. Percival made long gains throught a large space opened by Bennett, while Fenno, Desmond and R. Sanders made good distances outside of tackle and through the line. Capt. H. Sanders played his usual good game at quarter back. Milton was unable to make many gains around Prario and Comins. The Quincy center held like a stone wall, and yards gained through the three center players were well earned by the opposing backs.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that next week is Hospital week.

MILLIONS WANTED.

For the Navy Department for the Coming Year.

A Washington dispatch of Oct. 16 to the Boston Globe says Secretary Moody has completed the naval estimates for the coming congress and they have been approved by the President. They call for the expenditure of more than $100,000,000, which is more than $20,000,000 in excess of the amount asked for last year.

Congressman Dayton of West Virginia second member of the house naval affairs committee, who has just returned from Europe, called at the navy department today. He thinks the need of a much larger navy is imperative and wants four or five 16,000-ton battleships provided for by the next congress. Mr. Dayton says:

"In Germany the word has gone forth that the fatherland must have a navy as strong as any other power, and that colonies must be founded to drain off the surplus population without denationalization. My impression is that Germany is looking to South America for the establishment of these colonies and will not permit the Monroe doctrine to stand in the way, if it comes to the test.

"The German naval program will be complete by 1910 and that country will then have 38 modern battleships. The British navy is standing still and France is going backward. They all admit that our 16,000-ton battleship of the Louisiana class are the acme of warship construction."

We Paid $100,000

For Liquozone—Yet We Give You a 50c. Bottle Free.

This company, after testing Liquozone for two years in the most difficult germ diseases, paid $100,000 for the United States' rights. That is by far the highest price ever paid for similar rights on any scientific discovery.

We publish this fact to show you the value of Liquozone. The most worthless product may have great claims made about it; but men don't pay a price like that save for a discovery of remarkable worth to humanity.

Kills Inside Germs.

Liquozone alone kills germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. It is so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. Liquozone destroys at once and forever the cause of any germ disease.

And there is no other way to do it. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you, and it cannot be taken internally. Liquozone alone can attack a trouble that is caused by inside germs; and it cures diseases which medicine never cured.

Liquid Oxygen.

Liquozone is simply liquid oxygen—no drugs, no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of Pauli, the great German chemist, who spent 20 years on it. His object was to get such an excess of oxygen in staple form into the blood that no germ could live in any membrane or tissue.

Liquozone does that. Oxygen is Nature's greatest tonic—the very source of vitality. Its effects are exhilarating—purifying, vitalizing. Nothing else in the world is so good for you. But germs are vegetables; and this excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetable matter.

We spend 14 days in making each bottle of Liquozone; but the result is liquid oxygen—a product which will cure diseases which no medical skill can cure without it. It is now employed in every great hospital, and indorsed by every medical authority, the world over.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone kills the germs, wherever they are, and the results are inevitable. By destroying the cause of the trouble, it invariably ends the disease, and forever.

In nervous debility Liquozone acts as a vitalizer, accomplishing what no drugs can do.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole. Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903-1904.

Arrangements have been made by the Ledger for the publication of suggestions for Christmas,—home made gifts, etc. They will appear frequently in column instalments.

The annual meeting of the union of King's Daughters circles will be held Saturday afternoon and evening, Oct. 31, with the Reaper's circle at the parish house of Christ church.

The many friends of Miss Fannie Kelly of Brockton and Quincy were pleased to hear of her marriage to Mr. Alexander Steward, which took place at her mother's home in New Brunswick. Fannie is a sister to Mrs. P. W. Mannex of West Quincy.

John Curran, fifteen years old, met with a very serious accident last Sunday, while on a gunning trip down the Fore river. He attempted to take up his gun, when it went off, and the charge entered his right arm, shattering it very badly at the elbow. He was taken to the Quincy City Hospital, and the doctors have hopes of saving his arm.

Circle Pride, of Roger Wolcott C. of F. of A., had for guests at their meeting on Thursday evening, Rev. John McKenna of Lowell, who gave an interesting talk on the progress of the order. Dr. John H. Ash physician of the circle delivered an address and Miss Germain of Boston gave a vocal selection accompanied on the piano by Miss Letty Burke. A collation was served.

CARE OF THE BABY.

Don't stuff the baby until nature rebels by an emesis.

Don't forget that it wants cool water to drink occasionally.

Don't be afraid to use common sense in the care of your baby.

Don't expect the baby to be perfectly well unless you feed it on nature's food—mother's milk.

Don't bundle up its head to suffocation. Don't cover up its head except in a blast of wind.

Don't forget that regularity in mealtime is just as necessary for your little one as for yourself.

At night be sure the room is well ventilated. Its susceptibility to sickness is in inverse ratio to the amount of good pure air you provide for its lungs.

Don't keep the baby in the house one minute that it is possible to have it out of doors. A baby kept out in the air and sunshine will not be cross and irritable.

Don't fasten its clothes like a vise and then think it is going to be comfortable. A child can't be happy unless it can move every muscle of its body freely.

Don't put too many clothes on the baby, and, above all, don't inflict it with long clothes. Least of all should this be done during its first few months of life, when it is weaker than at any other time.

Democrats Discuss Issues of Campaign

EXTRAVAGANCE

In State Affairs Charged Against Republicans.

More About Check to Gov. Bates.

Henry H. Faxon Interrupts with Questions.

One of the best rallies ever held by the Democrats of Quincy was that of last evening at Music hall. The attendance was large, and the speakers earnest in the discussion of State issues.

Henry H. Faxon was in the audience and interrupted the speakers with questions and comments. He and Mr. Rackemann and Judge Corcoran had several good-natured set-tos which provoked considerable sport.

Chairman Carey of the City Committee introduced Edward J. Parker as the presiding officer, who outlined the issues and introduced as the first speaker Felix Rackemann of Milton, the candidate for senator.

The gentleman thought there were some live issues in this campaign, and took Jefferson's bill of rights as his text. He said it demanded frugality, but the Republican government by commission was extravagant. It was not right to commit future Legislatures to appropriations. He objected to the appropriation for the World's Fair; to a recess committee on revision of salaries; to unequal taxation; to tinkering with the laws.

He thought it time for a change in government, as the Republican party was drunk with power. It was an unhealthy condition.

Alfred S. Hayes was the next speaker and was more specific in his charges against Gov. Bates which he recently made in Taunton. He thought further explanation was due the people, as to his financial transactions with Walter J. Holden. The Governor's explanation that he borrowed on a life insurance policy was doubted. In closing he advocated the election of Mr. Gaston.

Judge John W. Corcoran, the next speaker, argued that the few who have the advantages have them to the disadvantage of the masses. He charged the Republican party with robbing men of their votes, and also with gerrymandering in redistricting the state for Congress and the Senate. Also with extravagance. He did not think Gov. Bates capable to fill the office.

Congressman McNary was introduced and promised anew to work diligently for the interests of Quincy. He had a good word for Representative Fallon, and predicted the election of Mr. Gaston. He said the state demanded an extension of the labor laws, a broad guage Governor, and changes in the tariff.

Representative Fallon, the last speaker read a type written speech with an account of his service in the House. He objected to the criticism of the Socialists. He had voted conscientiously for Quincy, for labor measures, and for economy. He claimed the credit for the Fore River appropriation. Personally his firm was a pioneer in Quincy for nine hours and for eight hours.

A selection by the Quincy band closed the rally at 10 25.

The Machine That Thought

... By W. L. SWIFT

Copyright, 1903, by W. L. Swift

LET me say at the beginning that whatever mystery there may be about the adventure here described it is to me as great a mystery as ever, and all efforts of mine to find an adequate explanation have been in vain.

I was a student at a small college in the suburbs of one of our great cities. After a day of hard work, but without unusual excitement, I had retired at the usual time, leaving my door unlocked, as was customary with the students, and slept peacefully until aroused by a slight noise as of some one moving in the room. My visitor sat by my bedside and in a most matter of fact tone said:

"I will wait for you to dress."

"All right," said I, supposing him to be a fellow student. "Make yourself comfortable. I rise at half past 7."

Moving toward the door, he said but one word—"Come"—and to my own utter surprise I arose, dressed and followed him like a dog.

A train was waiting at the little station, and as the light from the furnace door threw its golden glow upon the rolling smoke I saw the face of my companion. I had seen it in pictures before, and in my normal state of mind it would have given me great uneasiness, for I was sure my visitor was Dr. Easton, the man in charge of the great insane asylum eighty miles away and noted throughout the world for his wonderful hypnotic influence over his patients, of whom he could control the most violent by simply his own personal power. In bringing in new patients he used neither force nor persuasion. He spoke, and they followed, exactly as I had done. Had I unconsciously become insane?

"I HAVE HEARD OF YOUR EXCELLENT RECORD."

Beyond falling violently in love with a sweet creature to whom I could not hope to offer a home for years to come, and whose other suitors would gladly have seen me put out of the way, I could remember no act of insanity.

It was a wild, rapid ride, and daylight was beginning to appear when we stopped. My surmise was correct; we were at the insane asylum. But, greatly to my surprise, I was received not as a patient, but as an honored guest, welcomed to breakfast with the family, given a room to rest in and later in the day invited to walk about the grounds and buildings with the great doctor himself. And it was not till after I had seen and admired the exquisite perfection of the arrangements for the comfort and recovery of the patients, all of whom seemed to regard the doctor with veneration and affection, not till I had passed one of the pleasantest days of my life with the doctor and his family, that the real object of his summons to me came to light. In the evening he said:

"I have heard of your excellent record in college, and I believe I can trust you fully if I reveal to you the secret of my life, an invention almost perfected, that will not only immortalize my name, but will be of untold benefit to humanity. I need and must have the assistance of a young man in perfecting it. The work will call for much sacrifice, but the reward will be such as should come to one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. Will you assist me?"

Would I? Would any young man with dreams of future happiness let slip a chance for wealth and honor, though the way seemed hard? I said:

"I trust you as you have trusted me, and I am very much at your service."

"Come," he said. And again I followed obediently.

He opened the door of a large, low room, where sat at a table twenty men with the most vacant expression of countenance I ever saw on the faces of human beings. With a start I recognized one, a former neighbor of mine, a harmless lunatic, whose mysterious disappearance had been a nine days' wonder in the village. The doctor said:

"You see before you what no other sane man has seen, the result of the labor and investigation of a lifetime. My discovery is simply this—that as in a composite photograph the features of many people are blended in one, so it is possible to combine in one the brain power of twenty with magnificent results.

"Look! These were and are all helpless lunatics, yet each had his strong point, which by electrical excitement of the corresponding portion of the brain has in the course of years been enormously developed. By placing all these in electrical connection and under hypnotic influence the most extraordinary results have been obtained."

As he spoke he placed a pencil in the hand of one and rapidly connected a wire to a different spot on the head of each.

"See," he said. "My machine is thinking now." And indeed every face fairly glowed with intelligence. The transformation was wonderful.

"Give it the most difficult problem you have met with in mathematics," said the doctor. I did so. It was solved instantly.

"Give it the plot of a story." I obeyed, and as fast as the hand could write the story was written in excellent English and beautiful chirography. A love letter, a poem, an oration, a sermon, an essay, followed in quick succession, each almost perfect of its kind. Here, then, was the secret of the doctor's fame as an author and a mathematician. But when asked to tell how to remedy a defect in a well known machine the pencil stopped.

"You have found the weak point," said the doctor. "These men are not of sound mind; therefore not one is an original thinker. In lines of thought already worked out the machine is incomparable. But the world needs new thought, invention. Think of the thousands of dollars lost daily by the wasteful use of steam and the inability of the ordinary human mind to find a remedy! Think of the urgent need for invention in the automobile, the flying machine, the solar engine, the typesetting machine, the wireless telegraph and in numerous electrical appliances! Think of the political problems, the social problems, the religious problems which have worried the minds of men for ages, causing more than one bloody war! They would here find quick and easy solution.

"I know your record in college. I know you are noted for originality. I know your specialty is mechanics. For the benefit of humanity, for the advancement of the human race, I ask you to give up your individuality, to multiply your power twentyfold by becoming a part of this machine."

Is it any wonder that I hesitated at first? I realized at once that greater opportunity for usefulness had never been offered to mortal man. Yet the sacrifice was as great as the opportunity. All dreams of love, of wealth, of personal glory, must be given up forever, for my very existence would be merged and lost in this most extraordinary combination.

"Wait," said the doctor. "Let my machine plead its own cause."

Then ensued the most wonderful revelation of all. The writer laid down his pencil, and the spokesman of the company began to talk. And his words showed that this phenomenon, this nameless combination, this thinking of twenty souls with but a single thought, was more enthusiastically devoted to Dr. Easton than any of his other patients. It showed that in the exercise of their combined power of thought each one took as keen pleasure as if the effort were all his own. The doctor had not only brought back to their darkened minds the light of reason, but had increased its power twentyfold, and, individually and collectively, they all gloried and rejoiced in it. The combination not only urged me by all considerations of humanity to join the band, but it showed me what a happy life it led. It sang songs, it told stories, it cracked jokes, it played on musical instruments, it read and recited and acted, and all with that peculiar and wonderful power of twenty instead of one.

I still wavered, but once more the doctor's wonderful hypnotic power decided for me, and when he approached with the electric wire I had no power to resist. It touched my head, and I knew no more.

But slowly, like the dawn of a glorious morning, came an awakening such as I shall never again experience this side of the future life. Now I understood the loyalty and gratitude of the machine to its master. Did you ever stand before a large and sympathetic gathering of people with a message for them in which you dared to hope that all might be interested and from which great good to all would result? Do you know the thrill of joy that overcomes the speaker at finding that they are with him to a man and that his puny power is multiplied by that of thousands of enthusiastic supporters? Such delight is dim and shadowy compared to what I now experienced. The "creative joy" of which Goethe tells in his Easter hymn was not greater than this, and I could dimly understand why the Hindoo asks no better heaven than to be absorbed into universal consciousness.

For I had not lost my individuality; I had gained immeasurably. Every thought, every plan, every invention, now had the cordial support of twenty active minds, all working in complete unison and with almost unlimited powers. I could work out problems that had puzzled mankind for ages, I could be the greatest benefactor the world had ever known, and with all this consciousness of power I felt the steadying influence of twenty other minds holding me back from wild speculations, carefully considering and sifting my plans and theories, throwing out everything impractical and visionary and giving thorough consideration only to the most worthy. It was enormous power, but power under perfect control, to which it almost seemed nothing was impossible.

I was all on fire with enthusiasm and consented unwillingly to the night's rest on which the doctor insisted before beginning the great work of my life.

But in the silence of the night, after the electric communication had been severed, the case assumed a different aspect. More and more I realized that this tremendous power in which I had so exulted was not permanently under my own control. It was doubtful if even the inventor could always control it. Certainly some, perhaps many, of the individuals in the combination were not only mental, but moral, degenerates. Even supposing that the doctor could retain control during his life, he was far advanced in years, and who could be his successor? Instead of conferring the greatest benefits on mankind, what could prevent the machine from being used for the vilest purposes, dragging down instead of building up the human race to the enrichment of some wily scoundrel and the great delight of the worst maniacs in the combination?

Sometimes the case assumed a grimly humorous aspect. I thought of the student who called up a devil to bring him water and was drowned in the effort to stop him. I thought of the mental struggles of the man who might some time sue the machine for libel and his vain efforts to fix the responsibility on any one. I even pictured the bewilderment of St. Peter when a spirit whose responsibility was divided into twenty-one parts should apply to him for admission, and the possibility of each spirit having to answer for the sins of the other twenty was not pleasant to think of.

But I need not deny that what influenced me most strongly was the thought of the bright eyed girl in my native village and the future we had planned together, now lost to us forever. More and more the conviction was forced upon me that the doctor had robbed me of my life's happiness, perhaps of my hopes of heaven, and as sleep at length overcame me my last thought was one of bitter resentment.

When I awoke I was in my old room in college, no one, not even myself, knowing how I came there. Whether the doctor had become alarmed at the excitement caused among my friends by my disappearance, whether he decided that my capacity was far below his requirements or whether he kindly relented and gave me back my individual existence I shall never know, for he died soon after, and his secret died with him. But there in my pocket, as I had placed them, still rested the evidences of the machine that thought—the poem, the love letter, the oration and the story, all far more nearly perfect than any ordinary mind could produce and all in that exquisite handwriting.

It seems like only a hypnotic dream, and yet—there are the documents.

ALVERSTONE'S COURSE

In Boundary Dispute the Subject of Much Comment

IS DEFENDED IN ENGLAND

Against Charges of Breach of Faith—Contrary Feeling In Canada, Where Statesment Are Much Wrought Up Over the Matter

London, Oct. 24.—With the exception of The Saturday Review, which displays its anti-American bias in an even more intense form than usual, the weekly papers in their comments on the decision of the Alaska boundary tribunal adopt fairly impartial views and decline to believe that Lord Chief Justice Alverstone was actuated by other than honorable and judicial motives or that he was guilty of the breach of faith charged against him. The Saturday Review, however, declares that "one more betrayal of the same nature will strain the imperial connection to the breaking point," and congratulates Mr. Chamberlain upon being out of the government on such an occasion.

All the weeklies naturally sympathize with Canada. The Spectator believes that after momentary expressions of annoyance the Cadanians will realize that they are as much bound by the decision as they would have been had it been wholly favorable to them and that if Lord Alverstone's mind was unconsciously biased it was not certainly in the American direction. The Spectator says also it is heartily glad that such a difficult question has been settled, because it might imaginably have led to war between the United States and Great Britain.

The Speaker points out that the decision is perfectly consistent with the Behring sea award and that Canada ought to remember the triumph of yesterday in the betterness of today.

Discussed by Canadian Solons

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—In the debate in the house last evening on the Alaska boundary decision Mr. Borden, leader of the opposition, declared that Canada should have withdrawn from being a party to the treaty once they had seen the character of the tribunal. This was in January last. The government also should have insisted upon three Canadian commissioners. There ought also to have been an umpire.

Premier Laurier, in reply, said that the position of Borden was somewhat severe on the chief justice of England. The premier was willing to wait to see the opinion of Lord Alverstone before deciding against him. In his own opinion Canada had a good case. But there were, no doubt, arguments on the other side. He was sorry that he could not lay all the correspondence before parliament because the British government would not permit it, but next session he would do so, no matter what protests came from abroad. He also regretted that Canada had not treaty-making powers. More than once he viewed with regret having to live alongside a grasping and powerful nation like the United States. He suggested the building of an all-Canadian railway to the Yukon gold fields.

In regard to the opposition members who advised the government's withdrawing after the king had ratified the treaty, the premier said they should think seriously of what that meant. Suppose the United States would have placed the American flag over the disputed territory, then Canada would have had to withdraw in shame or go to war.

Liberals Attack Alverstone

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 24.—The Vancouver Liberal association has registered a vigorous protest against the terms of the Alaskan boundary award. By unanimous action the course of the Canadian commissioners in refusing to sign the award was endorsed; protest was made against the fact that the British commissioner had dared to attach his signature to a document giving away Cadanian territory in the face of the wishes of the Canadian commissioners and contrary to the judicial findings in the dispute.

Dowie's Wife and Son Depart

New York, Oct. 24.—The Dowie meeting last night was given over principally to a farewell to Mrs. Dowie and her son, who leaves for Europe today. Both made addresses, denying that they were leaving on account of their disapproval of Dowie methods. Dowie took as the subject of his discourse the parable of the nobleman who divided the talents among his servants, but soon launched out into a long laudation of Zion as a place of residence.

Ellsworth Denies Charges

Washington, Oct. 24.—President Ellsworth of the Ellsworth Coal company at Ellsworth, Pa., had a conference with officials of the department of justice concerning the allegation that his company had violated the contract labor laws in importing into this country Welsh miners for work in its collieries. Mr. Ellsworth denied that either he or his company had induced the miners to come to the United States.

Shaw Talks to Iowans

Muscatine, Ia., Oct. 24.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw opened the Iowa campaign last night with a speech here, in which he talked upon the tariff, trusts, money and ship subsidy questions, making as the keynote of his talk an appeal to the people to demand the opening up of the markets of the south for United States products.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 25—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—What the Bible teaches about giving.—II Cor. ix, 6-11; viii, 23, 24. (Missions.)

There are many pastors and Christian workers who hesitate to present financial matters to the church, and especially to appeal for money for missions. But in the light of the Scriptures this should not be so. God in His word is not at all indifferent to this phase of the religious life. The Bible teaches God's ownership and man's stewardship. All is God's—the earth, the cattle upon a thousand hills, the silver and the gold. And of all of these that man possesses he does so not in his own right, but as a steward of God, and God expects us to wisely exercise that stewardship, and especially, it would seem to me, in relation to missions. Missions, instead of being the last thing we give to, should be the first and most important. Every church that can do so should have its own home and foreign missionary on the field, and this could be done if the people would give systematically as God gives to them.

Giving to missions should be preceded by a giving of ourselves to Christ. This the Macedonians did. "First they gave their own selves unto the Lord." If we believe that Christ can save the heathen we must also believe that He can save us, and, accepting Him as our personal Saviour, we should then be anxious to make it possible for others to know and to be saved by Him.

2. The example of others should stimulate us to missionary giving. We are exhorted to "provoke one another to good works." Paul appealed to the Corinthians on the ground of what Macedonia had done, and there is no reason why one church and one Christian should not by example stimulate others to missionary giving. Many churches have their own missionaries. Why should not yours? Many individuals give liberally, systematically and proportionately to missions. If you are not among the number, why should you not be stimulated to imitate their example?

3. The example of Christ should stimulate us to missionary giving. "Ye know," says Paul to the Corinthians, "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, how that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor that ye through his poverty might become rich." Christ gave himself as the world's missionary. Can we hold back our little when the Master gave his all? God forbid, for the servant is not above his Master or his Lord.

Treasurer William Shaw.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor, the corporate body of the great organization, was formed at the Old Orchard (Me.) convention in 1885. Soon after this convention William Shaw was chosen treasurer of the United society, an office he has ever since held, holding the responsible position and performing its duties carefully and wisely, but never receiving a cent of pay therefor. The cause of Christian Endeavor owes a large debt of love to Mr. Shaw, for he has devotedly served it, not only in this office, but in a multitude of other ways. His ringing voice has sounded a stirring message before many a mammoth convention, and during the months when the United society was without a general secretary he added the duties of that office to his own.

WILLIAM SHAW.

Missionary Volunteers.

During the Boer war many Christian Endeavor societies were organized in the prison camps in Ceylon, St. Helena and Bermuda, with several thousand members. Since the return of these men to South Africa 200 have volunteered for missionary work, and the Dutch Reformed church has opened a training school for them in Worcester, South Africa. We hold in high honor the little group of five missionary volunteers around the Haystack at Williamstown, Mass. What shall we say of the 200 Endeavorer missionary volunteers in South Africa? —William Shaw in General Secretary's Report at Denver Convention.

The Underlying Principle.

The prime principle underlying Christian Endeavor is very simple, the idea of furnishing Christian service and expression for every one, every young man and woman, every boy and girl, for which none is too young, none too poor, none too ignorant, none too bashful.—Rev. F. E. Clark, D. D.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Evidences That Period of Abnormal Activity Has Received a Check

New York, Oct. 24.—Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says: Failure of several banking institutions reflects the fall of prices in securities, and should be considered the logical aftermath of the protracted depression in speculative channels rather than any evidence of current weakness in the industrial or trade situation. Funds were quickly forwarded to the disturbed centres and confidence promptly restored, although it was impossible to prevent some contraction of business.

Numerous labor controversies have appeared, and more furnaces and mills have closed, the tendency being to operate only the plants provided with the most modern equipment. There is no anxiety regarding legislation at the special session of congress and despite the curtailment of activity in many manufacturing lines, a heavy volume of business is being transacted. Flour mills at Minneapolis have fully resumed, and a big season's cut is contemplated at Minnesota lumber mills. Western traffic facilities are proving inadequate, the distribution of merchandise being enormous at the interior, and, taking the country as a whole, conditions may be considered fairly satisfactory, although there are indisputable evidences that abnormal activity has received a check.

A little encouragement was given to the textile industry by placing of moderate orders for brown sheetings to be exported, but this Chinese business is of a special nature and not a revival of regular trade for the east. As to woolens and worsteds a slight increase in orders is noted, although there is much idle machinery, and supplementary buying fails to reach normal proportions.

Large contracts have been placed for spring shipment of shoes, and prices are somewhat firmer on a few lines, while others are steady and firm in tone.

Disaster Story to Gain Sympathy

Newport News, Va., Oct. 24.—James L. Grant, a deserter from the battleship Maine, was delivered to the police by Rev. R. E. Steele. Grant is the sailor who related to Steele, who is superintendent of the Sailors' Rest here, a story about the wreck of a Gloucester fishing schooner off Cape Cod and the drowning of all on board save himself and Charles Keeler, who is also believed to be a deserter from the Maine. The tale told by the alleged survivor turns out to be a pure invention, concocted by the men to enlist the sympathy of the Sailors' Rest officers.

Anarchist Agitator Arrested

New York, Oct. 24.—Armed with a warrant, sworn out by Secretary Cortelyou of the department of commerce and labor, four immigration inspectors, several secret service detectives and a number of policemen went to Murray Hill lyceum last night and arrested John Turner, an Englishman, on a charge of inciting and promoting anarchy in violation of the alien labor laws. The police confiscated a lot of anarchistic circulars and cards which had been distributed.

Payne Disbars a Lawyer

Washington, Oct. 24.—Postmaster General Payne has signed an order disbarring H. J. Barrett of Baltimore, nephew of former Assistant Attorney General Tyner, and for some years law clerk and acting assistant attorney general for the department, from practice before the department. Barrett was indicted by the grand jury here as the result of alleged transactions involving decisions of the assistant attorney general in turf investment cases.

Alleged Assailant of Child

Haverhill, Mass., Oct. 24.—Burns Bushman, for whom the police have been looking since last May, was brought here last evening and locked up. Bushman was arrested in Berwick, Me., at the instance of local officers. Bushman was wanted for brutal assault committed upon an 8-year-old girl.

Tragedy In Mayor's Office

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 24.—Policeman Collins was shot down in the mayor's office by Henry G. Green, an art dealer. The shooting occurred in the presence of a number of persons. Collins was under investigation by the mayor on charges brought by Green. Collins will probably die.

Duke of Devonshire at Head

London, Oct. 24.—At a meeting of the parliamentary committee of the Unionist Free Food league the Duke of Devonshire was unanimously elected president of the league and Lord Goschen, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and C. T. Ritchie were elected vice presidents.

CHECK FOR $1,150.

Presented to Rev. J. P. Cuffe by Members of St. John's Church.

A committee from St. John's church waited upon Rev. J. P. Cuffe, at Atlantic last evening and presented him with a check for $1,150, as a token of their appreciation for his 22 years of labor among them. Fr. Cuffe feelingly responded, and assured them that he should always remember and cherish his relationship with St. John's church and would always do all he could for them.

AUTUMN STYLES.

The New Turned Up Toques—Dresses of Dark Serge.

Quite a beautiful gown of black lace over white had pyramids of tiny flounces in a V form, starting at the hem in the center of the back and repeated on either side, giving great grace to the skirt. The bodice was quite pouched, the black lace forming a sort of coatee over a white front, from which descended long tassels with panne ends, made like a gigantic mulberry in a light mauve tint. The violet color was repeated in small chiffon violets appliqued to the decolletage and to the angel sleeves. The satin belt was also of the same hue.

Many of the new toques turn up very abruptly on the left side and are simply trimmed with a bird and loops of velvet ribbon.

A most useful dress is one of serge, dark blue or dark red, both being equally attractive, with a plaited skirt bearing a plain yoke and a plain front. Gowns of greenish plaid are also considered ultra smart for fall wear.

The cut shows a plaid mountain suit with white vest and lapels.

Saturday afternoon the zoology class went again to the Cambridge museum. A common beetle found under logs and rocks showed remarkable powers. stockholders in the Trustee Land Co., whose stock is owned largely in Tolland and Windham Counties, Connecticut, have just received a two per cent. dividend in liquidation. This makes a total of twelve per cent. received from an investment that was to pay large returns, which never materialized. Evidently there is but one way for people to learn that large returns and large risks go hand in hand, and that is by experience. A good many people have to employ this teacher several times before they can profit by it.—Review and Record.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON THEATRE.

What will positively be the last week of the extended engagement of the big New England play, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," will commence next Monday at the Boston theatre. This last week will make five big weeks of the play at the Boston Theatre with crowded attendances at every performance. Heretofore "Quincy Adams Sawyer" has confined its engagement in Boston to two and three weeks only, but even before the run commenced such enthusiastic interest was manifested in advance that it was decided to make the stay an even month. When the engagement was on its first week it was found advisable to add still another week to the run. From Boston the great production goes to the immense Chicago Auditorium, then goes to Philadelphia for a run, and then will go to New York City for its long stay of three months. No play in the recent history of the Boston Theatre has made such a remarkable record as "Quincy Adams Sawyer." The past week over 25,000 people witnessed the play in eight performances. As the seating capacity of the Boston Theatre is 3,000 people the reader will easily see that not only must every seat have been occupied at every performance but hundreds must have been to stand. Judging from the experiences of the past few weeks it will be very advisable for out of town patrons who contemplate seeing "Quincy Adams Sawyer" during the last week of its engagement to secure their seats in advance.

PARK THEATRE.

Another big hit for Annie Russell, perhaps the biggest of all the triumphs she has achieved in the six years she has been one of Charles Frohman's stars. It certainly does look from the immediate conquest Miss Russell made in Boston when the first performance of "Mice and Men" was given, and from the packed, delighted and enthusiastic audiences that have seen her in Mrs. Ryley's play since, that she has a record-breaker in "Mice and Men." It is a quaint, a dainty and a pretty play and in it Miss Russell is all that she has been heretofore to theatre-goers, and besides that, she has something new. Her Peggy is an exquisite creation, perhaps more roguishly humorous and fuller of human quality than any of her previous roles, but as true to life, as sweet and winsome, and sympathy-compelling and as strong emotionally as any of the types of attractive womanhood she has given us. Mrs. Gilbert, a great favorite, has a role that gives scope to her well known comedy abilities. Oswald Yorke and John Mason, as the two lovers of Peggy, contribute notably to the interest and merit of the performance.

Particular attention is called to the fact that during the engagement of Annie Russell matinees will be given only on Saturday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

Another of the plays put forward by Clyde Fitch in recent years, "The Cowboy and the Lady," has been secured by the Castle Square management for performances at popular prices next week. The play was written for and first produced by Nat Goodwin three seasons ago and was a great success throughout the country. There is much real humor in the story "The Cowboy and the Lady" and in giving the experiences of a young Eastern man, who has had a strenuous and athletic life at Harvard and seeks to utilize the practical side of his educational career in the western country, the author has contrived to introduce many amusing scenes and situations with well drawn characters and good dialogue. The play offers some good opportunities for effective dramatic work by members of the Castle Square Stock Company and the production will follow in all essential details that originally made by Mr. Goodwin's company The usual free distribution of souvenir boxes of choice chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

GOOD WORK

By the Race Point Station Men Saturday Night.

Schooner Dawson Now on the Beach.

The Breeches Buoy Needed to Rescue Some of the Men.

Provincetown, Mass., Oct. 26.—Eighteen members of the crew of the Gloucester fishing schooner Dawson City are resting at Provincetown after a perilous experience when their vessel was wrecked and 14 of their number rescued with great difficulty by the life savers from the Race Point life saving station. The remaining four succeeded in launching a dory from the stranded schooner, and after suffering considerable hardship effected a landing at Provincetown. After the crew had been taken from the vessel the high breakers forced her well up on the beach. Tugs Mercury and Palace tried to float her, but were unsuccessful.

The Dawson City was commanded by Captain O'Neill. The schooner had just completed a satisfactory trip to the fishing banks and came into this port to dispose of the cargo. After obtaining new supplies Captain O'Neill started out Saturday night to return to the banks.

The tide was running in strongly at the time, with high breakers, and it is believed that Captain O'Neill miscalculated the effect of this, as he stood out to sea. Suddenly the Dawson City grounded and in a few moments huge waves had carried the vessel further inshore at a point midway between Race Point lifesaving station and Race Point light.

The weather was very squally, and as the vessel was pounding on the sand the lives of the sailors were gravely in danger. Signals were sent up to attract the attention of the life savers at Race Point. They were soon observed by the patrol on the beach, and it did not take long for Captain Fisher and his crew to launch a surf boat and start for the wrecked schooner. Eventually the Dawson City was reached, and seven members of her crew jumped into the lifeboat. These men were rowed back safely to the beach. Then Captain Fisher prepared for a second journey to the stranded vessel.

By this time the wind had increased and the sea was dangerous for navigation in any kind of a small boat. Half way out to the schooner a great wave struck the lifeboat broadside and Captain Fisher was knocked overboard. One of the life savers grasped the captain's coat and pulled him on board again. Sea after sea continued to break into the surfboat until finally the steering gear was carried away and the boat nearly filled with water. Under the circumstances the folly of attempting to continue was apparent to the men, and they succeeded with great difficulty in reaching the beach again.

The work of rescue was not abandoned, however. The apparatus of the Humane society was near at hand. A line was thrown out to the Dawson City and a breeches buoy was arranged. By this means seven more of the crew were rescued one by one from the schooner, among them Captain O'Neill.

It appeared later that shortly after the vessel struck four members of the crew embarked in a dory and started on their long pull to Provincetown harbor. Several times the dory was almost swamped, and the sailors were subjected to great hardship in rowing against the seas, finally, however, landing in the harbor, almost exhausted by their efforts.

When Captain Fisher was knocked overboard from the lifeboat he was painfully bruised, but his injuries are not serious.

To Tackle Press Again

New York, Oct. 26.—Yesterday was the most quiet day that Dowie and his host have passed since their invasion of New York. Three services were held. Dowie again denounced Masonry and Catholicism and delivered another long tirade against the press, declaring that tonight he would have something to say about the New York reporters that would make all his previous utterances appear mild by comparison.

—The big rally of the Republicans will be held on Thursday evening at Tremont Temple, Boston, when Secretary Shaw, Senator Foraker of Ohio and Gov. Bates will speak.

WOLLASTONS WIN.

Defeat the Linwood Team at Foot Ball 23 to 0.

At Merrymount park on Saturday, Wollaston played their second game this season, defeating the strong Linwood team in a well played, clean game of foot ball 23 to 0.

The game was hard fought and abounded in long runs and punts, so that the many spectators were well satisfied with the afternoon's entertainment.

That the Wollaston team is as strong as last year's, no one who saw Saturday's game can dispute. The team is big and heavy, and has the two essential qualities of a winning team, fast men behiud the line, and team work.

For Wollaston, the features were the power of the backs to gain at any period, and the way the line opened up holes and pulled the runner along.

Miller's end running, Peterson's line plunging and Osgood's 60-yard run were worthy of mention. Fergerson at end played one of the best games ever put up on that field, while Fowler, Tabb, Linnell, Holmes and Barry were like a stone wall on defense and easily outplayed their opponents.

Dunbar, Peterson and Lewis excelled for Linwood.

The line up:

WOLLASTON	LINWOOD
l.e., Fergerson	r.e., Perkins
l.t., Fowler, Jones	r.t., Smith
l.g., Tabb, Schultz	r.g., W. Lewis
c., Linnell	c., Atwood
r.g., Holmes	l.g., Hatch
r.t., Barry	l.t., Leach
r.e., Gearwar	l.e., Ford
q.b., Taylor	q.b., Dunbar
r.h., Osgood	r.h., Peterson
l.h., Miller	l.h., Leslie
f.b., Peterson, Fowler	f.b., Lewis

Touchdowns—Peterson (2), Miller (2). Goals from touchdowns—Taylor (2). Timer—Murry. Referee—Baker. Umpire—Smith. Linesmen—Hull and Meserve. Time—20 and 15 minute periods.

Foot Ball Notes.

Quincy High will play its next game of foot ball at Merrymount park next Friday afternoon, when the strong team from Weymouth High will be the contestant. A close and exciting game is expected.

Quincy defeated Milton 24 to 0. Dedham won from Milton 17 to 0. And now the Quincy boys are speculating on their chances against Dedham at Merrymount park a week from Tuesday.

An attempt will be made to get a second eleven in form at the Quincy High to practice against the first team this week. Quincy is fast and strong on the offensive, but a few weak places are yet to be strengthened in the defensive play.

Quincy has played four games thus far, winning three of them, and being defeated only by the heavy Volkmann eleven. Quincy has scored 83 points to their opponents 5.

Both Thayer academy and St. Marks scored five points in the game at Southboro on Saturday. Thayer is having more than its share of tie games.

Fort Warren defeated Hingham A. A. 6 to 5.

The Powder Point school won from Milton academy 53 to 0.

Hyde Park High defeated Mechanics Art High 12 to 11.

SATURDAY SALES.

Thompson and Miller Estates Bring Satisfactory Prices.

Auctioneer Johnson held another large sale of real estate on Saturday last. The double house on Copeland street of the Thompson estate was the first sold. The bidding was lively and the property was sold to John W. Burke for $2,375.

The second, the eight-room house of the Thompson estate across the street, was the next sold, and there was a dozen bids on this property which was sold to Annie M. Sullivan of Quincy for $2,400. The entire property sold at a good figure over the assessed value.

The next property was that of H. H. Faxon on Kidder street. $300 was the best bid on the first house offered and Mr. Faxon withdrew the sale.

The next sales were the George L. Miller property by order of the National Mt. Wollaston Bank, and the first parcel was the stone plant, office, sheds and about 25,000 feet of land on Miller street. It was sold to Daniel Fitzgerald for $2,025.

The second parcel was the nine room house, stable and 10,000 feet of land on Miller street. The bidding was active here and the bids for ten minutes were between Representative Fallon and Sewerage Commissioner Lamb, and the property sold to Peter J. Fallon for $2,530.

The double house and stable and 12,000 feet of land was sold to James F. Burke for $2,240.

The Letter Carriers' Ball.

It is with considerable pleasure that we call your attention to the reunion and dance which the Quincy Letter Carriers' Relief Association, branch 129, N. A. L. C., are to hold in the remodelled Coliseum hall on Friday next.

About fourteen years ago free delivery service was commenced in Quincy with four carriers. Today there are nineteen carriers and six substitutes. Carefully selected by the government for an arduous task, they fully appreciate the responsibility of the position which they hold, and perform their duties with a courteousness which has won them many friends.

The object of their relief association is very worthy and should receive the liberal support of the public, as they wish to provide for any carrier who may become incapacitated for duty. It has been their custom to hold some entertainment annually, and at the earnest soliciation of many friends they have decided to have a grand ball this year, to which would be invited, and the carriers' thus become more intimately acquainted with the public whom they serve.

The business men and citizens generally are assisting them liberally, and the affair promises to be the success of the season and to become an established social function. A large attendance is hoped for, and all who can do so are invited to patronize the ball, as a most enjoyable time is promised.

A valuable and unique souvenir is to be presented each person present. Cuff's orchestra of eight pieces with John M. Plummer as prompter, will furnish the latest music. Refreshments will be served, and there will be cars to all points after the dance.

Tennis Club Lecture Course.

Some seventy-five to one-hundred people assembled in Colonial hall Saturday evening to enjoy the first lecture in the series of three by Mr. Leon H. Vincent, under the auspices of the Quincy Tennis club. After a very informal introduction by Mr. James M. Nowland, president of the club, Mr. Vincent spoke interestingly for an hour on "Washington Irving as a Humorist." Mr. Vincent is a most interesting lecturer and those who attended the course last season were in attendance Saturday night and warmly greeted Mr. Vincent. It is safe to say his listeners will turn again to the writings of Irving and reread them with added pleasure. The next lecture will be on "Kings of the Pulpit in Colonial Days."

TODAY'S COURT.

George Meek was fined $3, and Daniel Matherson $5, for drunkenness at Quincy.

Frank E. Morales was fined $3 for disturbing the peace at Weymouth.

Thomas Gaffaew was arraigned for keeping a liquor nuisance at Quincy. Case continued until Oct. 28.

Jeremiah Cullinan was brought in on a default warrant for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until Wednesday.

WHY? WHY?

Was Order Hustled Through City Council?

Work Cannot be Done This Year.

Should Have Been Promptly Vetoed by Mayor.

Although the order for the paving of a portion of Willard street was passed by the City Council last week, no work will be done upon it until next spring. The residents of that section are very anxious that the work should be done this fall. Commissioner Knowlton, however, says that it will be impossible and that he so informed the Council before the order was passed.

Commissioner Knowlton further says, that before he can commence work, the street railway will have to put in a ground girder rail. The rail now in use is a T rail. It is all out of shape and will have to be relaid. It will be impossible for the street railway company to get its new rails and lay it this fall.

If the company had the rail on hand it might be possible to do the job. It takes several weeks, however, to get the rails after it is ordered, and this coupled with the fact that bids for furnishing the pavers must be advertised, which would require at least two weeks, will make it impossible to do the work before spring.

A Robbery Reversed

...By HOWARD FIELDING...

Copyright, 1903, by Charles W. Hooke

As to Mrs. Willard's diamonds, the sequence of incidents was certainly out of the ordinary. The lady, alone in her carriage, was on her way to the house of a friend with whom she intended to spend the evening. It may have been about half past 8 o'clock.

"Martin," she called to the coachman suddenly, "drive home again."

Mrs. Willard could bring clearly into view a jewel casket containing some thousands of dollars' worth of diamond ornaments, but she could not see Mrs. Lee Willard in the act of putting it away in the cunningly devised hiding place in the head of the quaint, old fashioned couch that stood by the north wall of the apartment.

No member of the family was at home except her niece, Miss Amy Barton, who had gone to her room with a headache, and Mrs. Willard's maid would probably have joined the other servants in the rear of the house immediately after her mistress' departure. The butler was a new man.

When the carriage drew up abreast the door Mrs. Willard sprang out before the spry footman could offer his assistance, and at that instant she descried a dark figure hastily withdrawing into the mouth of the narrow court that ran along the north side of the house.

"Who is there?" she cried.

The figure seemed to hesitate and then came forward into the light of the avenue.

"It is I, Mrs. Willard," said this suspicious character, lifting his hat.

"Tom Lawrence!" exclaimed the lady as if he had been a schoolboy, although there really was little difference in their years. "What were you doing there?"

"I stepped in out of the wind to get a light," he replied.

"A light for what?" she demanded.

"For my cigar, of course," he answered, with a trace of embarrassment. "I've thrown it away now."

She looked at him for ten seconds closely.

"I want to talk to you," said she at last. "Come into the house. Oh, that's all right," she added, seeing his look of surprise. "You won't see Amy, though, upon my word, I believe you would have done so if I had not returned so soon."

"Your husband"—

"Is out of town," she interrupted. "But he would approve my course if he were here. He won't let you call on Amy"—

"Because I haven't enough money."

"Because you haven't enough stability of character," answered the lady severely, though, as before, she spoke in a tone too low for the ears of her liveried servitors. "But come. I have a reason for haste."

She ascended the steps just as the door opened in response to the footman's ring. Passing the butler, she turned a keen eye upon him, for something in his appearance struck her as unusual and vaguely disquieting, so much so indeed that she asked him sharply what was the matter.

"I don't know, mum," he replied. "I do feel ill, mum, but it's only just this instant—a little bit—er—dizzy-like."

"You have been drinking, I am afraid."

"A sip of beer, mum, with my dinner," he replied, "the same as is allowed the other servants—no more, I do assure you."

Mrs. Willard turned away, at the same time commanding Mr. Lawrence by move of her hand to wait her return. As she ran up the stairs she had a glimpse of Miss Amy Barton in the hall above. The young lady seemed to be fully and very becomingly dressed and to have quite recovered from her indisposition. Mrs. Willard found the door of her dressing room open, and the place was in disorder.

She ran across the room. The little secret nook in the head of the couch was open. Casket and jewels were gone.

Mrs. Willard was not an excitable woman, and her self command in emergencies was excellent.

"Where have you been since I went out?" she demanded of the butler.

"I never got out of my chair, mum, till you came back," said he.

"What makes you talk so strangely?" she asked. "You are drunk; you have been asleep."

"I protest that it ain't so, mum," he answered, with tears in his eyes. "I'm sick. I'm taken sudden with something, I don't know what."

Then he suddenly regained his self control and got upon his feet.

"What's wrong — what's wrong, mum?" he cried excitedly.

"All my diamonds are gone."

"But—but," stammered Lawrence, "this man could see that door from here. It isn't possible"—

"In view of his condition"— she began.

"I was all right," groaned the butler. "I was as well and wide awake as ever in my life till I got up to let you in. Nobody went near that door or I'd have known it."

"Ah," said Mrs. Willard, "here is Lucy!" The trim maid entered at that moment by a door at the rear of the hall, and she stared in amazement at her mistress.

"Lucy," asked Mrs. Willard, "how long were you in my dressing room after I left?"

"Not above a minute, my lady," replied the girl.

She was too well trained to ask "why" except with her eyes.

"My diamonds are gone, Lucy," said Mrs. Willard. "The door is broken, the room is all torn to pieces, and the diamonds are stolen."

"But where—where was he?" demanded the maid, pointing to the butler, who had again fallen into the chair. "What's the matter with you?" shaking him by the shoulder. "You've gone and got drunk, and the house has been robbed. He must have left the front door open after you."

The butler was muttering to himself.

"One thing is clear enough," Lawrence interposed. "This whole business is a plot. This man isn't drunk. He's drugged—with morphine, I should say. But what beats me is that the house should be robbed first and the man drugged afterward, for it's a perfect certainty that he was just beginning to be affected when we came in."

There was a ring of the bell at this moment, and the footman, who had remained during all this scene close by the door, opened it, revealing two men. They stepped into the hall—a heavy, sandy haired, red faced man holding by the arm a thin, dark, foreign looking individual.

The burly man was Detective Sergeant Brice.

"I beg pardon, ma'am," he said, addressing Mrs. Willard. "I'm a headquarters detective, and my general business is circulating round through this neighborhood looking for housebreakers of various kinds. I caught this fellow prying open one of your windows on the alleyway just now. I'd been shadowing him for an hour or more. He says he used to be a servant here and that he was coming to see another one. Same old story, of course. I brought him in to see if you could identify him."

"His name is Davoll," said Mrs. Willard in the tone of one dazed. "He was my butler before this man. But—but you say you've followed him for an hour and that you caught him before he actually got into the house?"

"Yes'm. Why not?" said Brice.

"Because the robbery has already taken place!"

"It has?" exclaimed the detective. "When?"

"Within half an hour."

"No, ma'am; excuse me," said Brice. "Nobody has robbed this house within a half hour or an hour either. This man's been hanging around for as long as that, and my partner and I have had our eyes on the premises."

"But my diamonds are gone," said Mrs. Willard, and she gave Brice the story, including the drugging of Norton, the new butler, now so completely overpowered that it was thought best to send the footman for a doctor.

"I guess he drugged himself," said Brice. "It's an old game. We'll find the diamonds hidden somewhere about. They must be in the house, for only one person has gone out of it, and you brought him back with you."

"Tom!" exclaimed Mrs. Willard, turning to Lawrence.

"I admit that I made a call of a few minutes upon Miss Barton," said the young man. "She herself let me in. We remained in the hall. Norton, your butler, was here all the time, and he showed no indication of being drugged."

"YOU HAVE BEEN DRINKING, I AM AFRAID," SAID MRS. WILLARD.

The bell sounded again, and the maid opened the door. A very modest looking person in black stood without, and he held something in his hand.

"It's my partner," said Brice. "What is it, Joe?"

The person thus addressed came forward and revealed to the astonished eyes of Mrs. Willard her jewel casket, empty!

"I found this in the area," said the man called Joe. "It struck me that your prisoner"—and he jerked his thumb toward the discharged butler, Davoll—"might have thrown it away. He might have done a trick somewhere else, you know, before we found him."

"Officer," said Tom Lawrence in that peculiar drawl of his which his friends find amusing, "isn't it a little peculiar that a thief should throw away the husk of his plunder while he's coming toward the scene of his crime instead of when he's running away?"

"Everything in this case in exactly stern foremost, so far as I can see," said he, "but I'll swear that nobody has carried those diamonds away from this house. They're here, and we'll find 'em."

They searched the house from top to bottom vainly.

"Well, I don't just exactly know what to make of it," said Brice, "but this fellow that we nabbed must have had something to do with it. We'll take him over to the station house and lock him up."

Davoll fell on his knees before Mrs. Willard.

"I swear to you," he cried, "that I have nothing to do with this crime. I was starve. You discharge me; I get no work; nothing to eat. I come to beg a crust. This crime, it is plain! I read him like a book."

"Yes, you can—not!" said Brice.

"Madam," cried Davoll, "if I disclose to you who did it and say to you where you can find the diamonds of which you have been stolen—robbed—will you cause these men to let me go; to make 'no charge,' as they call it?"

"Certainly," replied Mrs. Willard. "Tell me who did this and where the diamonds are, and I will make no charge against anybody. I am not anxious to appear in the police courts. What I want is my property."

She glanced at Detective Sergeant Brice, who spread out his hands, palms upward.

"All right, if you say so," said he, and he removed the handcuffs from Davoll's wrists.

"Your promise is made," said Davoll. "Your honor you have pledge me, eh? Is it not so? Ver' good. Now, then, this man Norton, who have taken my place, was drugged at dinner. The poison act slow, ver' slow. It was intend by the thief to leave the hall door open by and by, when this man would be sleeping in his chair. You, coming home, would say: 'Drunken brute! You leave my house open to thieves.' You go upstairs. You find the lock broken, the room thrown all about. 'A thief!' you say. You know not how long the diamonds have been gone.

"You come home too soon. For that reason you see everything coming the wrong way, with its last end before its front. The robbery is done, the servant is drugged, and then the thief breaks into the house."

"The thief!" echoed Mrs. Willard.

"I have your solemn word," said Davoll hastily. "No charge at all, eh? Nobody to be punished—nobody whatever? Is it so?"

"If my diamonds are returned," said Mrs. Willard, "that will close this case."

"All right," exclaimed the Frenchman. "The diamonds they are here."

He thrust his hands rapidly into various pockets and brought forth the entire lot of jewels.

"You—you!" exclaimed Officer Brice. "Why, it ain't possible!"

Mrs. Willard was scanning the gems with care.

"They are all here," she said. "Now tell your story. No harm will come to you or any one else because of this."

"Ah, madame," responded Davoll, "it is so good of you to say that! When these men trapped me and brought me here I thought all lost. Figure it to yourself, me with the plunder in my pockets. But they know it not, and by quick wit I find a way of escape through this bargain that I have made with you.

"Now, then, a friend of mine in this house drug this man Norton. That same friend take the jewels and set them by a window in the basement. While these men watch me after I pry the windows open I am filling my pockets with gems from the casket which stand just inside. It was my friend also who broke the lock of the door of your room and make everything to look so much upside down. After I get the jewels she throw the box into the court."

"Lucy!" exclaimed Mrs. Willard. "Where is she?"

"She have gone," replied Davoll gravely. "I have give her plenty time. It was for her as well as for me that I make my bargain. You comprehend? It was all lost. If these men drag me to the station house they search me and find the gems. They discover everything. It was for me to think quick, I tell you, when they brought me in here. Ver' good, I think. And your promise—you will keep it? You will not cheat me, eh?"

"Not I," said Mrs. Willard. "I am in many ways too much relieved."

And she looked at Tom Lawrence out of the corner of her eye.

HOMEMADE GIFTS

How to Make a Number of Inexpensive Christmas Presents.

A dainty and inexpensive penwiper is made with the aid of a little Chinese doll. Find a small kneeling one about two and a half inches high and make a pretty little coat for it out of some bright bit of velvet; gather a pretty contrasting color of silk beneath this for a blouse, and then let the little figure rest on a few circles of felt nicely pinked around. Fasten these in the center of the circle and then glue the man upon them.

Silver napkin rings which are no longer used may be made into very attractive little pincushions by fitting a piece of cardboard into one end and filling with a round pincushion, which will fit into the ring and show above the top. The pincushion should be filled with bran.

A pretty glove box is made as follows: The box should measure 10 inches long, 6 inches wide and 3 inches high at the front and back, but owing to the crowned top it will be half an inch higher at the middle. Stout pasteboard will answer for the frame. Cut two pieces 10 inches long and 3 inches wide and two 6 inches long and 3 inches wide for the sides and ends. Embroider a garland of flowers on linen pieces to fit the front and ends and draw them so when the sides are put together the bows, ribbons and garland ends will match.

A watch stand is a very acceptable present and is pretty when made from white linen embroidered with tiny flowers. Cover four pieces of cardboard 3 by 4 inches with linen. Overhand together so as to make two double faced pieces. Then sew these two pieces together at the top and fasten a piece of ribbon three inches long to the lower edges of the frame. Screw a tiny brass hook into the front card an inch from the top. This is a convenient article to stand on a table by the bedside.

A pretty hanging letter holder is useful for the desk and is easily made. The back is cut from cardboard, fancifully shaded and covered with plain silk, elaborately embroidered with flowers in embroidery silk. To this section is attached a pocket of bright figured silk gathered near the top to form a frill and finished at the bottom with silk tassels. The holder is ornamented at the top and sides by rows of wide satin or silk ribbon.

To make a pretty picture frame take any old picture frame, sandpaper down to obtain a smooth surface, paint over with common white paint and when about half dry scatter coarse sand, sawdust or kernels of rice over evenly; let it become perfectly dry and then paint over again very lightly with white enamel paint or gold paint.

How to Make Bavarian Cake.

Bavarian Christmas cakes are held in such high esteem by those who regard them as a national delicacy, as we look on our pumpkin pie, that some Bavarians send to their own country every year for flour and wine, so that they may be sure to secure the true flavor. The following is the recipe, and from it American flour and American wine will produce satisfactory results. The cakes are difficult to mix properly, but are well worth the trouble, and when packed in fancy boxes or baskets they make a pretty little trifle for a Christmas present to an acquaintance: They require three-fourths of a pound of flour, one-half of a pound of butter, one-fourth of a pound of granulated sugar and the yolk of one egg and three tablespoonfuls of white wine. The butter and sugar are worked thoroughly together and the flour added until they are of a consistency to roll out. They should be about three-quarters of an inch thick and cut in different shapes.

How to Make Sugared Popcorn.

Sugared popcorn can be made for Christmas in several ways. For molasses popcorn take a half cupful of granulated sugar and a cupful of New Orleans molasses and a small piece of butter. Boil over the fire, stirring occasionally until the sirup threads; then pour it slowly over the loose popcorn, mixing the corn with a spoon, so as to distribute the sirup evenly. If one desires it can be molded into balls or served loose in a bowl. Maple popcorn balls are made in the same way, using maple sirup instead of molasses. A plain sugar sirup, colored with a little cochineal water, may also be used, and the bright pink popcorn will delight the children.

How to Make Cistern Cement.

For lining cisterns or vessels to contain drinking water nothing is better than a paste made by mixing powdered brick, quicklime and wood ashes in equal parts with sufficient boiled linseed oil to make the mixture of a pasty consistence. The brick should be reduced to a moderately fine powder, and the ashes should be sifted to get rid of carbonaceous matter. The paste may be applied with a stiff brush and subsequently smoothed with a trowel or it may be applied directly with a trowel or wooden paddle.

How to Make Plum Pudding Sauce.

Two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cup of powdered sugar, half a cup of boiling water, one wineglassful of brandy. Cream the butter and sugar, add the brandy and boiling water, set the vessel containing the sauce in a saucepan of boiling water and beat until very light. If you object to brandy you may substitute the juice of one large or two small lemons.

How to Remove Marking Ink.

Paint the marks with a solution of cyanide of potassium applied with a camel's hair brush. As soon as the ink disappears the linen should be rinsed in cold, soft water, then washed thoroughly before use.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

QUESTION OF HONESTY

Roosevelt Says There Can Be but One Opinion Upon It

PRAISE FOR HARMLESS MAN

Not Merited Unless He Possesses Wisdom and Strength to Do Good to His Neighbors—Talks to Missionaries on Civic Righteousness

Washington, Oct 26.—Intelligent service to God and to the state was the subject of an address by President Roosevelt to the 7000 people who attended the public open-air missionary service at Mount St. Albans. The president said:

"I extend greetings, and in your name I especially welcome those who are in a sense the guests of, the nation today. In what I am about to say to you I wish to dwell upon certain thoughts suggested by three different quotations. In the first place, 'thou shall serve the Lord with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind;' the next, 'be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves,' and finally, in the collect that 'we, being ready both in body and soul, may therefore accomplish these things which Thou commandest.'

"To an audience such as this I do not have to say anything as to serving the cause of decency with heart and with soul. If our powers are not guided aright it is better that we should not have them at all, but in addition to being guided aright we must have the power also; we must cultivate the power also.

"In the second quotation remember that we are told not merely to be harmless as doves, but to be wise as serpents. It is not very much praise to give a man to say that he is harmless. We have a right to ask that in addition to the fact that he does no harm to any one he shall possess the wisdom and the strength to do good to his neighbors; that together with innocence, together with purity of motive, shall be joined the wisdom and strength to make that purity effective; that motive translated into substantial result.

"Finally, in the quotation from the collect, we ask that we may be made ready both in body and in soul; that we may cheerfully accomplish things that we are commanded to do; ready both in body and in soul; that we shall fit ourselves physically and mentally; fit ourselves by the way in which work with the weapons necessary for dealing with this life no less than dealing with the higher spiritual weapons; fit ourselves thus to do the work commanded and, moreover, do it cheerfully.

"Small is our use for the man who individually helps any of us and shows us that he does it grudgingly. A favor extended in a manner which shows that the man is sorry that he has to grant it is robbed sometimes of all and sometimes of more than all its benefit. So, in serving the Lord, if we serve him, if we serve the cause of decency, the cause of righteousness in a way that impresses others with the fact that we are sad in doing it, our service is robbed of an immense proportion of its efficacy.

"I want to call your attention to something that is especially my business for the time being and that is your business all the time, or else you are unfit to be citizens of this republic. In the seventh hymn which we sung, in the last line, you all joined in singing 'God save the state.' Do you intend merely to sign that or to try to do it? We need civic righteousness. I do not ask you as practical believers in applied Christianity to take part one way or the other in matters that are merely political.

"There are sides of questions about which honest men can and do differ very greatly and very intensely. But there are certain great principles concerning which no one has a right to have but one opinion. Such a question is honesty. If you have not honesty in the average private citizen or public servant, then all else goes for nothing. The abler the man, the more dexterous, the shrewder, the bolder, why the more dangerous he is if he has not the root of right living and right thinking in him—and that in private life, and even more in public life. All other qualities go for nothing unless honesty underlies them—not only technically clear, but the honesty that is such according to the spirit as well as the letter of the law; the honesty that is aggressive, the honesty that not merely deplores corruption, but that wars against it and tramples it underfoot. I ask for that type of honesty.

"I ask then, that our people feel quickened within them the burning indignation against wrong in every shape which shall take effect in condemnation and especially in condemnation of that wrong whether found in private or public life at the moment. Surely in every movement for the betterment of our life we have a special right to ask not merely support but leadership from those of the church. We ask that you here remember that from you much will be expected in return. For all of us here the lines have been cast in pleasant places. Each of us has been given one talent, five, ten, and each of us is in honor bound to use that talent or those talents aright and to show that at the end he is entitled to the praise as having done well as a faithful servant."

End of the Silver Spray

Buffalo, Oct. 26.—Steamer Silver Spray, which became famous by escaping an attack of the Canadian revenue cutter Petrel some weeks ago, was burned last night at a floating dock.

THE TROTTERS' STRIKE

Attack on Girl Strike Breaker Led to Use of Policemen's Clubs

Boston, Oct. 26.—Only one disorderly demonstration marked the third day of the strike of messenger boys employed by the American District Telegraph company. The pickets tried to induce many of the girl strike breakers to stop work, but generally without any attempt at intimidation.

The only exception to the general good conduct of the boys occurred when one of the girls started out of the office with a message and several boys followed her to Salem street, yelling "scab" and punctuating the epithets with threats. The girl paid no attention to the crowd until one of the boys struck her, and then she hit back.

This was the signal for an attack on her by the entire crowd, which had grown considerably since leaving State street. Several men rushed to aid the girl and protected her until a couple of policemen by free use of their clubs scattered the strikers and their sympathizers. The girl delivered the message and returned to the office under police escort.

Mrs Bryan's Testimony Sought

New Haven, Oct. 26.—In connection with the hearing on the will of the late Philo S. Bennett it is understood that Mrs. W. J. Bryan, whose husband is one of the executors, will come to this city to testify as to what part she took in the drawing of the will. Mrs. Bryan drew up on a typewriter the will which Mr. Bennett addressed to his wife, instructing her concerning the $50,000 bequest to Bryan.

Fine and Jail For Liquor Selling

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 26.—The heaviest sentence ever imposed in Hancock county for illegal liquor selling was given by Judge Emery in the case of John Hatt of Bar Harbor, who was convicted in seven counts. He was fined $850 and sentenced to serve eight months in jail. Benjamin Hatt of Bar Harbor, convicted on a similar charge, was fined $600 and sentenced to serve 60 days in jail.

Suicide From Telegraph Pole

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 26.—The body of a man named Burkey, and whose home was in South Norwalk, Conn., was found hanging from a telegraph pole on First street yesterday. It is supposed that he committed suicide during a fit of despondency. It is understood that Mrs. Burkey and child left here for South Norwalk early Sunday. Burkey for the past six weeks had been unemployed.

Shoemakers' Fight Waxes Hotter

Lynn, Mass., Oct. 26.—The fight between the Boot and Shoe Workers' union and the Knights of Labor Shoe cutters of this city was given added bitterness when at a meeting of the Lynn Central Labor union it was decided that the 30 local bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor should assume the aggressive in behalf of the B. and S. W. U. members.

Boston Banks Doubled Up

Boston, Oct. 26.—Formal announcement is made of the consolidation of the National Hamilton bank and the Fourth National bank. In 1898 Boston proper contained 52 national banks, representing a capital of $48,150,000. Since that time, mainly through consolidation, the number has been reduced to 28, with a capital of $30,200,000.

Forgot Pistol Was Loaded

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 26.—Robert Dixon, aged 18, who was shot unintentionally, it is supposed, by James Kenyon, a companion of the same age, is dead. Kenyon will be arraigned on a charge of manslaughter. The police investigation indicates that the shooting was purely accidental. Kenyon says that he had forgotten that the revolver was loaded.

Henson Going to Tremont Temple

Boston, Oct. 26.—"Believing it to be the will of God, I will come to you. Letter of acceptance forwarded." In these words Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson of Brooklyn in a telegraphic message notified Tremont Temple that he had decided to accept the call extended to him. The dispatch was received with much pleasure by the congregation.

THE RENOVATED HOUSE

Will Be Put to Severe Test When Congress Assembles

IS SCARCELY ELBOW ROOM

Popular Branch of Government Has Been Subject to Many Vicissitudes Since Its First Meeting—Much Tinkering to Meet Statesman's Wants

Washington, Oct. 26.—The incoming house of representatives, with its increased membership under the new apportionment, will severely test the seating arrangements of the renovated chamber. Two years ago congress appriated $61,000 for the purpose of reseating the house of representatives and installing a new ventilating plant. The new system of ventilation was in operation during the last congress and the new desks were used, but with the old membership.

It was a serious problem that confronted the architect of the Capitol two years ago, when he had to prepare for 29 more members of the house. The chamber had been overcrowded with 360 desks, and members constantly complained of the grammar-school facilities afforded them, so far as desk conveniences were concerned. There was scarcely room for them to sit comfortably when everybody was present. Elbows constantly touched. The edict went forth that 40 new desks must be put in, and it was duly executed. By utilizing parts of the corners of the room previously occupied by couches, and by a general squeezing all around, 400 desks have been fastened to the floor. Last session 357 of them were occupied. During the approaching session 386 will be. It was the desire of Mr. Reed to have the English system of benches, without desks, adopted by the house, but the idea did not seem to command general approval, and as an enlargement of the chamber was impracticable, a reduction of the size of the desks seemed to be the only remaining alternative.

It is 25 years since the house chamber has been subjected to so thorough an overhauling as it underwent two years ago. It may be not without interest to review briefly events in connection with the home of the popular branch of government from its establishment in Washington.

Congress met for the first time in Washington Nov. 17, 1800, although it was not until Nov. 21 that the senate could muster a quorum and that President Adams was notified that the body was in readiness to receive him. At that time both the house and senate were sitting in the north wing, since that was all of the Capitol that had then been completed. The work was not finished on the south or house wing, until Oct. 26, 1807. For some reason, the house left its quarters on the senate side at the close of its first session, and removed to a low, temporary brick structure erected upon the site of the south wing, and known as the "oven." The site so occupied is now covered by the law library of the house.

On account of lack of funds, work of construction dragged along at snail's pace, and it was not until 1804 that the walls of the "oven" were torn down, necessitating another change. The again moved to the north wing; the munificent sum of $700 was appropriated to defray expenses incident to the dismantling of the library of congress quarters to afford room to the representatives' to do business. On account of the cramped quarters and other inconveniences the house was anxious to get its new hall; the walls and ceilings were in such shape by December, 1806, that a representative called attention to the danger that the members were in from falling plaster. A resolution was accordingly passed authorizing the speaker either to have the plastering torn off or take measures to secure it in its present place. The south wing was so far completed as to be habitable for the house at its October session in 1807. The chamber thus completed is what is known as Statuary hall.

Congress continued to occupy these two wings until Aug. 24, 1814, when the British troops partly destroyed the Capitol by fire. When congress next convened, on Sept. 19, 1814, it was in an old shell of a building on Seventh street, known as "Blodgett's," opposite the patent office. The structure was three stories high, and had been used as a theatre and boarding house. In addition to both branches of congress, "Blodgett's" accommodated during the entire winter the patent office, the city and general postoffices, senate and house committee rooms and the congressional library. Government business was then done on a small scale.

The next summer (1815) John Law, fearing that the Capitol would not be rebuilt, and that the seat of government might be removed to the north, circulated a subscription paper to raise funds with which a large brick building, now known as the "Old Capitol," was built. This he offered to congress until the damaged Capitol could be rebuilt. The repairs to the burned building were not completed so that congress could occupy it until Dec. 7, 1819.

From that time the house of representatives continued to occupy the south wing until 1857, although during a large part of these 40 years there was constant and well grounded complaint; in fact this complaint had began as early as 1807, when it was first occupied. The objections raised were chiefly on account of the difficulty experienced in hearing.

Good Afternoon

But twenty-one cities in Massachusetts have more voters than Quincy, although the census of 1900 showed 22 to have a larger population. While the big city of Worcester has today 172 less voters than a year ago, Quincy has 89 more. Other cities to lose were: Boston, Springfield, Taunton, Haverhill, Holyoke, Fitchburg, Salem, Northampton, Gloucester, Newburyport, Medford and Beverly. Among the cities to gain were several with smaller increases than Quincy, notably New Bedford, Newton, Chicopee, Marlboro, Melrose, Pittsfield and Woburn.

Of the 33 cities, only 12 made as large a net increase in voters from September, 1902, to September, 1903. The cities with less than 6000 voters are given below together with their population by the census of 1900:

	Voters.	Population.
Taunton,	5,678	31,036
Fitchburg,	5,355	31,531
Gloucester,	5,309	26,121
Pittsfield,	5,001	21,766
Quincy,	4,897	23,899
Waltham,	4,713	23,481
Everett,	4,664	24,336
North Adams,	3,875	24,200
Medford,	3,541	18,244
Newburyport,	3,210	14,478
Woburn,	3,116	14,254
Northampton,	3,043	18,643
Marlboro,	3,017	13,609
Beverly,	2,799	13,884
Chicopee,	2,764	19,167
Melrose,	2,701	12,962

It will be noticed that some cities with a larger population than Quincy in 1900 have less voters today, which would signify that Quincy has passed them in population. A census of Quincy today would show upwards of 30,000 population. The population of several good-sized towns is less than the number of voters in Quincy; for example: Randolph, Abington, Canton, Lexington, Mansfield, Needham, North Andover, Rockport and Provinctown.

Drift of Opinion.

Very few people will take exception to what the Rev. Mr. Parkhurst said to Dowie in his open letter, and the minister did lather Elijah in vigorous fashion. It is a pretty thoroughly blunted religious sense which does not rebel at the exhibitions given by the so-called restorer and his satellites.—New Bedford Standard.

Festival of Nations.

The Wollaston Unitarian church is to be represented at the Festival of Nations in Copley hall this week at the fancy table, and also by a few of its Old Testament tableaux; some of those which require the least people and properties. There will be many attractions and novelties and a special entertainment each day. On Thursday at the fancy table Miss Almira Simmons will be assisted by Misses Winnifred White, Louise Bates and Alice Dow. On Friday by Misses Marion and Beulah Hatch, Helen Sprague, Elizabeth Freeman and by Misses Gurna Saville and Stella Barker of Quincy.

A special entertainment for the little folks will be given on Friday afternoon at 4.32 by the Dorothea Dix House children.

NOT INFLUENCED.

Gov. Bates Will Stand Any Test to Which He May Be Put.

Whether or not Holden thought that by thus accommodating the Lieutenant-Governor he would thereby have a right to demand favors from Mr. Bates upon the accession of the latter to the governorship, it is a notorious fact that he did not obtain such favors, and that at whatever value he may have estimated his services to the Governor, political or financial, Gov. Bates did not regard himself under any obligation to Holden which he felt called upon to recognize in the matter of patronage.—Herald.

PASTOR RESIGNS.

Regret at Atlantic at Action of Rev. J. H. Whitaker.

Sorrow and regret were the feelings of the congregation of the Memorial Con ational church of Atlantic when the 'or, at the close of the Sunday morn g service, made his unexpected resignation of his office. Mr. Whitaker has in his six years' residence at Atlantic won to an unusual degree the love and friendship of his people and they will be extremely sorry to have this fellowship end. The resignation is to take effect Feb. 1. Mr. Whitaker has not yet announced his plans for the future.

Won by Anderson.

A friend forwards the following clipping relative to the golf playing of John Garfield Anderson of Wollaston, a graduate of Adams academy:

Although Brown holds the team championship of the New England Intecollegate Golf Associaton, her colors were dipped to those of Amherst yesterday afternoon, when John G. Anderson, the best player on the Amherst team, defeated C. D. Mercer, the Brown champion, in the match for the individual championship of the association.

Anderson played a beautiful game throughout and his medal score was a fine one for the Wannamoisett course, especially since the weather conditions were far from favorable. Each round was turned in 42, showing a consistency somewhat remarkable under the circumstances. Mercer's game was also a good one, but, although he was in the running all the time, he was finally worn down by the machine-like play of his opponent. Anderson negotiated a number of the holes in better than bogey figures, and in all departments of the game he showed the skill of the finished golfer. The game that he put up yesterday probably could not have been beaten by any player in Rhode Island, all conditions being the same.

Cold Sunday.

The temperature at noon Sunday was 46 degrees, which was the coldest day at noon since May 3, when the mercury also registered 46 degrees at noon. This week last year, however, we had 41 degree noon temperature.

British, but Not English.

The Palm Tree's Leaves.

The cocoanut palm has leaves nearly thirty feet long.

Tobacco In Japan.

Tobacco is both cultivated and consumed on a large scale in Japan. The plant was introduced by the Portuguese in the seventeenth century, and the trade in it is a government monopoly. Tobacco is almost universally used in a small pipe.

Banyan Trees.

Banyan trees are remarkable for the fact that their branches droop down to the ground and take root as separate stems.

Dancing In Ancient Religion.

In ancient religion dancing came to be one of the chief acts of worship. Religious processions went with song and dance to the Egyptian temples, and Plato said that all dancing ought to be thus an act of religion.

Pin Money.

Morgangife (morning gift) was the Anglo-Saxon term for pin money. It was bestowed on the wife on the day after the marriage. When pins were scarce and articles dear pin money was given on New Year's day, and on the 1st and 2d of January the court ladies repaired to the pin makers' shops to replenish their stock for the next year.

Cattle Exportation.

Live cattle were first landed in England from America in May, 1861, but the regular traffic did not begin until 1876.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that next week is Hospital week.

Plenty of Work.

The general board of the navy has recommended to Secretary Moody, says a Washington dispatch of Friday to the Herald, that the navy be increased each year by four first-class battleships, two armored cruisers, four torpedo boat destroyers, and four fast and large scout ships.

Secretary Moody several weeks ago called upon the general board for a recommendation for a building programme to extend over a period of several years, which would bring our navy to a strength adequate to the size of the country and its foreign possessions.

In its report the board says that in case Congress in any year fails to make a sufficiently large appropriation for all of the ships, the two armored cruisers and four torpedo boat destroyers could best be eliminated from the programme.

Whether or not Secretary Moody will adopt the recommendation of the general board when he makes his recommendations to Congress for a naval increase is not known, but there is excellent reason for the belief that he will, at least, place the report of the board before the two committees on naval affairs of Congress.

Receiver For Chicago Elevated

Chicago, Oct. 26.—The Lake Street Elevated Railroad company, capitalized at $10,000,000, has been placed in the hands of a receiver in pursuance of a resolution passed by the board of directors asking for the appointment. It is alleged that the company is hopelessly insolvent and that this condition has resulted "from the reckless extravagance and fraudulent conduct of Charles T. Yerkes and his associates."

Child Burned to Death

Rochester, Oct. 26.—Ola Green, the 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Green of Springwater, was, with three other children, playing with kerosene during the absence of their parents. The child passed the stove and her clothing, having become saturated by the fluid, took fire instantly. Ola ran into the yard, where she jumped into a barrel of water. She died a few hours later.

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 26.—John H. Johnson was found dead and his roommate, Gunner Carlson, unconscious as the result of escaping illuminating gas in their room at West Springfield. It is supposed that they omitted to turn off the flow completely before retiring. Both men are Swedes and have no relatives in this country.

Another Mistaken For a Deer

Bartlett, N. H., Oct. 26.—Mistaken by his companion for a deer, Herbert Cook, 17 years old, is dead at his home in this town as the result of being shot by a rifle which was held, it is said, by Martin Walker, 13 years old, also of Bartlett. An investigation will probably be held, although no arrest is expected in the case.

Broke Away From Keepers

New Haven, Oct. 26.—Patrick Barlow, an insane man who was being taken to the Connecticut insane hospital at Middletown, escaped from his keepers and threw himself from the train near Wallingford. The train was stopped and search was made for the man, but no trace of him could be found.

Diphtheria Prevalent at Boston

Boston, Oct. 26.—The Herald says that diphtheria, although largely prevalent in South Boston, is not confined to that section, but is epidemic throughout the city. For the month of September and October up to and including last Saturday, the total number of cases reported in this city was 340.

UNIQUE SECRET ORDER

Customs and Origin of the Society of Cephalists.

THEIR ONLY DUES PAID AT DEATH

Each of the Four Hundred and Twelve Thousand Members Cedes His Skull to the Society—Banquets Are Held Amid Grewsome Relics of Friends—Circles Are Being Formed the World Over.

Many versions, mostly fanciful, concerning the secret society of Cephalists have been published, but the truth far exceeds in interest the uncanny tales all have read, says the New York American.

The Cephalists number 412,000, according to the general secretary and founder, Max Schroff, a prominent architect of Bay Ridge, Brooklyn.

Starting with the idea that the membership be cemented with a pact devising the skulls of all to the society, the original thirteen have added to their number until the half million mark is in sight. The Cephalists have no lodge rooms and pay no fees or dues save the one paid after death, the skull. Each member signs the following pact:

"...reby redeem my promise and cede ... skull to the above (Cephalist) fra...nity.

The members are mostly free thinkers, men who feel no qualms over association with the skulls of their former associates. Each year or oftener, as occasion offers, they sit down to a banquet in front of rows of skulls of the departed, each labeled across the frontal bone with the name of the owner.

No. 1 is the skull of L. G. Krueder, who was one of the original thirteen and held the office of Diogenes. The original society was like a Portuguese company, all officers save one. The officers were fancifully named from president down to Buddha, Vishnu, Confucius, Brahma, Faustus, Ammon, Diogenes, Ganymede, Giganticus, Osiris, Vosnius and Aristoteles. Mr. Schroff was Faustus, or secretary.

The secretary, who is the planet about whom all the lesser lights swing, conceived the weird idea of the society in the sixties through an odd experience. He formed one of a party of students of the University of Stuttgart who in 1865 undertook the exploration of the Nile.

Among the party was Homer Clarke, a young American, son of former Governor Clarke of Ohio, who sickened under the fierce sun of the desert and fell dead from the back of his camel. The body was temporarily buried in the sands. The party continued its exploration to the third cataract and, returning, exhumed the body. It was found impossible to transport the remains; still Mr. Schroff was unwilling to permit his friend's remains to rest in the sands.

"I pondered a long time," says Mr. Schroff. "I had always believed that the seat of dignity in man rested in the skull; so I decapitated my friend and took the head home with me. At first I intended sending it to his father, but friends restrained me, representing that it might be considered ghastly. Finally I had it prepared and brought it to this country. There it is."

Mr. Schroff nodded to a polished skull over his head resting upon the top of his desk. The grinning relic held a long French brierwood pipe between the teeth.

"Yes, Homer, old boy," continued the secretary, addressing the skull, "we have been companions for many years, and when I go my headpiece will join you."

"A good many die," he resumed. "There are 140 skulls within ten feet of me. They are all properly labeled and numbered, and with each is a record of the owner's achievements, together with a phrenological estimate of the skull. Only one of the original thirteen is dead. But we are all getting to be old fellows, and our headpieces must soon go on to the shelves with the others.

"We are not cranks. We believe that the head, the birthplace and repository of noble thoughts, should not be committed to the annihilating flames nor get to the worms in the grave; therefore we preserve the skull. We are performing a great scientific service, for our phrenologists are enabled to compare the bumps upon the skulls with the known attainments, peculiarities and attributes of the owner.

"Cephalists have grown to the number of 412,000 in twelve years. We form circles all over the world, and the circles are growing. By and by the circumferences of the circles will touch."

INITIATION SONG OF THE CEPHALISTS.

Our mission is to have in trust
The skulls of men of our kind.
Their bodies may decay and rust;
Their skulls with us a place will find,
That they may prove in ages hence
They have not lived for priest and pall,
Which shows they had enough of sense
To gain a niche in our skull hall!
The basis of this brotherhood
In number thirteen is expressed!
Each one in compensation should
Consign his skull to us addressed
And add to it each year one head
From friends, who may with us concede
That we may claim, when they are dead,
Their skulls, by their own will and deed.
Fill out this blank, your name and seal,
And in our honor do confide
That when you soon take your last meal
Your skull we shall claim on our side.

At present the headquarters of the society are in the luxuriously furnished Schroff home. A fund is being amassed by voluntary contributions from members for the purpose of erecting a home for the order, which shall be known as Skull hall, where will repose the headpieces of thousands of relict members, among which the officers may dine upon each recurring anniversary.

DOWIE'S BIG CRUSADE

Plan of Zion City's Leader to Evangelize the World.

NEW YORK BUT THE BEGINNING.

Elijah III. Explains Object of Invasion of the Metropolis by Zion Restoration Host—Has Eight Thousand Volunteers Under Vow to Obey. Only Three Thousand Taken to New York—Names a Prince as His Supporter—Some of Dowie's Characteristics.

For the first time in nine years John Alexander Dowie, the founder of Zion City and general overseer of the Christian Catholic Church of Zion, talked with a reporter of the Chicago Tribune about his plans to evangelize the world. He said the invasion of New York by the restoration host was only the beginning. Hugh Stuart Fullerton, who obtained the interview in Dowie's own home in Zion City, declares that the Zionist leader gave him in confidence proof that a prince, who will some day be "a power in a great nation," is a follower of the Zion City prophet.

When asked what he expected to accomplish on the New York trip, Dowie replied:

"God alone can answer that question. My hopes are high, but how much God wishes me to accomplish I cannot say. We have prepared ourselves for this invasion. We have trained our hosts in the work. All that we, as human beings, can do we have done. The harvest is with God. If he wills it—and the answer to my prayers leads me to believe our visitation is under divine guidance—we will accomplish great things—great things that will lead on to greater things."

"After New York?" I began.

"New York is but the beginning. After New York the world. Zion shall ascend the steps of thrones and will dictate to monarchs and presidents of nations and tell them that the law of God must be obeyed everywhere.

"You wanted me out of Chicago, but I love Chicago. Perhaps Chicago may yet be saved. The idea of spreading Zion over the world was in me when in our little No. 1 tabernacle down in Sixty-second street. We began the fight then. I did not know how far God wanted me to go forward with the work. He has sustained me thus far, and now I believe he means me to do more.

"It has been a long fight against unfair enemies. We have preached and practiced peace, and we have suffered blows. We have bowed to law when the courts were poisoned against us. We have preached obedience to the law even when it was wrong, and we have won. I believe God meant us to win. Down in the little tabernacle in Chicago when there were but few followers I saw Zion City thrown on the canvas of the future. Now I see great cities on the American coast of the Atlantic ocean and on the Pacific ruled by the law of God.

"Next January I hope to start around the world with a little company of four. My wife will start with a party in the opposite direction. We will learn much, and we will see many of our followers in other lands. Until that trip is ended no further definite plans can be announced."

Suddenly his face saddened.

"You cannot," he said, "you cannot see as I see. Christ to me is so real. He is so near. To me he is more real than to you and nearer. This world seems so pitiful, so sad, with the people so steeped in sin, so sunk in darkness, with his dear face to light it. Time seems so short. Naturally and calmly, in thirty years at the outside, I must pass away, perhaps in a week or a month or a year, and there is so much to be done."

"What provision have you made for death?" I asked. "Who will be your successor and what will be done with the money?"

"My successor is provided; God has one ready to take my place. I have made a will as regards the disposition of the Zion estate, which I legally own and absolutely control. All Zion knows what is in it."

The will briefly stipulates that 95 per cent of all the buildings of John Alexander Dowie shall go to the church, the other 5 per cent to his family, and of that 5 per cent a certain amount is to be given to the church each year.

"I live well," explained Dowie. "I enjoy many comforts, but I do not spend my income, and I give a great part of that to the church. I make a generous allowance to my wife and to my son, and they give liberally to the church. My personal fortune is comfortable. I have made it legitimately. I have fleeced no one.

"We are not socialists here in Zion. Every person is paid according to his worth and services. My work is heavy, my responsibility great, our enterprises have been successful, and in proportion to my services I am not overpaid.

"Considering that, I do not see why Chicago is opposed to me. I and my followers spend millions of dollars in Chicago. We did spend more when we were located there, for thousands came and did their shopping there, but Chicago drove us out, and if Chicago does not look out we'll quit buying there altogether.

"You were a bad boy, and you lost many good stories by being naughty. Why, I have a first page 'scare' head, double leaded story right in my house now. If you will promise ''pon honor' not to print it, I'll prove it to you."

And, having killed my hope of a "scoop," he told me, and he had it too.

He showed me Zion's connection with a live prince. That prince is a follower of Dowie, and some day he will be a great power in a great nation. I remembered then that Dowie had said, "Zion shall ascend the steps of thrones."

Gradually I drew him back to the New York trip.

"We are not asking New York for anything," he continued. "We are offering every one in New York an opportunity to embrace the law of God. We ask nothing. Already we have platted New York and assigned to every commander of seventy and every captain of ten a district. The host has studied for months the special maps of New York in our tabernacle. We have trained the host in its work. We have in all 8,000 volunteers in all parts of the world under vow to obey should I call on them for service. Only 3,000 have been ordered to New York.

"Zion restoration host will visit every home in the city. The work will be hard in New York because of the high flat buildings, but Elder Lee, who is the recorder of the host, has perfected every plan. He will explain everything to you."

Afterward Elder Lee explained. I saw maps of New York, in printed sections, and each section was allotted to a commander of seventy and subdivided among the captains of tens. Each morning while the host remains in New York it will attend the half past 6 o'clock morning services, then take breakfast, and each captain of ten will lead his party into his district. He will take a street and cover three sides of each block facing that street for many blocks. Having started his ten to work, the captain will station himself on the corner of the next block and perhaps hold a short service until that block is finished. If tall flat buildings delay part of the workers, the first arrivals at the captain's post will assist him in the service.

Dowie as a religious enthusiast, Dowie as a shrewd business man, Dowie as a home man, is impressive. In his home he is serene, calm and considerate. He admires his wife and has made her partner in everything. Nor is Overseer Jane Dowie a force to be overlooked in Zion. She is a motherly woman, calm eyed and peaceful, intelligent and devoted to her husband. In their family life they seem perfect.

Another revelation of Dowie's character was made later in his library. There, surrounded by books, he is at home, and the student shows out all over him. On the shelves of his library are works in Sanskrit, in the almost unknown by name languages of India, great volumes of Chinese writings, and these Dowie reads.

When he cannot read a language he either learns it or summons one of his followers, who are recruited from almost every race—and there are more than fifty nationalities represented in Zion City—and has it read to him. Dowie converses with his Chinese adherents intelligently and fluently. He is an authority on Chinese history and literature.

"Where does this man go to learn these things?" I asked of his right hand man later.

He told me Dowie works eighteen, twenty, sometimes twenty-four, hours a day, tireless, sleepless and sustained by his immense physical energy. He has worked as many as forty hours with scarcely a stop even for meals. He has preached and prayed all day and all evening and then, returning to his office, written all night to fill the editorial columns of the paper that Zion prints.

This work he will delegate to none, believing that most of his converts have been reached through Leaves of Healing.

Returning to the subject of the New York trip, Dowie said:

"The object of the campaign will be to preach the word of God as revealed to me as messenger of his holy covenant and to establish another tabernacle for the worship of God according to the Christian Catholic faith of Zion, the only true and authentic revelation of his divine will.

"I truly believe that the divine blessing will rest upon my efforts and that the church universal will triumph over sin and the devil. I shall preach the gospel of Christ, an opening for salvation for all who repent of their sins, leave all to follow him, trust and obey our Lord Jesus Christ and receive his word as spoken by me, as Elijah and messenger of the covenant.

"I ask the prayers of every man and woman in New York that this may be accomplished."

"Will the members of the host preach? What will they say when they visit the people?"

"Some will preach and pray, but the host are instructed not to enter into any religious argument with any one. No person ever was converted to anything by wrangling. The host will simply call at the doors, extend the message of Christ and place in the hands of some member of the family a card of greeting which we have printed.

"An invitation will be extended to each to come to our meetings. Further than that the host will do nothing except when opportunity offers to aid some sufferer or pray with the sick, if requested so to do. They will ask nothing and receive nothing."

I asked Dowie regarding his title, Elijah the Restorer, and this is what he told me:

"The name is not a title; it is reality. I firmly believe, in common with tens of thousands of my followers, that I have been sent by God in the spirit and the power of Elijah as the third and last manifestation of that prophet."

Call For Short Skirts.

One thing is certain, fashion has set her heart on short dresses, and short dresses will be worn by wise women this winter, says the London Graphic—very short for walking, shooting or golf, of a moderate length for urban wear.

TEN MEN KILLED

By Caving In of Roof and Walls of New York Subway Tunnel

New York, Oct. 26.—Ten lives were lost by the cavein of roof and walls of the subway tunnel Saturday night and four persons were badly injured. All of the dead and injured were workmen and most of them Italians. Each body was removed only by the lifting of tons upon tons of rock. The last two bodies found were taken out at 10 o'clock Sunday morning.

Rufus C. Hunt, superintendent, and Richard Beyers, general foreman for John B. McDonad, the contractor who is building the tunnel, were arrested as soon as they reached the scene of the disaster, but being experts in tunnel work and blasting, were permitted to direct the work of rescue. Later a magistrate remanded them to the coroner, who held them in $10,000 bail each. Coroner Jackson said he believed the accident was caused by criminal negligence.

Attack on Trade Unions

Boston, Oct. 26.—At a meeting held by the Socialist Labor party here Daniel de Leon, editor of The New York Daily People, made a severe attack on trade unions. In the course of his speech he said: "Trade unions gradually accustom labor to worse conditions. They do not raise wages. The census proves it. And they do not improve conditions, as the list of suicides, consumptives and those prostrated by nervousness show that mortality has increased. Organized labor is only a shield; a shield that causes workmen to decline by degrees."

The Far Eastern Crisis

London, Oct. 26.—Special dispatches from St. Petersburg represent a growing ill-feeling in Russia against both England and the United States in consequence of the supposed sympathy of these countries for Japan.

Liverpool, Oct. 26.—Believing that war between Russia and Japan cannot long be delayed, the marine underwriters decline to accept war risks on Japanese steamers even at the tempting price of 25 guineas percent.

Governor Killed Himself In Despair

Constantinople, Oct. 26.—It is reported here that Loufti Pasha, military governor of the province of Azir, committed suicide in despair because the government at Constantinople ignored his repeated demands for reinforcements. This refusal to send aid was followed by a general uprising in Azir in which the governor of the province was killed and a battalion of troops cut up. Reinforcements are now being sent to Azir.

May Strike Back at Fishermen

St. Johns, Oct. 26.—It is thought probable in official circles here that Canada, owing to the dissatisfaction caused by the result of the Alaska boundary arbitration, will denounce the modus vivendi respecting the Atlantic fisheries at the close of the present season. The effect of this step, if taken, will be to deprive American fishermen of many rights they now enjoy in Canadian waters.

Shooting Secret Well Guarded

New York, Oct. 26.—Guarded so closely that not even the police knew of the case, Corona Richardo, an actress, with a bullet wound above her heart, lies critically ill at her home in this city. She was shot late Friday afternoon and the explanation made last night is that the bullet must have been fired by a mysterious stranger or that she was hit by a stray shot from a street brawl.

Plucky Youngster's Long Walk

Bristol, Conn., Oct. 26.—William Canfield, aged 13, was accidentally shot in the groin with a pistol by Edward Conklin, aged 11, while the boys were hunting, the weapon being discharged while the boy was loading it. While a mob was forming to capture and lynch him, McClure drove on a run to this city and gave himself up. He has been secreted by the authorities, who fear attempted violence.

Alleged Theft of $25,000 Worth

New York, Oct. 26.—John Walsh, J. P. Flannagan and William Gould, all employed in the factory of the Hartford Carpet Corporation company in this city, are charged with robbing the company of wool to the total value of $25,000, which they sold as junk.

Durand to Succeed Herbert

London, Oct. 26.—King Edward has approved the appointment of Sir Henry M. Durand, the British ambassador at Madrid, as British ambassador to the United States to succeed the late Sir Mihael Herbert.

TWO PROPOSITIONS

Submitted to Farmers Looking Toward a Settlement of Milk War

Boston, Oct. 26.—The settlement of the difficulties between the Boston contractors and the New England Milk Producers' union now rests with the farmers. After Saturday's meeting the whole matter was referred to the locals and it remains for them to decide whether they will accept either one of the final propositions of the contractors.

The first of these propositons involves setlement without arbitration, and may be accepted in a modified form by the producers. As made by the contractors it provides for a flat price of 36½ cents a can with a 3-cent carrying charge and an even production basis. It is possible that the parties may settle by dividing the 1 cent between them, making the flat price 37 cents.

Should no agreement be reached along this line, arbitration seems inevitable, both sides having signed a legal contract to arbitrate, and the farmers have agreed to send milk to Boston "pending arbitration."

The producers say that they have been willing to arbitrate at all times, and believe both sides are bound to such action by a signed contract.

Electric Car's Wild Plunge

Joliet, Ills., Oct. 26.—Just as an electric car began to descend a steep hill here Motorman Bouray fell in a faint and rolled from the platform. Miss Anna Westborg, the solitary passenger, jumped from the car, escaping with some bruises. The car went down the hill at terrific speed. At the foot of the hill there is a sharp curve. When the car struck the curve it jumped the track, scooping up Peter Sharp on the fender and crashed into a dwelling. Sharp's brains were battered out. The side walls of the house were crushed and the entire structure wrecked.

Many Will Disagree With Him

London, Oct. 26.—Speaking at Killarney Sunday, John Redmond declared the time had arrived to start a campaign against emigration. One cause of emigration that ought to be removed, he said, was the exaggerated prospect held out to Irish boys and girls if they went to America. He said the poorest laborer in Kerry was happier than the majority of Irish workingmen in the United States.

Lou Dillon a World Beater

Memphis, Oct. 26.—Lou Dillon proved her right to the title of queen of the turf by trotting a mile under adverse conditions in the remarkable time of 1:58½. She was paced by a runner and another runner followed closely to urge the mare to a supreme effort.

College Destroyed by Fire

St. Catherines, Ont., Oct. 26.—The Bishop Ridley college, located here, was totally destroyed by fire. The students all escaped, but a number of them lost their personal effects. The loss on the building is $42,000.

To Beg For Macedonians

PLATFORM

OF THE Massachusetts Democracy, 1903

We reaffirm the principles of democracy, which are eternal and immutable, and vary only in their application and expression as the needs and dangers of our country demand. The Democratic party, still the bulwark of the people against priviledge, the defender of the man against the dollar, shall fight the trust oligarchy now as it fought the political oligarchy with Jefferson. The Republican party, once the party of Lincoln, has deserted the creed of its founders and betrayed their principles; the Democratic party is true to itself at its best.

First of all, we place the question whether those laws shall continue which put the livelihood of eighty millions of people in the power of the few; which enable the same hands that control the railroad to control the mines, that control the banks to control the treasury, that own the people's necessities to own the people's government. The trusts—monoplies made by law—entrenched behind a prohibitive tariff, buttressed subsidies and special rates, plunder our people with the one hand, while with the other they reach foreign conquest and sell their product cheap abroad that they may sell it dear at home. We condemn the hypocrisy of that party which, admitting the evil, makes the remedy dependent upon a constitutional amendment which it never intends to pass; which creates a great bureau of state to investigate and does not investigate; which calls off its President when too fresh upon their trail. We despise that hypocrisy which outdoes populism in placing the treasury money at the service of favored banks, contemplates an assessed currency or loans secured by bonds of municipalites designated to favor political exigences or at the caprice of the secretary of the treasury, and breaks the law to favor Wall street speculators. We despise that hypocrisy which in the Pennsylvania platform condemns the coal trust, while Quay refuses to enforce the Pennsylvania constitution which forbids the railroads to control the coal mines. And we are dismayed at the "world of graft" where congressmen sell everything to their own government, from gloves to tombstones, where needed improvements in the postal service, such as package delivery and the international postal convention, are prevented because money has been stolen in the frauds of the department or wasted on railroad rates; where the Indians are cheated of their lands for the profit of the beef or cattle trust, and even the Dawes commission is perverted to an agency of swindlers; where the five hundred millions to be spent for national irrigation improvements is pre-emptied by the beet-sugar trust or the land grabs of senators and senators' friends. We favor immediate regulation of trusts under the interstate commerce and taxation powers of Congress, and the admission free of duty on articles controlled by the trusts on raw materials of manufacture and the necessaries of life.

We condemn the policy of conquest and subjugation, not only for its injustice and danger abroad, its sacrifice of the Monroe doctrine and reliance on powerful armaments alone, its waste of life and health and treasure against a pitiful money profit, its policy of competition with the cheap labor of Asia, but for its betrayal of the principles of the founders and its corruption of American manhood; setting the false ideal of war before American youth and resulting in a militarism which arbitrarily promotes or degrades its servants. We demand that Cuba be treated as we promised; we demand that the Philippines be treated like Cuba. As citizens, the Philippines endanger our civilization; as subjects, they make our republic an empire.

Reciprocity with Canada, long the hope of Massachusetts, must soon be achieved or abandoned forever. The blind selfishness of high protection renders inevitable a blow at our commerce that will fall most heavily upon this community. Forced by the hostility of Republican tariff policy to adopt preferential duties which give advantages to England in Canada's market, Canada now contemplates a retaliatory tariff to exclude American goods from her market. We demand as a natural right an opportunity to preserve and enlarge our commerce with our northern neighbor. We urge that the broadest grounds of national policy as well as considerations of local advantage require the restoration of amicable relations, and call upon our representatives in Congress to labor for its accomplishment. The Republican party has repudiated the doctrine of William McKinley that "the period of exclusiveness is passed," and its solemn pledges in behalf of reciprocity, repeated in successive platforms, were but empty sound.

We hold that the principles of a civil service reform should not be deserted by an official, however high, or for a political exigency however great. And we say again that United States senators should be elected by the people and not by Legislatures packed or corrupted. We want this great Reform now; not by the vain pretense of asking for a constitutional amendment but by state legislation allowing the people to express their choice of senatorial candidates at the polls. The national Senate is becoming a wealthy oligarchy, self-perpetuating and all powerful, and we again condemn its usurpation of powers and patronage not given it by the Constitution.

We demand legislation throughout the country which shall equalize the hours of labor, shorten the hours of women and children, prohibit the labor of the very young in factories and protect our mechanics and our employers by bringing other states to the Massachusetts standing. We demand from Congress a national labor code which shall limit the hours of continuous employment of railroad engineers, telegraph operators and switchmen, and generally protect all trainmen and others engaged in interstate commerce, by uniform law throughout the country. We condem the abuse of some federal courts of the high writ of injunction in matters which are primarily subject to police control under the criminal law of the state; and we believe that without crippling the necessary powers of courts of equity but for the guidance of the judges themselves there should be legislation defining the limits of imprisonment for contempt. We favor tribunals for voluntary arbitration in all labor disputes, with power to enforce their decrees, particularly in matters affected with a public interest or industries producing coal or other necessaries of life.

We charge that the Republican party, in its national policy today, stands squarely against the interests of Massachusetts. It opposes free coal, free iron, free meat, free hides, free lumber and admits that it does so. It "stands pat" on the Dingley tariff and snaps back the duty on anthracite coal.

Coming to its state record, we censure its extravagance, its increased state tax, its wasteful creation of offices. Its long continuance in power has resulted in the creation of numerous permanent boards, responsible to no one, which usurp the powers of the Legislature and degrade its character, and deprive the executive of its prerogative. By its rotation system in towns it has kept able men from the Legislature; by its mortgage of offices years ahead it has transformed our executive to a cut-and-dried succession. Only a change of party can remedy these abuses.

We condemn the sacrifice of our home interests by its congressmen under orders from Washington by our Legislature under orders from New York. In Congress it has failed sufficiently to improve our harbor; it has opposed the building of the Cape Cod canal at the behest of railroads, which railroads it has given into New York control. We call attention to the deterioration of our railroad service, the discrimination against the port of Boston, both by the railroads and the New York shipping trust, the higher freights, the loss of trade. We demand an interstate commerce commission that can fix rates. We promise an administration that shall demand fair treatment for this state, and, if not accorded, revoke leases of our railroads, as the laws provide. This we ask, with good shipping laws, that our maritime supremacy be restored and Boston enjoy again the full advantage of its Atlantic harbor and its situation only forty miles from a direct all-water route to New York.

While in favor of a corporation law which will enable Massachusetts men to do business under Massachusetts charters, protect the public from irresponsible foreign corporations and give the safeguard of Massachusetts courts, we censure the action of the General Court in departing from the recommendations of its own commission, particularly in matters of taxation, thereby discriminating in favor of, or wholly exempting, the larger trusts; and we demand that the law be so amended as to secure equality of taxation, to hold directors to a stricter accountability for the truth of all returns made to the state and to the public, and finally to require of all trusts and foreign corporations doing business in Massachusetts the same publicity and equivalent taxation to that imposed upon our corporations.

We believe in allowing to the individual citizen in the conduct of his life the largest measure of personal liberty consistent with the maintenance of law and order and with the rights of others. Lawful business should not be hampered by unnecessary restrictions, nor innocent recreation forbidden. We are tired of interference with local self-goverment. We demand that the political liberty of Boston be restored and that no city or town be hampered or restrained of its liberties by State law without a referendum to the voters therein, and that a referendum shall be granted in all proper cases upon petition of a fair proportion of the voters concerned.

We demand the abolition of the State Police Commissiom, which exists in defiance of the will of the people of Boston, over whom it exercises absolute rule in three branches of government. Boston is singled out in the Commonwealth and branded as unfit to grant its licenses, control its police, and list its voters.

The infliction of this new system upon the city against its official protest, and for reasons already proved groundless, was the culmination of partisan discrimination. The governmental powers still remaining within its control may be seized upon pretexts as baseless as those urged for the last usurpation. The way is being prepared rapidly by this invasion of municipal rights for the tyranny of a state boss.

We believe in public control and ownership in proper cases of public utilities, and that, while it is dangerous and destructive of individual freedom to burden our political system with the operation of ordinary industries, all monopolies belong to the people who grant the franchise, and therefore should be sold at auction or granted in consideration of advantages secured to the public, and we call public attention to the failure of the Republican Legislature to pass such a law, though favored in the governor's message. We believe that the city or town affected should have the right to vote, by referendum, on any law which gives away its property or abridges its civic rights.

Equal rights for all men, be they black or white, Christian or Hebrew, colonist or continental, is the Democratic watchword which still we hope our country may carry through the world. We should condemn lynchings in the South or in the North, as we condemn massacres in Russia or murder in the Philipines. Hence we favor an early declaration of our puspose in the Philippines. Hence we favor an early declaration of our purpose in the Philippines and oppose the repeal of the 14th or 15th amendment.

We believe that the mission of America is one of peace; that the Monroe Doctrine was better than conquered colonies; that civilization by trade is better than civilization by cannon; that our problems are social and domestic, not military and European; that we should govern others as we govern ourselves, and in the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

The report of the resolution committee was accepted and its provisions adopted.

—If the people who talk so loudly about the alleged employment of children in our textile manufactories in Massachusetts really believe what they say and are talking merely for the effect they hope their words may have upon the popular vote on 3d of November, why do they not present their evidence if they have any, before the proper authorities so that the evil, if existent, may be removed? Captain Wade, the chief of the district police force, whose duty it is to see that the factory laws are enforced, has asked that any violations of those laws which may come to anybody's knowledge be reported to him and he will see to it that such violations shall cease. But it is to be feared that it is not so much in the interests of the children that the Democratic stump orators are concerned, just at present, as for the benefit of their party.—Boston Transcript.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

George Primrose, "the king of minstrels," is to be the star entertainer at Keith's, the week of Oct. 26, and will be accompanied by the famous Foley twins, who were the big hits of the Primrose and Dochstader show last season. The trio will present an attractive singing and dancing specialty. Bedini, the juggler, and his comedy assistant, Arthur; the Brothers Silvas, European acrobats, who give a perfectly marvelous performance on unsupported ladders; A. D. Robbins, the great trick bicycle rider, just returned from a triumphant European tour; John Gilbert, monologue comedian; the DeMuths, eccentric and whirlwind dancers, and the Mitchells, a trio of colored comedians and singers, are some of the other entertainers of note whose names are prominent in the bill. Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne hold over, appearing in another of their charming rural comedy sketches, and the manikins will be exhibited for the last times making an almost entire change. It will be one of the best bills of the season.

FRUIT FROM PORTO RICO

A Grower's Opinion of the Island's Oranges.

TO COMPETE IN AMERICAN MARKET

James Struthers of Bayamon Says This Winter Thousands of Boxes of Oranges From Wild Trees Will Be Shipped to the United States. American Growers Are Developing Many Groves In Upland Valleys.

"Porto Rico will be the orange island of the world, its coffee will come to have the same vogue in the United States it one time had in Spain, and its people will be lifted out of poverty and ignorance." This prophecy was made at the St. James hotel in Washington to a reporter for the Washington Star by Mr. James Struthers, orange shipper and grower of Bayamon, Porto Rico. Mr. Struthers lived in Washington from 1885 to 1895, for a part of that time being engaged in the produce commission business.

"Porto Rico," continued Mr. Struthers, "will become a sea girt garden. The people there are going to find gold in the golden fruit, just as the people of Florida did and as the orange growers of California do. Cold, which overwhelmed the Florida growers in 1894 and which threatens them in the Peninsula State every winter, is not feared in Porto Rico. The hurricane danger is a small one because the orange lands are in the upland valleys, wind sheltered by great hills. The late hurricane in Porto Rico did greatest damage on the low sugar lands of the coast and along the water courses. Comparison between central and southern Florida and Porto Rico as an orange land is all in favor of the latter. A high percentage, if not a majority, of the American orange growers in Porto Rico are from Florida.

"The orange districts of Porto Rico have a self evident advantage over southern California for the production of citrus fruits. Frost in Porto Rico is such a remote possibility that it is not to be considered. The island is well watered and has a bounteous rainfall. It is nearer to the markets of the Atlantic states both in the matter of time and charges than California. It is four days' sail from San Juan to New York, and it is an event when a fruit train crosses from California to the Hudson river in seven days. Porto Rico has plenty of cheap, faithful and willing field labor. It is not efficient labor as yet, but it will become so under American instruction and with the application of American field machinery and implements. The natives in the interior of Porto Rico are weak because they are underfed, but the main reason for their inefficiency is that there is no method in their work, and the only tool they know how to use is the machete. California's only conspicuous advantage over Porto Rico is that of daily or multidaily shipments, but as the trade of Porto Rico is developed the steamship companies will provide frequent enough sailings.

"As to quality, the Porto Rico orange is as good as any other. Of course, there are good and bad oranges in the island, just as elsewhere, but I am sure it is a reasonable statement that the average orange of Porto Rico is superior to the average orange grown in any of the citrus belts of the United States. But the quality of an orange depends largely on the grower. He can, if he understands orange culture and has a favorable climate, make the kind of orange the public wants.

"This winter there will be thousands of boxes of Porto Rico oranges from wild trees shipped to the American market, and they will sell side by side with the orchard fruit of California. Cultivated oranges from Porto Rico will make a strong impression on the market three or five years hence. Many groves have been and many are being planted in the island, and yet the industry has scarcely been begun.

"The coffee of Porto Rico will soon make itself felt in the United States market. There is no better coffee in the world outside of Arabia than that grown in our island. Millions of Americans who believe they drink coffee three times a day would not know coffee if it were poured out to them. Tons of chickory, roasted beans and peas are being drunk for coffee, while the Porto Rican berries go to waste. Porto Rico's coffee is strong in tannin, and the American palate will not tolerate this. The berry is shipped green to the United States and roasted by the American or 'light' process, which does not remove the tannin. This astringent quality is overcome by the French or 'dark' roasting process, and plans are evolving to give Porto Rican coffee this treatment and build up a demand for it in the United States by the distribution of samples.

"There are several thousand acres planted in cotton for the first time in twenty-five years. The quality is good and the yield fair. With proper cultivation it is destined to be a paying crop. Sugar is the money crop of the island. The acreage has been largely increased since the American occupation, but king sugar will have to take second place when the cultivated Porto Rico orange groves come into bearing."

The Navy's Winter Maneuvers.

The navy department has notified the various bureaus that maneuvers will take place in the Caribbean sea next winter, and commanding officers have received orders to prepare for the work. The strategic problems or war games in which the vessels will take part will take place in February, after the drills in routine work and marksmanship have been finished. Rear Admiral A. S. Barker will be in command.

Work to be Done Within Sixty Days

Mayor Collins Must Go on Record for or Against.

Boston, Oct. 27.—The strike of the Western Union Telegraph company's messenger boys has been taken up by the political leaders and threatens to become an issue in the coming municipal election. At a meeting of the board of aldermen, upon the motion of Alderman Lomasney, an order was passed providing that the Western Union Telegraph company be compelled to remove all its poles in the city limits within the next 60 days, and, in the event of the order not being complied with, the poles are to be removed by the city at the expense of the telegraph company. The vote on the passage of the order was 6 to 5. The order now goes to Mayor Collins, and he must place himself on record as being either for or against it.

In urging the passage of the order Lomasney argued that the company is a foreign corporation that has thrown over 300 boys out of employment in order to save $10,000 a year. He contended that the rights of the people were infringed upon and declared that the employment of the females as messengers was not conducive to good results. That Boston telegraphic service would suffer Lomasney denied, saying that other companies could furnish a satisfactory service.

Armor Plate Contracts Awarded

Washington, Oct. 27.—Secretary of the Navy Moody has decided the long standing question of the awards for furnishing armor for the battleships Vermont, Minnesota, Kansas, Mississippi and Idaho. The Midvale Steel company gets the contract for supplying 6000 tons and the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies a contract for supplying 5000 tons each. The bids of the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies were identical, $6,944,000, while the Midvale company's bid was $6,606,532.

Indictment In Land Graft Case

Portland, Ore., Oct. 27.—The United States grand jury has returned an indictment against Asa B. Thompson, receiver of the land office at LaGrande. The indictmenut charges Thompson with soliciting money to influence his official decision for approval for homestead applications which had been held up for insufficiency of proof. It has been said that fraudulent entries in California, Oregon, Idaho and Washington within the past three years will exceed 1,000,000 acres.

Exile Saves Prison Sentence

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Mary Stein was convicted of shoplifting by Judge Clifford, but the woman's husband pleaded that the sentence of one year in prison which was proposed by the court would result in her death. Mr. Stein exhibited a steamer ticket for Germany and declared that if the court would permit Mrs. Stein would depart immediately for Germany and never return. Judge Clifford agreed and made Saturday next the time limit for sailing.

Contract Laborers Held Up

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—The local immigration officers have detained nine additional miners on the ground of being alien contract laborers. They came from Wales and England and were bound for the soft coal mines at Ellsworth. The miners admitted they came here because of promises of high wages made to them. Several of the men are penniless, having sold their homes to pay for their passage here.

Barely Escaped Death

Honolulu, Oct. 27.—The second and last missing boat of the wrecked French bark Conetable de Richemont was picked up last evening by an interisland steamer. It contained eight of the crew of the lost vessel. All were alive, though in a starving condition, having been almost entirely without food since their separation from the other boat of survivors on Oct. 14.

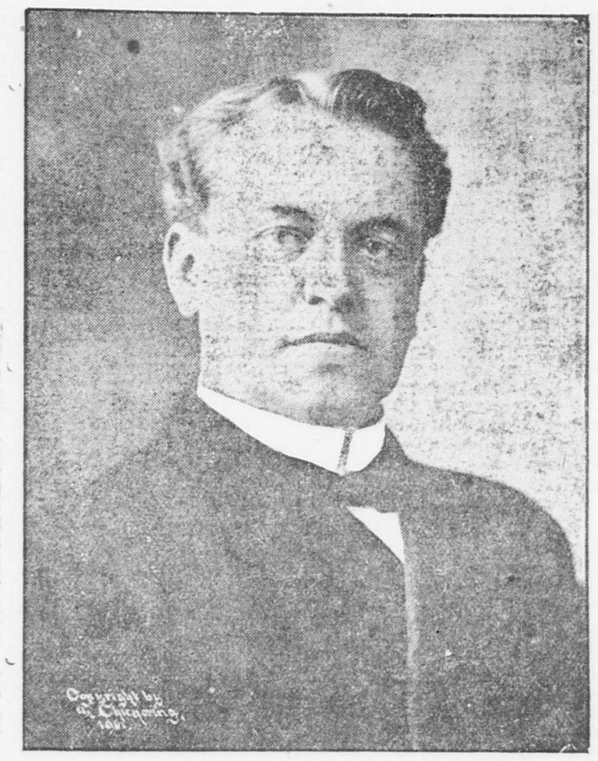
GOV. BATES TO MR. GASTON

"Put Yourself in My Place and What Would You Do."



HON. JOHN L. BATES.

The Governor asks Colonel Gaston what he would have done had he been governor this year, and the bills he is now criticising had been laid before him for judgment. This is a fair question, for Colonel Gaston aspires to be governor, and is appealing to the people on the ground that the present administration has made mistakes and passed bills to their detriment or failed to enact laws that would be for their advantage.

Governor Bates says, "Put yourself in my place, and what would you do?" That is placing the responsibility on the man who thinks he could bear it, and asking him to tell the people just what he would do if the same emergency arose and he was compelled to meet it.

The governor has already given his reasons for his acts as chief magistrate for the commonwealth, and they have been declared to be sound by the law making body. If what they proposed in the acts that were vetoed were good for the state, why are they not good for the corporation over which Colonel Gaston has considerable influence?

These are questions that demand an answer, and they will furnish text enough for the Democratic candidate when next he addresses an assemblage. —Lynn Item.

Universalists Prospering.

At a Universalist church conference in Washington D. C., on Saturday, former Gov. Perham of Maine made an address in which he said that the trend of most religious denominations now is toward Universalism. The trustees report a membership in the church of 54,102. The permanent fund of the church amounts to $909,488. There are 784 ministers, almost 600 churches, and the Sunday school membership is largely increased. The Rev. Joseph S. Dodge of Connecticut was appointed vice-president of the general convention. The delegates, several hundred in number, were received by President Roosevelt at the White House in the afternoon.

NEW PRESIDENT

Of Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

Was Chief Constructor of Navy.

Is a Massachusetts Man and Highly Recommended.

A. Maurice Low, Washington correspondent of the Globe, says in a dispatch of Monday to his paper: The government has lost another prominent official simply because when the government is brought into competition with private employers the inducements offered by the private employer are always so much greater that a man who is solely dependent upon his salary does not feel justified in remaining in the government service.

Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, chief constructor of the navy, this afternoon handed his resignation to Sec. Moody, to take effect at the end of the month. Rear Admiral Bowles will be president of the Fore River Ship and engine company of Quincy, Mass., which has built some of the finest and latest vessels in the navy.

Rear Admiral Bowles is recognized as one of the greatest naval constructors in the world, and his resignation from the service is a loss which cannot easily be replaced. He told Sec. Moody that he felt it was due his family that he should accept the offer made him.

As chief constructor of the navy he receives a salary of about $6500 a year, and while the exact amount the Fore River company will pay him is not known, it is understood that it will be more than twice what he is now receiving.

Rear Admiral Bowles is a Massachusetts man. He will be succeeded as chief constructor by naval constructor W. L. Capps, at present on duty at the New York navy yard.

KEEP DOWN THE DEBT.

Henry H. Faxon Comments on a Recent Editorial of the Quincy Daily Ledger.

QUINCY'S POLITICAL FARCE TAX RATE.

Present Administration Should Apply for Patent "How to Lower the Tax Levy."

[Quincy Daily Ledger Editorial Aug. 11, 1903.]

While the city of Quincy has great cause for congratulation this year in a low tax rate and at the same time a reduction, where most cities have very high rates and increases, there is great need of caution for several reasons.

Quincy is a young city and may soon get into the serious financial straits of the older cities. Our debt is increasing very rapidly, and with it the maturing debt and interest. Fifteen years ago, when Quincy became a city, there was a debt of only $44,522.55, and cash assets in the treasury of $46,663.28. January 1, of this year the city had a debt of $1,650,840.35 and practically no cash assets. To pay all this debt in one year would require the assessment of an additional $72 per $1,000 on the present taxable valuation. Were this spread over fifteen years it would add $5 each year to the tax rate. Instead of tax rates averaging between $10.80 and $19.20 the past fifteen years, they would have been $15.80 to $24.20, to have brought us out square.

Even an increase of $5 per $1000 would not have cancelled the debt, because on the valuation of the earlier years of the city it would not have raised one-fifteenth of $1,620,840.35.

The above statement is rather startling, but the increase of the debt may be readily seen from the summary below:

Jan. 1, 1889, (Became a city)*	$44,522.55
1890,	168,811.79
1891,	191,290.39
1892,	262,386.89
1893,	323,542.36
1894,	† 1,053,730.00
1895,	1,066,091.00
1896,	‡ 1,037,895.61
1897,	1,134,835.61
1898,	1,267,515.61
1899,	1,350,505.86
1900,	1,472,706.59
1901,	1,518,605.61
1902,	1,569,235.64
1903,	1,650,840.35

* With assets of $46,663.28.
† Bought water plant.
‡ Began sewer construction.

The Quincy tax rates make a good showing in comparison with Brockton, and our debt is less per capita. The rates of the two cities for eleven years are as follows:

	Brockton.	Quincy.
1903	$21.30	$17.30
1902	19.90	17.40
1901	20.70	17.60
1900	20.10	18.20
1899	21.60	19.20
1898	20.20	18.00
1897	20.70	18.80
1896	19.70	17.40
1895	18.60	16.80
1894	19.70	17.60
1893	19.70	15.80

Read what the Brockton Enterprise says editorially: "No possible explanations or excuses can reconcile the property owners of Brockton to such a tax rate, coming on top of an abnormal inflating in valuation, as will be assessed upon them this year.

It is time the citizens demanded and insisted upon a more rigid economy in municipal expenditures, and elected men to serve in the city council who have some concern for the taxpayer and a realization of the harm that is done by burdening factory and other property with an unreasonable tax rate. "Send to City Hall men who share in paying the city's bills and who realize what a careless appropriation of money means to the taxpayer—the one with an humble little home quite as much as the one who owns a great industrial plant or a brick block—and delegate to private life, where he belongs, the city councilman who is bidding for cheap popularity and whose answer to the property owner's protest is "The taxpayer be damned."

The condition which confronts Brockton today is not one created wholly by any one administration. It is the culmination of a series of years of debt incurring and money spending with reckless prodigality."

Again, the uncertainty of the Metropolitan assessments for water, sewer, parks, boulevards, and goodness knows what, over which the city government has no control. These are increasing rapidly and provisions must be made to pay whatever assessments are levied. Quincy, also, may have some large unforseen necessities, in addition to many seemingly necessary improvements. There is great need of caution.

N. B. The above article would have been very sensible had not the Ledger tried to whitewash the financial policy of the present administration, and to throw dust into the eyes of the unsuspecting taxpayers, in the hopes of blinding them as to the deplorable condition of affairs as they exist to-day.

It needs no great financier to tell us the reason the City Council found it necessary to issue a bond for ($200) two hundred dollars, for a street improvement. The real reason was because the city is practically without a quick asset and is now, and has been for some time, living from hand to mouth.

In the face of the necessity of issuing a bond for the paltry sum of two hundred dollars, there is small cause for congratulation that the tax rate is reduced ten cents per thousand. It would have been far better for the city, if instead of reducing the tax rate it had been increased to twenty ($20) dollars per thousand or even more, and pay off some of the city debt, which for several years past has been increasing at the rate of about one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) a year. If this policy had been followed, it would not have been necessary to issue a bond for two hundred dollars ($200,) or for the Ledger to sugar-coat the financial pill of the present administration in hopes that the taxpayers might unsuspectingly swallow a political humbug.

SALE OF THE NANCY BRACKETT ESTATE

EDITORIAL—QUINCY LEDGER, MAY 27, 1903.

Real estate on Hancock street and vicinity has received a rude shock since the Nancy Brackett sale for less than half the assessed value. Property holders have found that their estates are not worth big sums even if the Assessors say they are, and they recall the letter of Henry H. Faxon, "How I Got Rich." Fortunately for these estates, which the Assessors might have found more valuable (?) this year, the Assessors have not made their appraisals for this year, having been at work in Wards Two, Three and Four. There is no doubt that Hancock street values should be scaled down.

The most ludicrous feature of the sale of the Nancy Brackett estate was that one of the Assessors acted as the auctioneer and sold the property for less than one-half the valuation. It ought to give the political administration nervous prostration.

TAXPAYERS SHOULD WAKE UP.

[Editorial from Quincy Ledger, Aug. 22, 1903.]

The payment of taxes come hard for many, and it is surprising that there is not greater remonstrance because some have to pay what others escape. The last City Book shows that there were back taxes aggregating $21,169.05 uncollected for the years 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898 and 1899. At the same time the report of the City Treasurer to July 31 this year shows receipts of only $162. 34 of these back taxes collected this year.

These uncollected taxes are regarded as an asset of the city, yet for the years 1895, 1896 and 1897 not a cent has been collected this year. It would require an assessment of $1 per $1,000 on all the taxable property of the city just to pay these uncollected taxes.

The summary is as follows:

	Uncollected Jan. 1, 1901.	Collected Since.
Tax of 1895,	$4,326.27	None
1896,	2,644.33	None
1897,	3,261.53	None
1898,	3,829.14	$18.55
1899,	6,106.78	143.79
	$21,169.05	$162,34

In Brockton there are only two years of uncollected taxes, 1901 and 1902, but in Quincy there are eight years. The city needs the cash and should have it.

N. B.—Those who pay their taxes promptly are entitled to know the names of the delinquents who are depriving the city of its natural financial resources. It is the duty of the Tax Collector to furnish this information to the public, together with an explanation why the above named amounts have not been collected.

It is obvious that our city, with a population of more than twenty-five thousand, is managed by incompetent officials who have allowed the back taxes to assume such proportions that it is necessary to issue a city bond for $200.

HOW I GOT RICH.

Henry H. Faxon Says Assessors Did It.

Gives Example on One Estate.

Taxes, Assessments and Debt Burden Taxpayers.

Editors of Daily Ledger:

In 1867 and in 1868 I purchase from Breck and Blanchard estates on Granite street, consisting of house, stable, shop and about 52,000 square feet of land, paying therefor $4,400. I afterward sold a small piece of this land for $900, leaving the cost of the property at $3,500. Since I purchased the estates two new buildings have been erected thereon and two old ones have been moved to the premises. The valuation of the entire property for 1890 was $26,000, the land being assessed for $20,000. The tax rate for that year was $13.60.

The valuation of the whole estate in 1902 was $41,750, the land being assessed for $35,000, and the rate is now $17.40.

These figures show that the tax rate has been increased from $13.60 in 1890 to $17.40 in 1902, and the valuation of the land in question has been advanced from $20,000 to $35,000. It will thus be seen that the real estate owners have been humbugged by unscrupulous politicians who clamor that the rate has been reduced, intimating that the taxes have thereby been lessened, while in truth the tax bills are continuously increasing owing to excessive valuations.

High valuations also effect the State and County taxes, as will be observed in the following figures: In 1890 the portion of the State tax paid by Quincy was $8,557.50. In 1891 this tax was $11,847.50. In 1890 Quincy paid for Norfolk County tax $6,580.91, and $14,462.92 in 1901.

In addition to the heavy taxes already considered there are those on account of parks, sewers, playgrounds, sidewalks and other things too numerous to mention.

It should be remembered that not only has our tax rate advanced and the valuation doubled every few years, but a debt has been incurred which on January 1, 1902, amounted to $1,566,635.64, divided as follows:

Municipal,	$442,735.64
Water,	719,000.00
Sewer,	362,900.00
Playground,	42,000.00

The real estate owners' burdens will not be lightened so long as the present political clique are in control of the business affairs of our city.

REFORM NEEDED.

To Protect Real Estate Interests.

Selfish Interests Seem Paramount.

How Mayor Bryant Attempts Reduction of Taxes.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

It is the duty of the Mayor to explain to the taxpayers his political method for reducing the rate from $17.60 to $17.40, as many tax bills call for larger sums than those of last year. The following figures are self explanatory:

TAXES OF HENRY H. FAXON, 1902, 1901:

1902 Rate, $17.40 per M.

Poll tax,	$ 2.00
Other ratable personal tax,	106.58
Real estate tax,	9,004.07

1901 Rate, $17.60 per M.

Poll tax,	$ 2.00

Abatement,	8.80
	$8,921.03	$8,921.03

HEIRS OF JOB FAXON—TAXES:

1902, Real estate tax,	$278.40
Street sprinkling,	12.54
Total,	$290 94	$290.94
1901, Real estate tax,	$265.76
Street sprinkling,	12.54
Total,	$278.30	$278.30
Increase over 1901,		$12.64

TAXES ON THE FAXON FARM:

1902,	$290.94
1901,	278.30
1885, (town government,)	164.18

The taxes for 1885 were paid in September before the Faxon Park, 26 1-2 acres, was given to the city October 20, 1885.

If there is not a reform administration in the near future all the income from real estate will be absorbed in supporting office holders and political loafers whose selfish interests are paramount to the public welfare.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1902.

POOR RETURNS FROM MONEY DISBURSED.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

As the heaviest individual taxpayer in the city of Quincy, I feel that I am justified in calling upon the administration to show me what returns I get for the money paid by me to the city in the year 1902 for the following:

City taxes, including sprinkling,	$9,558.64
Water taxes,	$918.82

In addition to these items I am compelled to expend large sums on account of:

Sidewalk assessments.

Connecting estates with the sewer.

Renumbering houses and streets so that the tenants themselves cannot tell where they live.

As it is more than likely that a tyrannical administration will not attempt to answer my question regarding the supposed benefits I get from my outlay of tax money, I will endeavor to show to the public a few of the blessings (?) which I am permitted to enjoy.

Seventeen years ago there was given to the then town of Quincy by me a piece of property known as Faxon Park. In the deed conveying the land to the city there was a clause stipulating that the land should be fenced. How has the city kept faith with me? After repeated requests of mine to the Park Commissioners, concerning the obligation of the city, and complaints from the occupants of the farm adjoining the Park, the tenants themselves were compelled to erect a temporary fence.

For years I have served the town and city of Quincy as constable without pay. I sought the appointment in order that I might have the power of protecting my large property interests and those of other citizens from the vandalism and destruction which a high-priced police force of the city failed to prevent. The appointment was refused by the Mayor because of my known hostility to his extravagant method of conducting the city's affairs, and because of the spirit of vindictiveness which prevails in the present administration. Time and time again have I offered suggestions to the police authorities concerning the proper enforcement of the law but my advice has been ignored and the wholesale destruction of property goes on unpunished, thus adding a double burden to the taxpayer.

For many years I have urged the city to have the tide-gate near the almshouse kept in order to prevent the salt water from flowing over the meadows bordering on Coddington street. Proper attention has not been paid to the obstructions in the dam and the nuisance still exists.

The valuation of my real estate has been increased with each succeeding year by servile-office holders who raise the valuation in order that the tax rate may appear lower and thus hoodwink the hard working and unsuspecting tax payer.

Another subject of especial interest to me, as well as to other tax payers of the city, would be information concerning the cost of land, houses and appurtenances thereto, upon which are located the Mayor's famous machines that are supposed to wash the vault and cesspool matter into the sewer. These stations are maintained at a great and unnecessary expense, an enormous waste of water is occasioned by washing the matter that is to be dumped into the sewers which will become clogged by this impracticable system.

When these machines were erected I predicted their failure and experience with them has justified my predictions. The machine located in Ward Five, because of its proximity to residential property, will make the city liable for damages to the owners of land surrounding the building. The failure of these machines represents a squandering of the public's money, and the promoters, the administration and its political supporters, have proved to be utterly incapable to deal with a condition of affairs for which an incompetent Board of Health was primarily responsible.

Quincy, July 6, 1903.

EXCESSIVE VALUATIONS.

QUINCY LEADER, MAY 23, 1903.

A COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor of the Leader:

I wish to cite through the columns of your paper two examples of excessive valuation of property by the Board of Assessors of this city government.

April 18, 1903, two houses and 6,418 feet of land on Coddington street were sold at Commissioner's sale for $1,200. This property was assessed for $2,550. On the same date two houses and 8,363 feet of land on Newcomb street, assessed for $2,550, were to be sold, but as no bid was offered at that time in excess of the mortgage on the estates, viz.: $1,400, the sale was postponed one week. April 28 this property was sold for $1,425.

These examples are not of every day occurrence but there have been several pieces of real estate sold during the past year at a much lower figure than the assessed valuation.

While these methods of assessment are in practice in a major portion of our city, there are estates, especially in Ward Two, where the valuations are less than the price which the property would bring in the market.

The scheme of generally excessive valuations has been adopted by this administration for the purpose of throwing political sand into the eyes of the taxpayers to blind them as to the real size of their tax bills. With a largely increased valuation in nearly all parts of the city a lower rate per thousand is possible, and this, to many, appears to be the result of good financial management. A low tax rate may hoodwink a man who pays only a poll tax but to the large property owner, or even to the man who is trying to keep a small home for his family, the honest way of assessment would be far more favorable.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, May 23, 1903.

EDITORIAL—QUINCY LEDGER, MAY 26, 1903.

Something is radically wrong when land assessed at 60 cents per square foot is sold at a well-advertised public auction at 29 cents, as was the case on Saturday with the Nancy Brackett estate. Situated on the main thoroughfare of the city within five hundred feet of City Hall and the central depot, and well adapted for business, fine residences or apartment houses, it was surprising that it should be sold as low as it was. It is evident, however, that the estate is very much over-assessed. Were the lot but one hundred feet deep it might be worth 60 cents per foot, but there is considerable back land, and it would be necessary to sacrifice 9,000 to 10,000 feet to sub-divide it.

Perhaps the reason why the estate did not sell for more is because very few could handle it financially. It is said only three Quincy men had the necessary capital, but that is not very complimentary to the city. At best, however, it would be a big venture for a syndicate to expend $53,700, the assessed value, for land, and $100,000 or more to develop it. There is more money in less expensive land.

Many estates well situated in the city seem to be drugs on the market. It is impossible to get an offer for them at assessed value or even at a great discount. We hear frequent complaints of high rents, yet the landlords in many cases do not get enough out of estates to pay a fair interest on capital invested, and some cannot get dollar for dollar for expenses. In addition to taxes there are sewer assessments, sidewalk assessments, street sprinkling assessments, water rates, gas and electric light bills, plumbers' bills, repairs, etc., etc. It is surprising with all these disadvantages that there are so many transfers of land, and so much building in Quincy, for the city continues to grow rapidly. Probably real estate in Quincy is much the same as elsewhere, investments of late going in other directions, possibly to water the stock of the trusts.

Ex-President May Again Rule In San Domingo

REVOLUTION IN FULL SWING

Insurgents Triumph at the Start and Santiago Falls Into Their Hands—Custom House Frauds and Lying of Cabinet Officers Cause of Outbreak

Cape Haytien, Oct. 27.—The town of Santiago, in the Dominican republic, was surrounded by insurgent troops under the command of General Rodriguez. After severe fighting which lasted for several hours and during which a number of men were wounded, the revolutionists triumphed and Santiago fell into their hands.

Vice President Deschamps fled and is said to be in hiding in Monte Cristi, awaiting an opportunity to embark on board for a foreign port. The general opinion is that the government of President Wos y Gil is lost.

The revolution which has broken out in the northern part of the republic of Santo Domingo and which has already resulted in the establishment of a provisional government at Puerto Plata under the presidency of General Morales, was caused, according to advices received here, by the numerous custom house frauds and the prevarications of the ministers of war and of nance. The signal for the outbreak of the revolt was given at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon by three cannon shots. That same evening all the partisans of President Wos y Gil at Puerto Plata were arrested. The inhabitants of Monte Cristi, La Ligne and Moca united and attacked Santiago. Telegraphic communication between Santiago and La Vega has been severed.

General Wos y Gil headed the revolution which broke out in San Domingo in March of the present year, and resulted in the overthrow of Horacio Vasquez. Gil was elected president in June and in July the Dominican congress ratified his election The present revolution is said to be in favor of former President Jiminez, who was ousted in May, 1902, by the revolutionary forces commanded by Vasquez, at that time the vice president of the republic.

A Crooked Turf Event

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 27.—Dwight Way, a 4-year-old gelding owned by P. Baggs, was sent on the track for the second race here under the influence of drugs and acted like a wild horse. Jockey Hildebrand declared he would not ride him. The judges promptly ordered the entire field back to the stable, scratched Dwight Way and allowed 20 minutes for a new book. Charles Goodman, trainer of Dwight Way, was ruled off the turf for life.

Barges and Coal Went to Bottom

Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., Oct. 27.—Three loaded coal barges belonging to the New London Transportation company sank in the harbor here. The barges were in tow of the tug Gertrude, bound for New Haven. The tug headed into the harbor for shelter. As the fleet was entering the harbor the barges parted from the tug. They became separated and foundered soon after the tug had rescued the men on board.

Sharp Contest at Fort Riley

Fort Riley, Kan., Oct. 27.—Fort Riley still belongs to the government. The enemy made a desperate effort to capture it and the fight was still hot when the umpires stopped it. The opposition forces had conquered it at the time the halt was called and consequently its possession remains where it was before the fight.

Counterfeit on Lynn Bank Note

Washington, Oct. 27.—The secret service announces the discovery of a new $5 counterfeit note on the First National bank of Lynn, Mass. It is a photographic production and identical with the one discovered on the Millers River National bank of Athol, Mass., a few days ago.

New York, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Catherine Reddy of Yonkers was awarded a verdict of $50,000 in a suit for $100,000 damages against the New York Central railroad, tried before Judge Gaynor. Mrs. Reddy was badly injured in a wreck on the New York Central at Fancher.

Embezzlement of Bank Funds

Marshalltown, Ia., Oct. 27.—E. O. Soule, cashier of the Home Savings bank of Iowa Falls, accused of appropriating $30,000 of the bank's funds, has been indicted for embezzlement on three counts by the grand jury.

Further Advance In Price of Oil

Cleveland, Oct. 27.—The Standard Oil company has advanced the wholesale prices of all grades of refined oil 1 cent a gallon. This makes an advance of 1½ cents a gallon in the wholesale prices inside of a week.

"Didn't Know It Was Loaded"

Hardwick, Vt., Oct. 27.—Flora Porter, 15 years old, was unintentionally shot by her younger brother, dying 15 minutes later. The boy says that he did not suppose that the gun was loaded.

Democrats Like Mulvihill

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 27.—Mayor Dennis Mulvihill, who was employed as a stoker when elected last year, was renominated by the Democratic convention last night.

BOWLES LEAVES THE NAVY

To Accept Presidency of Shipbuilding Company In Massachusetts

Washington, Oct. 27.—Rear Admiral Bowles, chief of the bureau of construction and repair of the navy department, has tendered his resignation as an officer in the United States navy to the president and it has been accepted, to take effect Oct. 31. Constructor Capps has been selected by the president for the vacancy. Admiral Bowles is leaving the naval service to accept the presidency of a private shipbuilding company in Massachusetts.

Admiral Bowles says that after 28 years of service he regrets to leave the navy, in which his duties and surroundings have been so extremely agreeable. The offer of the presidency of a shipbuilding company which had been made him, however, he added, presented opportunities to continue his professional work and would permit him to live in his native state, and he, therefore, thought he must accept.

Boston, Oct. 27.—The Globe says that the resignation of Admiral Bowles is due to the fact that he has accepted the presidency of the Fore River Ship and Engine company at Quincy, where two battleships and one cruiser for the United States navy are under construction at the present time. The firm is a frequent bidder for naval contracts.

It is understood that the Fore River company has offered Admiral Bowles a salary at least double the $6500 which he is now receiving from the government.

Crime of Years Ago Revealed

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 27.—Isaac Stover was arrested here on a complaint filed by his sister, charging him with murdering her husband, Edward Butner, on March 9, 1878. She says she was an eye witness to the murder, with two other persons. It was agreed to keep the murder a secret if Stover would leave the country. He did so, but returned recently, and has been living with their father, who was buried yesterday, and to whom, she says, Stover has been cruel, which caused her to reveal the crime of over 25 years ago.

Captain Went Down With Vessel

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., Oct. 27.—Steamer W. F. Sauber was wrecked off Whitefish Point and Captain Morris and Frank Robinson, oiler, were drowned. The rest of the crew of 19 men were taken off the Sauber by the crew of the steamer Yale. Robinson was pinched between a yawl boat and the Yale. Captain Morris was on the deck of the Sauber after all the others had been taken off, when the steamer's boiler burst and he was blown into the lake.

To Investigate Gotham Postoffice

Washington, Oct. 27.—A special investigation of the New York city postoffice will begin in a few days by inspectors working under the direction of Mr. Bristow. Every department will be thoroughly investigated. There have been many reports of laxity of administration and extravagance in Postmaster Van Cott's office and all these will be looked into. Postmaster General Payne last night suggested that other large offices likewise will be investigated.

Colombia Acting on Canal

Paris, Oct. 27.—Cable advices received here from Bogota announce that the committee of examination of the Colombian congress has reported adversely the bill declaring invalid the extension of time granted the Panama Canal company. This committee also killed the resolution to demand from the United States $20,000,000 and from the Panama Canal company $10,000,000 additional.

Dead Under Suspicious Circumstance

New York, Oct. 27.—The police are investigating the death of Maud B. Hayes in her mother's apartments. The face of the dead young woman was badly bruised, but the mother and a colored maid both said that the bruises were caused by the woman's falling out of bed while ill. Mrs. Hayes said that her daughter had been ill since last July, when she was struck by a lover in a quarrel.

Reform Proposals Hurt Sultan

Constantinople, Oct. 27.—It is said that a cabinet council has decided to reject the proposed appointment of assessors and other measures of control set forth in the Austro-Russian plan for the betterment of conditions in Macedonia, as incompatible with the sovereign rights of the sultan. The council agreed, however, that the other proposals were acceptable.

Autumn Coiffures For Maid and Matron—Checked Materials.

There is no hard and fast rule so far as coiffure is concerned. Large, loose waves are still the fashion, and a good many exclusive women are wearing their hair simply parted and drawn back, without any wave at all.

Young girls are wearing the hair low, with a big black silk or velvet bow behind. For smart occasions in the evening the hair is generally dressed very high, and innumerable tortoise shell pins are worn. The wreath of leaves and flowers is still to be seen, and beautiful jewels are never out of fashion.

For morning wear the short skirt is the proper thing, even in light dresses.

Good Afternoon

Not until the voters enter the polling places at the caucuses next week will they know exactly who are the candidates for the nominations. No two papers, except the Ledger and Patriot, have published the same lists for the Republican caucuses because there was trickery in some quarters about giving publicity to the nominations. This is not as it should be. The greatest publicity should be given to all nominations. This is one of the strong points of the Lace Act which will come up for acceptance at the State election. Nothing is known of the nominations for the Democratic and Socialist caucuses which are also to be held next week. The conniving of politicians, and the indifference of the voters at large over nominations are conditions to be deplored.

Col. Gaston is reported to decline the responsibility of the attack of Lawyer Alfred S. Hayes on Gov. Bates, but nevertheless the charge was made at Quincy, and on the same platform was Congressman McNary, the chairman of the Democratic State Committee. It is not surprising that everyone wants to shirk the responsibility. The incident will probably increase the vote of Gov. Bates.

Why? Why? Was the $6000 loan order for the paving of Willard street rushed through the City Council?

Drift of Opinion.

☞All the trouble about the Alaska-Yukon boundary arises in the first place from the neglect of Great Britain or Canada to buy Alaska when it was in the market some forty years ago. Sir George E. Cartier is said to have been strongly in favor of this step, and to have made it the subject of his dying wish. There was in those days, however, an extraordinary timidity about adding to the territory of Canada, and we ran a chance of losing the Northwest Territories, which we purchased from the Hudson Bay company for a mere song. When Alaska was allowed to fall into the United States, it was just as if Great Britain had been allowed to acquire Florida or California.—Toronto World.

☞The various periodicals about the country are stocked full of hints as to how to attain fame and fortune. Courses in this, that and the other ology or business are offered and apparently the only thing requisite for one to succeed in life is to send for Jimjohn's course of instructions, read them and, presto! Dame Fortune stands waiting. All of which reads very prettily. About the best incentive to become famous or wealthy—the two, however, are generally synonymous—is poverty. The man who has, in the words of an old philosopher, to "git up and git" is the one to accomplish great things. Give a young man health grit, poverty, and if he doesn't accomplish wonders it will be because he doesn't live long enough to carry out his plans.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

OUR TAX RATE

Is Neither Among the Highest or Lowest.

In Banker List 64 Higher, 64 Lower.

One of 36 in 129 to Reduce Her Tax Rate.

The recent number of the Review and Record and Banker and Tradesman publishes a table giving the tax rate for the years 1902 and 1903 of 129 towns and cities in this state.

It is interesting to note that out of these 129 towns and cities 74 show an increase in tax rate for the year 1903 over that of 1902. Lynfield shows the largest increase, $6 per thousand, and Nantucket is second, with an increase of $5.50. Taking the cities, Brockton heads the list with an increase of $1.90 per thousand, with Worcester second, showing an increase of $1.60.

Thirty-six towns and cities show a decrease in tax rates for the year 1903. The town of Raynham shows the largest decrease, being $5.30 per thousand, with Southbridge second with a decrease of $1.40.

The largest tax rate for the year 1903 among the towns, is that of Warren with a rate of $25.70, and among the cities, Brockton, with a rate of $21.80.

The lowest tax rate for the year 1903 is that of the town of Nahant, with a rate of $8 per thousand, and for the cities, Springfield is lowest with a rate of $14.60 per thousand.

The New Bedford Standard says the tax rate of the town of Mattapoisett is not included in this list. The rate there is $7 per thousand, one dollar lower than that of Nahant, and is believed to be the lowest rate in the state.

The singular thing about the list is that the city of Quincy is exactly half way. There are 129 cities and towns in the list and 64 have a larger tax rate than Quincy, and 64 have a smaller tax rate. No city or town has the same rate, viz $17.30 per $1,000.

The Ledger prints the towns in two columns, those having a tax rate in excess of Quincy in the first column:

QUINCY RATE $17.30.

Birthday Party.

A number of the many friends of Miss Alice Bacon Hultman tendered her a surprise party Monday evening at her home at 219 Washington street, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. Miss Hultman had been expecting callers that evening, but did not anticipate entertaining anything like the number that came unexpectedly during the early evening. As one after another began to arrive, it soon became apparent to her that all was not by accident but by some prearrangement. The evening proved to be one of enjoyment for all; games, music and the serving of refreshments making the hours pass all too quickly. Miss Hultman was showered with congratulations and well wishes, and not a few brought remembrances.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903–1904.

Atlantic to Lose a Very Popular Pastor.

RESIGNATION.

Letter of Rev. J. H. Whitaker to His People.

Believes in Short Pastorates.

Says a New Leader Is Desirable for Church.

The members of the Atlantic Memorial church do not agree with their pastor that a change of leader is necessary or desirable. The letter of Rev. J. H. Whitaker reads as follows:

To the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, Mass., Greeting:

Dear Friends,—I hereby resign my position as pastor of the Memorial Congregational church, Atlantic, asking that this resignation take effect Feb. 1, 1904.

The clause in the church rules, calling for a three months' notice, by either party desiring to make a change, is the reason for this particular date.

The situation is as follows: Feb. 1, 1904, will complete 6 years, 9 months and 2 weeks of my residence among you. I was trained, as you know, in the Methodist church, and was taught to believe that long pastorates are, as a rule, undesirable for either church or minister. This idea still clings to me.

The Atlantic church is now in excellent condition. There is no reason why it may not be carried on from its present vantage point by another, quite as well as by myself; indeed, because of the length of time I have already been with you, I believe a new man will be able to do this work better.

My intimate knowledge of your affairs convinces me that my work among you is completed. I have tried to serve you well, and I feel that I have reached a point where I must seek a new field, new problems, and a new people. It is hard to say this, because of the strong bond of friendship between us, which is, I assure you, dear to me. But this friendship should not outweigh the needs of your work.

You have urgent needs of a new church building. The difficulty we have experienced in raising the mortgage, and the effort it has required to form the very small nucleus which we now have for a church building fund, with other matters, of which, I prefer not to speak in detail, confirm me in the belief that you should seek another leader, and that I should seek another work.

Your great kindness to me, a kindness which has increased from year to year, makes me reluctant on friendships score to leave you. But my conviction of the wisdom of this step is settled.

Sincerely yours,
J. H. Whitaker.

$100 in Gold.

To the voters of the 5th Norfolk Representative district:

Whereas on the eve of election Representative Peter T. Fallon has caused to be distributed in this district a circular which condemns as false the printed statement of the legislative record in part of Representatives Richard R. Freeman and Peter T. Fallon as issued by the City Committee of the Socialists party, we do hereby offer to donate to the City Hospital $100 in gold coin when Hon. Peter T. Fallon or Hon. Richard R. Freeman, can show from the pages of the Journal of the House that the statements in the circular printed by us be false.

Furthermore we hereby challenge Hon. Peter T. Fallon, or any reputable representative of himself he may choose, to meet our candidate for Representative, Levi H. Turner, in joint debate with equal division of time in Farnums hall, West Quincy, on Friday evening, Oct. 30, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Bates, wife of the governor, will figure prominently in the fair which opens in Horticultural Hall, Oct. 26, continuing till Oct. 31. This fair is to be under the auspices of the Deaconess Aid Society, for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a new Deaconess Hospital, and while most fairs are merely social functions, this will be educational as well. Mrs. Bates is the honorary president of the fair committee and Mrs. A. G. Barber is the president. The leading feature of the fair will be "Historical Massachusetts" and it will consist of the reproduction of 11 historical buildings of Massachusetts.

IN COLLISION.

Randolph Express Overturned by Electric on Independence Ave.

One of Lyons' Randolph express teams was struck and overturned by a car on Independence avenue at 7.50 on Monday evening. The team was damaged somewhat. One side of the vestibule was knocked in and John Garvin, the motorman, was injured.

It appears that the team was a three-horse hitch, a pair of horses at the pole and a mule as a lead horse. The team was going south on the avenue on the right hand side and the car was coming toward Quincy.

The car made a stop at a white pole just before reaching the team and then started up. Just as the car was about to pass the team the mule whirled suddenly across the track and dragged the pair of horses and team with it.

It was done so quickly that the motorman had no opportunity to stop the car, although it was moving slowly.

It is said that the driver of the team was in no condition to handle his team as he should, and his inability to control it was the cause of the mule wheeling across the track, and the accident.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that this week is Hospital week.

The Pierian Sodality of Harvard University a popular musical organization, will give a concert at the East Milton Baptist church, Tuesday evening, Nov. 10.

HIS SECRET REVEALED

Dowie Makes His Parentage Known to the World

FATHER AN ARMY OFFICER

Was Separated From His Mother Before He Was Born and Married John M Dowie In First Flush of Shame to Give a Name to Her Son

New York, Oct. 27.—In a broken voice, with tears streaming down his face and his body shaking with the most powerful emotion, John A. Dowie stood on the platform in Madison Square Garden last night before an audience of 10,000 persons and announced that in truth he was not the son of John M. Dowie of Essex, Ia., from whom he takes his patronymic, but that his father was a British army officer of high family by a "Scotch marriage." He heaped villification and denunciation upon John M. Dowie, who, he declared, had made his mother believe her marriage to Dowie's father was shameful, and, the army officer having been taken away by his relatives, his mother in the first flush of her shame had sought to give her son a name by marrying John M. Dowie in March and that he was born in May.

The revelation was made at the end of an hour's tirade against the press of this city, its treatment of his work and himself, being styled "a conspiracy of falsehood." The reporters were denounced as "yellow dogs, poisonous reptiles who have wrecked thousands of homes and broken thousands of hearts." Mr. Dowie violently denounced the entire press of the city, excepting one paper, and in a passionate rage he declared the "yellow dog" should be muzzled by a censorship law if the country is to be saved.

In this way he led up to the publication of extracts from letters passing between himself and John M. Dowie, indicating Dowie's renunciation of the latter as a parent and which were responsible for his partial exposition of the great secret of his life. Shouting at one moment in a fit of violent rage at the newspapers, Mr. Dowie would the next moment speak in the most gentle voice of his mother and wife.

The great audience was moved by his evident emotion when he spoke of his mother and wife. Women wept, and at times bursts of applause greeted his declarations.

Dowie announced that just one year ago he had addressed a meeting in Chicago, at which he had told of an attempt to blackmail by a man from Boston, who claimed to have certain letters which had passed between himself and John M. Dowie. He told the history of the letters from his knowledge and explained that he had laid the matter a year ago before some of his high church officials, three of whom verified the truth of Mr. Dowie's statements.

Dowie read from a Zion newspaper of a year ago, showing publication of an attempt at blackmail. Then with dramatic intensity the Zion leader began his recital of the facts behind the letters and the last words, pronounced with solemnity over the great, still Garden, fell on the audience like an irrevocable dictum, and in a few seconds a great burst of applause greeted the speaker.

"My father was a man of high standing. He led one of the great charges in the Crimean war and died like a soldier at the head of his troops. I want to say that I never wanted this story to come out, but it is known that I am not the son of the miserable scoundrel, who, in order to strike at me, sold the letters in which I reproached him to the vile press of New York."

Dowie burst into invective of the bitterest type against the press for publishing the letters. He raged like a man crazed by the enormity of injury done him and then, as if spent by the exertion of his tirade, broke down and wept. He said he was glad his wife and son were away so that he could bear the humiliation alone. He likened himself to David and Solomon, but added that he did not consider he was illegitimate. At the close of the address Dowie pronounced this benediction:

"God look down upon the irresponsible band of criminals who write the papers and publish their lies and have mercy on them. Have mercy, O God, and grant grace to the country and may it muzzle and if needs be destroy the newspapers."

Suffers From Religious Mania

Salinas, Cal., Oct. 27.—An examination of Mrs. Louis Iverson, who killed three of her children, showed that she had been ailing mentally for three months. She was afraid she would do something irreligious and was hysterical about her children's welfare. She was committed to a hospital for the insane.

Deportation Blocked

New York, Oct. 27.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States court, has issued a writ of habeas corpus directing the commissioner of immigration to produce John Turner, the anarchist, before him tomorrow. Turner was to have been deported either today or tomorrow. Judge Lacombe's order acts as a stay.

Smallpox in College

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 27.—Two students in Broadus college, at the Baptist denominational school in this city, have smallpox and the entire college is under quarantine. One hundred and fifty students are confined.

LABOR.

Democratic State Committee.

The laboring men of Massachusetts do not have to look very far for their reasons in supporting the Democratic candidate for Governor, William A. Gaston. The Journal of the Massachusetts senate for the session of 1902, 1903, affords them much food for thought. It is a record which shows beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Republican party, despite its loud and frequent statements to the contrary, is not a friend of labor, and, when it came to the test, has never shown by word or deed that the interests of the laboring men were entitled to their consideration for an instant. This is not true of one year alone but is the case time after time and session after session in the Senate and House of the State. The workingmen should see that every vote within their reach is sent to the polls to protest against such discrimination.

The Massachusetts Senate for the year 1903 consisted of 9 Democrats and 31 Republicans, making that body overwhelmingly Republican. Thanks to the energy of the Democratic leaders in the Senate, a large number of roll calls were had on measures affecting the people, so that voters may know the conditions which prevail in the Massachusetts Senate.

They will find from an examination of the Statutes of 1903, a large number of measures passed which were asked for by corporations and in the interest of corporations. They will find in the Senate Journal that the petitions filed by labor or by citizens for the good of the people or of the State were given leave to withdraw, rejected or referred, with two exceptions.

These were the 8-hour bill for public employes and the 12-hours in every 24 for firemen; and these two survivors of the Senate slaughter-house were vetoed by Governor Bates.

On the resolve for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people the vote was 15 for and 17 against; every Democrat voting for the resolve. All the votes against it were Republican.

The bill for 12 hours in 24 for firemen in cities passed to a third reading by 19 to 16. Defeated on engrossment by 18 to 19, a motion of Senator Gore, Democrat, prevailed to reconsider and the bill was sent to the Governor. The Republican Senator from the Governor's district put through a motion to recall the bill from the Governor, and then asked to reconsider its enactment; but this required a unanimous vote and the Democrats prevented its reconsideration. The intent was undoubtedly to get the bill killed in the Senate and save the Governor a veto. This playing ducks and drakes with labor measures happened frequently in the Republican Senate. Governor Bates vetoed this firemen's bill.

House bill 127, relative to the payment of operatives in textile factories. Vote for was 13, and against 26, every vote against being Republican.

The labor bill for peaceful communication during strikes or lockouts was defeated 15 for and 19 against; and the 19 against were all Republican.

Regulating hours of labor of railroad employees — Senate No. 363 — 9 for and 27 against, the 27 being all Republicans.

Bill No. 1387 relative to hours of labor of women and minors in manufacturing establishments, 12 for and 21 against, the 21 against being all Republicans.

Bill No. 1386, a similar bill, met a like fate, 16 for and 19 against; every Democrat voting for it and the 19 against it being all Republicans.

The bill for brakemen on freight trains was voted for on one reading, only to be referred on motion of a Republican to the next General Court on another reading. This bill had passed the House.

On the bill relative to hours of labor for minors in textile factories, defeated in the third reading, there were 17 for and 18 against, all the latter being Republicans. Every Democrat voted for it. The evils of child labor were shown at the labor convention at Worcester, September 30th of this year.

The 8-hour bill for public employees was buffeted to and fro in the Senate. It was defeated one day, but the Democratic Senators fought for reconsideration and succeeded. The Republican Senators tried to kill it by offering amendments, and Governor Bates finally vetoed it.

Page 1068—Bill to prevent overtime working of women and children—12 for and 16 against—all the latter being Republican.

In like manner all bills growing out of the coal situation of last winter and petitioned for were killed, as were all the following:

Bill for referendum in granting franchises.

Bills for lower fares on railroads.

Bills for cheap fares on morning and evening trains.

Bills for street railways to provide waiting stations.

Bill to prevent overcrowding of cars.

Bill to tax franchises of corporations.

Bill to tax roadbeds of railroads locally.

Bill to tax wealth passing through Probate Court.

All these bills were defeated by a Republican Senate. The Republican majority was never before so absolutely and entirely controlled for corporation measures; and if the people could but know the actual conditions, the remedy would be quickly applied by the voters.

The only hope of the people of the State is to increase the number of Democrats in the Legislature and to elect a Democratic Governor of Massachusetts.

Effusiveness or Coldness.

Many women are so afraid of gushing that they actually become ungracious. They hate insincerity so deeply that in avoiding insincere gratitude they assume an insincere indifference. If one must choose between being either effusive or cold it is surely better to be the former. Indifference or an indifferent manner has parted more friends than gush ever did. If one has entertained a friend or gone out of his way to do a favor or bestowed a gift he will be pretty sure not to mind effusiveness, but he will find it hard to excuse indifference or lack of appreciation. People inveigh over the perfunctoriness of much of the bridal gift giving, but the notes that some brides send out acknowledging their wedding presents are often so perfunctory and vague that they are like a dash of cold water in the face of the giver. There is a gentle art of saying thank you. It is one that will stand cultivating.

The Fashionable English Woman.

The fashionable English woman crimps and fluffs her hair until it "pomps" all around her head like a rather stiff halo, and then she tidies it all down with a hair net, both fore and aft. But the hair is a very pretty color, and they have the most beautiful complexions and brilliant coloring to be found in the whole world. There are no middle aged women. They are either young and fresh or old and becapped. When the wrinkles begin to come they are immediately and persistently chased away by an electrical contrivance, massage and plenty of expensive cold cream. One rarely sees a gray haired woman, at least not a fashionable one, for when the hair begins to whiten she tints it until it is a beautiful reddish blond brown, and she then goes tripping down the ladder of life utterly and gayly unconscious of the devastating footprints of Father Time.—Good Housekeeping.

Adorn Your Books.

A charming way of beautifying little books, such as diaries, engagement books, almanacs, etc., is to cut a piece of rough surfaced drawing paper or vellum to the exact size of the cover and fix it on with gum, a little practice insuring success. You can write some appropriate line from your favorite author across the cover and then fill in the remaining portion with a pretty design. A daybook would look charming with a brown paper cover, a red sun rising from a background of a few clouds and the words, "Pack clouds away and welcome day." An address book could have a row of quaint red roofed houses and the words, "Where is it?" and a diary covered in black paper with the words, "Silence is golden," an hourglass and a key. All these put in with gold paint would be uncommon.

Be Courteous, Girls.

There is nothing so pretty in the manner of a young girl as a courteous behavior toward the aged. It is often noticeable that a young girl will slight a remark made to her by an elderly women to listen animatedly to a giddy girl of her own age. How often, too, is the elderly guest entirely neglected by the younger members of the family that she may visit! A little attention from the young is much appreciated by the elderly, and it is easy to give at least a deferential manner. It is generally wisdom's part to defer to the opinions of the old. Wisdom is gained through experience, and the aged, with their long life of experience, should have good advice to offer and words of wisdom ever on their lips. Girls, be courteous ever, but have a particular deference to the old.

The Duty to the Home.

In their zeal to perform deeds in this world too many women forget their duty to home and family and insist upon devoting time, money and strength to the labor of sustaining a pet charity. Nothing is more commendable than true charity, but nothing is sadder than to see the modern Mrs. Jellybys neglecting home, children and all home life in a mistaken idea of doing a noble work. Woman's field is quite extensive enough to keep the average body well employed, and if she but attends to immediate duties she will be doing her share in making the world better.

A CHILD'S REPROOF.

It Brought Kindness and Happiness to His Grandfather.

Once upon a time an old man lived with his son. His son became weary of him and made him eat his meals on a bench at the other end of the room. The old man let a plate fall and broke it. His son then said that he should eat out of a wooden bowl. One day this unkind son saw his own little boy cutting a piece of wood. He asked him what he was making.

"A BOWL FOR YOU TO EAT OUT OF WHEN YOU ARE OLD"

"I am making a bowl for you to eat out of when you are old," answered the child.

This pricked his father's heart so much that he brought the old man back to the table and treated him more kindly.—Chatterbox.

Kept His Eyes Open.

In the South American diamond mines the rough gems had until recently to be separated from the hard earth and other mineral substances by hand. The whole mass was dried and softened in the air and then shoveled into washing machines, where the soluble earth was removed. Among the employees in the sorting room was a young boy, who one day noticed a diamond and a garnet, both in the rough, on the end of a small board. He tilted the board, and the garnet rolled off, but the diamond stuck fast. Looking more closely, he saw that the board was greasy. This gave him an idea. He got a larger board and tried several kinds of minerals. Invariably the other stones rolled off with a shake or two, while even a thin coating of grease kept all the diamonds in their places. Then this wideawake boy went to work and invented a machine that is now successfully doing the work of diamond picking for all the South African mines, and, needless to say, the young inventor has made an independent fortune, just because he kept his eyes open and his wits about him that day when he first noticed the difference in the "sticking qualities" of the gems.

Here is a rainy day game: Assemble your company in a darkened room, arranged for a magic lantern exhibition. You should have a camera on hand to aid in the fun.

"Who will sit for a photograph?" you must ask.

The first who volunteers is invited to sit in front of the camera and to look pleasant. A second takes his place after a minute, a third and a fourth, and so on.

When the photographer has collected about a dozen he is ready to show the "proofs." For this purpose he must have on hand the same number of comic slides and throw them in turn upon the sheet. The result will be very funny. If the pictures are specially grotesque, any number of youngsters can be amused indoors for a long wet afternoon.

A Few Word Don'ts.

Here is a list of words and phrases in common use that boys and girls should avoid. They may be easily remembered. Don't say:

Guess for suppose or think.
Fix for arrange or prepare.
Ride when you mean drive.
Real good for really good.
Not as I know for not that I know.
Try an experiment for make an experiment.

The Land of Fairy Tales.

When I go up the stairs at night
And get undressed for bed,
All kinds of curious ideas
Come rushing through my head.
I wonder if Prince Charming
Will come and say "Good night."
Will fairies dance before me,
Then vanish with the light?

And when I lay my head down
And gently fall asleep
I seem to see the goblins wee;
Around my bed they creep.
They climb up by the curtains
And swing above my head
And chatter of the naughty things
That I have often said.

I see sweet Cinderella
And Princess Beauty, too,
And Jack the Giant Killer
And giants not a few.
I dream of them, I love them,
And when the daylight falls
Once more I go to bed and see
The Land of Fairy Tales.

THE 1904 NOMINATION

Republican Party In Hands of a Few Stong Men

COULD DEFEAT ROOSEVELT

Hanna the Logical Candidate If a New One Is Desired, but Open Movement Against President Is Doubtful —Grievances of Strict Party Men

Washington, Oct. 27.—Can President Roosevelt's opponents prevent his receiving the Republican nomination next summer? Is it too late, have things gone too far, for any adverse combination to accomplish his overthrow? These are questions much discussed in the political circles of this city. Perhaps because of the prevailing political atmosphere here, which is often at variance with the real country, the possibility of a sensational reversal of today's apparent program finds not a few supporters. Those who present this view are not unaware of the large number of states which have declared in convention for Roosevelt, and of the few delegates already elected who are instructed to vote for him. They do not question the evidences of his strong popular hold, especially in the west, but they significantly add: "Wait and see." Doubtless many persons are thinking along this line.

Proponents of the theory that Roosevelt will yet fail of the nomination hold that no opportunity will be given his opponents to show their hand until this year's elections are over. Mr. Hanna, for example, they point out, could not in the past have come out against Roosevelt without endangering his own re-election to the senate. In a state so close as Ohio may be this year the president's personal following would prove a strong factor, but after the legislature is elected next week Mr. Hanna will be free to voice his own mind and purposes. It is the same way with not a few other Republican leaders. They would have been foolish to risk the cost of opposing Roosevelt before it was time to accomplish anything by doing so. Now, as the hour of decision is nearing, if they make up their minds to act there will be prompt and vigorous movements.

It is asserted that six men could get together tomorrow and decide that Roosevelt was not to be nominated, and he would not be. That is perhaps true. The Republican party, as a national organization, is peculiarly in the hands of a few strong men. Especially is this true when large blocks of southern delegates would presumably respond in a crisis to the nod of another quarter than that of the White House. Mr. Hanna organized the southern delegates in 1896 as they were never marshalled before. He has never lost that control, in case he should care to use it for himself or his friends.

The presence of this great mass of southern delegates who represent nobody, numbering nearly 30 percent of the convention, leaves the control of that body largely in the hands of an inner-circle organization. President Roosevelt has displaced most of the old guard of professional southern Republicans, white and black. As a whole it must be concluded that his defenses would not be found in good condition to resist a concerted attack.

But while it is argued that the great leaders of the party could displace Mr. Roosevelt, that they will do so looks entirely unlikely. Herein lies an important distinction. Four years is a short time in party history or in the political life of the average United States senator. It would be easier for the dissatisfied in Wall street or in Washington to bear up under Mr. Roosevelt for that short time than to take the obvious risk of so sensational a move as overthrowing him, would be.

The further question arises: Who would the opposition have to put in Mr. Roosevelt's place? Several of their available men, like Governor Taft, would not take a nomination against him. If such a plan were carried out, Mr. Hanna would in all probability be the nominee, since he represents both capital and labor through his Civic Federation enterprise, and personifies organization Republicanism north and south. But Mr. Hanna would run better in Washington for the president, where he is known, than out in the rural districts where his picture in the cartoons is merely known. It is, moreover, doubtful if he wants a presidential nomination. He has never seemed ambitious in that direction.

So while Mr. Roosevelt is offending the organization influences in many states, as well as many forces in finance, it is doubtful if this grievance will reach the stage of an open movement against him. He is yielding less to the senators, who usually include in each state the party manager and one of his faithful allies, in matters of patronage than they like. In Delaware he appears to be turning his back on Addicks, who controls numerically a decided majority of the party voters of the state.

The president's personal friends and associates in a number of states are seen who are openly antagonizing the senators of those communities. They see these friends whom they regard as "pestiferous mugwumps" going to the White House to luncheon and otherwise enjoying terms of intimacy with the president. The strict organization men feel that they are living under a "mugwump president" and this makes them restive.

What a Farmer Thought Until He Found That He Was Swindled

Hartford, Oct. 27.—Two strangers who are alleged to have swindled G. S. Burnham of this city out of $5000 through a three-card game are being sought for by the police authorities here and in other places. Burnham is a well-to-do, retired farmer, about 65 years old. One of the strangers said that his name was Brooks and that he was connected with a bank in Torrington, Conn., while the other was represented as a southerner who had come north for the purpose of finding his sister in Winsted, to whom he was to pay $30,000. Having learned that his sister was dead the southerner said he was reckless as to what became of the money. He offered to show Brooks and Burnham how to play the three-card monte game, with the result that Burnham was induced to draw $5900 from the bank and put it in a tin trunk, together with a roll alleged to contain $10,000, which the southerner placed as his part of the wager. Burnham was given the key of the trunk and the men drove to West Hartford, stopping at a secluded pace in the woods, where the game began. Burnham won and started home with the trunk. It was not until he opened the box and found it empty that he realized that he had been duped.

Busy Week For Politicians

After an uncompleted session of the coroner's jury, empanelled late yesterday, during which it was said Wyman had threatened to kill himself, it was decided to detain him.

Alleged Murderer May Be Insane

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 27.—It is probable that upon the opening of the supreme court in November that Judge Haselton will be asked to commit Bartholemi Croteaux, the alleged murderer of Peter Vorren, to the Waterbury insane asylum, where he can be examined to determine whether he is sane. Croteaux has acted so strangely that the jail keepers think that he is either insane or shamming insanity.

Snow In New England

Boston, Oct. 27.—Snow fell yesterday for the first time this season in many places in New England, reaching a depth of more than two inches in northern New Hampshire and Vermont. Bryan Interested $50,000 Worth

New Haven, Oct. 27.—Arguments in the Philo S. Bennett will case, the testimony of which, including the unsealing of a letter in which a bequest of $50,000 had been made to W. J. THE ALASKA BOUNDARY

Colonel W. T. Clough's Definition of the Decision.

KEY TO THE KLONDIKE GAINED.

Great Northern Railway's Vice President Says That the United States Now Controls All Approaches by Sea to Alaska and All British North America North of 54.40 Degrees North Latitude.

Colonel W. P. Clough, vice president of the Great Northern railway and also of the Northern Securities company, was asked recently by a reporter of the New York Commercial Advertiser how the Alaskan boundary decision would affect American railroad and commercial interests. He said: "The decision of the Alaska boundary commission gives the United States government control of the approaches by sea to the entire British Klondike region and all that part of British North America lying north of 54.40 degrees north latitude. Naturally American carriers will have a greater advantage in handling business into the general Alaskan regions.

"This decision merely confirms the things that have existed for forty years, with some changes of comparatively little importance. British maps for the past forty years have preserved the same Alaskan boundary line practically as it is now. This boundary line runs from 54.40 degrees north latitude and skirts along the coast above the heads of all the ocean inlets, so that from 54.40 degrees north all water entrances into the country extend through American territory. It was the contention of the American representatives before the board of arbitration that the main purpose of the original concession of that strip of ground to Russia was to cut off the access of British North America north of 54.40 to the Pacific ocean, and that purpose was established historically to the satisfaction of a majority of the board.

"Doubtless arrangements will be made for goods to pass over this strip of United States territory to and from points in British North America in bond, the same as goods now pass through the United States in going to and from Canada and other foreign countries. The principal port of entrance into the Klondike gold region is Skaguay, and there are existing arrangements for passing goods in bond through United States territory. One of the advantages that the American carriers will derive from the definite settlement of this boundary question will be the advantage that must naturally exist from having both ends of transit controlled by the United States government. The Canadian contention was for a boundary line that would cut across the deep inlets between their mouths and their heads so as to leave the heads in British territory. This important point the Canadians lost.

"The western terminus of the projected Grand Trunk Pacific railway will be at Port Simpson, which is at the mouth of Portland channel, the boundary water between British North America and Alaska. Two islands in the mouth of the entrance to Port Simpson were awarded to the United States by the Alaskan commission against the protests of the Canadians, who claimed that it would be a menace to the western terminus of a Canadian transcontinental railway line to have this channel commanded in a military sense by territory in possession of another government.

"Practically this Alaskan boundary decision makes more secure existing American projects. I do not expect that it will cause any additional railway construction by American interests; not right away at any rate. Quite naturally the local development of Alaska will be stimulated. All of that region along the north Pacific coast has a fine, mild climate. The mean temperature of Sitka and Philadelphia are nearly the same, that of Sitka being more equable, owing to its location on the ocean. The inlet region of which the United States has been awarded absolute control is covered by magnificent forests, and I presume that minerals will be found there in great abundance. The fisheries, too, are rich. In fact, the territory conceded to us is very valuable in itself.

"The only railroad now in Alaska is owned by American capital, but is in no way connected with Great Northern or Northern Pacific interests. This is only a short line, however, connecting the Lynn canal with the Lewes river, which leads to Dawson."

Antelope Still Plenty.

Herds of antelope were seen daily for a week at a time in western Beaver county, Okla., recently by a scientific investigating party, says the Kansas City Journal. In the big pastures of the C. C. C. ranch in Beaver county were bunches of wild horses. The party got within a mile of a herd of thirty mares, colts and several stallions. Occasionally five or six stallions would be seen together, surveying the wagons from some distant hilltop and then flashing away, their manes and tails flying, bannerlike, in the wind. Few of these wild horses were desirable, being of common stock and shaggy and unkempt.

Queer Seed Experiment.

The Duke of Athoil has devised a highly original method of sowing seeds on the inaccessible rocks which tower above a portion of his property in Scotland. Some antiquated cannon lying idle in the neighborhood were charged with canisters filled with seeds and fired at the cracks in the rocks. The experiment is expected to be successful.

COTTAGE FURNISHING.

Hints About Ceilings, Walls and Some Bits of Furniture.

For homelike furnishings the sitting room in a cottage has a particular adaptability. Economy, the foundation element that makes the house a cottage and not a mansion, is often the factor that achieves this quality.

The size of the room and the height of the ceiling also insure a degree of coziness that is not attainable as a general thing in more pretentious houses. As cottage walls are usually from eight to nine feet in height, the paper should run without interruption from the floor to the ceiling. A frieze or border is, of course, unnecessary. At the joining of the side wall and ceiling a finish may be given by a plain molding of wood like the woodwork.

The general rule for treating the ceiling of a cottage is with a water color tint (calcimine) of cream white.

If the ceiling is defaced and a paper must be adopted let it be a plain cream white, laid on without lapping the seams. Sometimes a figured paper looks well on the ceiling, but great care should be taken in its selection.

In a room that is put to such general use as a sitting room the paper for the side wall should be chosen for its really livable quality. In a sunny exposure it should be soft and quiet and in darker places warm and cheerful. Stripes that show a decided contrast become tiresome to the eye, but a stripe that is subordinate to a good design—that is, a stripe printed under the design—adds dignity to the walls.

Comfortable chairs are an important part of the sitting room furnishings, and as these are never to be bought "real cheap" they are better accumulated slowly and satisfactorily.

The small square table illustrated is a simple construction designed and executed by inexperienced home talent. A board of whitewood was cut into three lengths and fitted to the four legs and a green stain applied as a finish, making a really charming addition to the sitting room furniture at an incredibly small cost. If stain is to be put on a table of this kind whitewood should be used instead of pine.

Cherry or mahogany stain will nearly match mahogany furniture, and any of the green stains will harmonize with oak furniture.—Designer.

Spiced Grapes.

Spiced grapes are an excellent relish. Pulp seven pounds of grapes and cook until the seeds can be removed by a sieve, put into the kettle, add five pounds of good brown sugar, a quart of vinegar, a tablespoonful of cloves, three of cinnamon, add the skins and cook for an hour or longer if wanted to be very thick.

Girdles, Belts and Beads.

Girdles, belts and sashes claim their share of importance among minor dress items, says the Designer. There are the wide crush girdles of silk, with immense buckles of Parisian stamp and belts of fancy leather in all colors. Patent leather belts in black, narrow in the back and broad-oling to girdle shape in front, are the latest imported novelty and are considered the height of elegance for shirt waist suits. The corselet belts, fastened with jeweled buttons, are greatly favored. In place of buttons some have black velvet covered buckles, which are immensely effective on light backgrounds.

BELT BUCKLE WITH DROP ENDS.

All silver girdles are in new devices, with medallion backs and twisted ropes, which knot in front and are finished with large tassels. Buckles of wrought silver also have pendent chains and tassels, and a very exclusive style has the watch fob joined to the buckle by link chains. A pretty girdle is formed of chains connecting silver rings, run with ribbon.

The passion for chains, strings of beads, odd amulets and barbaric ornaments is increasing. An antique jewel, a Hindoo love charm, an Egyptian necklace or a bracelet from the south sea islands is highly valued.

New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R

On and after Oct. 18, 1903, trains will run as follows:

Janauschek Got Even.

The following incident, which occurred in Washington some years ago, illustrates Mme. Janauschek's determination of character and minute sense of justice.

She was staying at a hotel whose management was noted for its smallness. She chanced to break a washbowl and when her bill came found that she was charged with an entire toilet set.

"I only broke a washbowl," she said to the manager.

"But it was a portion of the set," was the answer.

She made no further protest. Presently the occupants of rooms looking on an inner court were startled by a crash. It was followed by another. The manager rushed to Janauschek's room, from whose windows chinaware was being thrown.

"What's all this?" he asked.

"It is my toilet set," she answered as she poised the last piece on the window sill. "I purchased it, and I am disposing of it according to my own ideas."

How Yeast Works.

The growth of the yeast plant is so rapid that its individual cells can be seen under the microscope to spring up as buds upon the parent cell and to grow to full size. These presently give off buds themselves that expand in like manner. In the case of the yeast plant the cells remain attached to each other and thus form branches of elongated cells fixed end to end. In other cases the buds drop off, so that the plant never takes any definite shape, but remains as a mass of free cells. If a new cell be formed every minute by each of the cells present you may calculate the number that will be produced in an hour. Thus at the end of the first minute there will be two, in two minutes four, in three minutes eight, and so on. In five minutes there will be thirty-two, in ten minutes the number will have increased to 1,024, and in fifteen minutes there will be 32,768 cells.—Hospital.

Superstitious Hungarian Peasants.

A queer case of superstition which resulted in the loss of two lives is reported from Hungary. A peasant, living in Nosztany died of heart disease while attending market in Kurd. His relatives started to take the body home, but were forcibly prevented from carrying the body through the village of Iharos, whose inhabitants believed that the passage of a strange corpse through their town would bring endless misfortune to it. The procession returned to Kurd, and the next day it set out again, this time with an escort of gendarmes. When it reached Iharos it was met by the whole population of the village, armed with scythes, pitchforks, axes and anything that could be used as a weapon. The gendarmes were forced to fire three volleys before they could get through the place. Two of the villagers were killed and many wounded.

Value of the Kangaroo's Tail.

So important is the kangaroo's tail in his rapid progress that experienced hunters with guns are accustomed to fire at the point where this appendage joins the body, when, the tail being disabled for its office of balancing, the animal is as effectually stopped as if hamstrung. Hit elsewhere, except with a rifle bullet or at point blank range, the kangaroo is pretty likely to get off.

One peculiarity of the kangaroo is that, after being started up, he very rarely swerves from his course, through which peculiarity he is easily "potted" by hunters, who conceal themselves while a man on horseback drives the herd toward them.

He Watched the Cow.

When Sir Stafford Northcote, afterward the Earl of Iddesleigh, was an officer in a yeomanry regiment in Devonshire one of the men who was leading a small force across the country was taking a rather circuitous instead of a straight course.

"Why don't you keep your eye on a given point?" asked his officer.

"I do, sir."

"Well, what point?"

"That old cow, sir," replied the man.

The earl was often known to use this anecdote when political leaders did not go straight.—Illustrated Bits.

The Devil's Knell.

Among the famous bells of Dewsbury, Yorkshire, England, is one known as "Black Tom of Scothill," which was presented to the church in expiation of a murder. "Black Tom" is always rung on Christmas eve. Its solemn tolling as it strikes the first tap at exactly midnight is known all over Yorkshire as the "devil's knell," it being the notion that when Christ was born the devil died.

Too Self Possessed.

Mrs. Manykids—There is one thing about our girls—they are always self possessed.

Papa Manykids (grimly)—Yes; they're too self possessed. I wish they'd get some one else to possess them.

A Just Reward.

"Too bad about Dr. Killem falling into the well, wasn't it?"

"Serves him right. He should have attended to the sick and left the well alone."—Melbourne Australian.

Her Long Dream.

Estelle—Ah! His proposal was just like a dream!

Agnes—Well, you ought to know, dear. You've been dreaming of that proposal for years.

Theory and Practice.

Theory is almost always still busy taking aim long after practice has made the bullseye.

KOREA AND ITS PEOPLE

The Hermit Kingdom as It Appears to Travelers.

LAND WITH AN INERT POPULATION

W. H. Lawson Says Koreans Never Run Unless Driven by the Lash. They Hardly Walk—A Japanese Statesman Describes the Government as Corrupt—A Pen Picture of Seoul, the Capital.

When two dogs fight over a bone, it is somewhat distressing for the bone. Poor, long suffering Korea seems for the second time in ten years cast for the part of bone. And such a bone! Scraped and gnawed by invading armies and by rebels, robbed by a recklessly dishonest government, all spirit and self respect taken from the people by a vicious caste system, mentally impotent and physically degenerate! Here is Mrs. Bishop's description of its principal city and capital, says the Boston Transcript:

"I shrink from describing intramural Seoul. I thought it the foulest city on earth till I saw Peking and its smells the most odious till I encountered those of Shoashing. For a great city and a capital its meanness is indescribable. Etiquette forbids the erection of two story houses, consequently an estimated quarter of a million people are living on 'the ground,' chiefly in labyrinthine alleys, many of them not wide enough for two loaded bullocks to pass; indeed, barely wide enough for a man to pass a loaded bull, and further narrowed by a series of vile holes or green, slimy ditches, which receive the solid and liquid refuse of the houses, their foul and fetid margins being the favorite resort of half naked children, begrimed with dirt, and of big, mangy, blear eyed dogs, which wallow in the slime or blink in the sun."

As to the people, here is Mr. W. H. Lawson's account of their spiritless lethargy: "The Koreans have resigned themselves to their fate. A Korean never runs unless he is driven by the lash; he hardly walks. He crawls along the streets of his city or the paths of his village circuit. If he be struck, he falls down and lies there, waiting to be picked up. In Seoul I constantly rode in rickshaws drawn by Japanese coolies. These boys took a positive delight in cannoning the natives in their walks abroad and would run a shaft into any back that presented itself. In one alley of the city, close to the British legation there, several times did the coolies knock over an old Korean gentleman slowly wending his way to the main street. Every time he got in the way, every time he was knocked down. He said nothing and did nothing, but he was always in the same place and always met with the same treatment. A Korean will saunter along before an electric car (for Seoul now boasts an electric tramway, running out three miles to the late empress' tomb) in exactly the same listless fashion. The conductor rings his bell loud and often, but only at the last moment does he slowly walk a pace or two to one side or the other. To see the Korean workmen digging up the ground is a lesson as to how things should be done. An enormous spade is sunk into the soil by two or three coolies, with an immense expenditure of groans, and then two or three gradually pull it up with ropes, at which they heave like a crew of sailors heaving up an anchor. It naturally follows that each spadeful of earth takes as long to extract as if it were a load of gold reef."

As for the government, a Japanese statesman who has spent years in the country describes it thus:

"There are no tax laws. There are eight districts in Korea presided over by appointed governors. When the central government in Seoul wants money it draws upon the various districts for the required amount. The local authorities collect the money in any way that pleases them. Crops are seized and divided, householders are imprisoned if they fail to deliver on demand, everybody is squeezed and oppressed, and the draft of the Seoul people is honored. The surplus—and it is always large—goes into the pockets of the local agents. Under this system there is no incentive to the farmer to labor and no hope for the artisan if he achieves anything. If a man accumulates a little wealth he lives in a hovel lest he should be suspected and despoiled. As a result there are everywhere lamentable ignorance, destitution and crying discontent. As for corruption, that is boundless and appalling. The poor people themselves, though filled with misery, have, like the eels, become so accustomed to being skinned that they neither know nor care to be relieved. There can be no conception of the hopeless ignorance and wretchedness of Korea. There is no way of telling in Seoul what the receipts and expenditures or resources of the government are. No account is kept. There are no governmental statistics of any kind. When the royal household requires money it sends to the local authorities and demands it, and the money is raised by pillage and force, as mentioned. It is expended without record.

"The accounts of the Korean government are simply like that of the American landlord who wrote in his book at the end of each year, 'All paid in and all paid out.' There is no financial responsibility whatsoever."

Korea is a peninsula of much the same shape and size as Florida, jutting out of eastern Asia. It is the nearest land to Japan, whose islands form a rough crescent inclosing it. On the other hand, it lies between Siberia and the sea, forming what would be a most desirable coast line for the covetous bear. For centuries there was a relation of suzerainty between Korea and China. Japan long disputed this suzerainty and in 1894 proved her contention in the test of arms. The Chinese gateway near Seoul, at which the kings of Korea had for centuries done obeisance to China's ambassador, was torn down and a handsome modern structure erected, named Independence arch. A few miles from Seoul there is a celebrated stone tortoise, one of the several works of art set up in Korea to symbolize Chinese dominion. It was held that so long as this enormous tortoise remained right side up the rule of China in Korea would be undisturbed. As soon as the Mongolians disappeared down the horizon under the active stimulation of Japanese bullets the victors went out and flopped this igneous testudian over like a flapjack. He now lies with his toes turned toward the blue heavens, a humiliated witness of the fact that the Mongolian is doing no visible governmental business in Korea at this writing. And what is more, the Japanese, in order to prevent any misunderstanding as to the significance of this bouleversement, keep a soldier on guard by his side day and night. Thereafter Korea has been nominally independent, but Japanese influence has been constantly gaining dominance in all the subtle ways that could be devised by an ambitious and clever race urgently in need of tributary territory to accommodate the teeming population which overflows Japan's narrow borders.

KOREAN PRINCE ON RUSSIA

Son of Emperor Thinks It Is After the Whole of Asia.

Prince Yee, the second son of the emperor of Korea and who may be the ruler of the "hermit nation" himself one day, recently returned to Delaware, O., to take up his studies after spending a couple of months in Washington, says a Springfield (O.) dispatch to the Washington Post. When interviewed concerning the eastern situation the young prince said in speaking about Russia that he thought that country had its eye on about all of Asia, and nobody knows where she may stop.

"China will rise up some day and stop those Russians," said he. "They have got Manchuria now and will be wanting to go farther south next."

"Will they bother Korea?" was asked.

"I don't know," was the reply. "We think they will go from Manchuria down into the Chinese river valleys, and maybe then the people will rise up and go after the foreign devils. I don't believe that they will bother Korea first."

When asked about the situation providing war is declared the prince said that he did not believe that war would come at this time, but it may later.

"I think Japan will help Korea when the time comes," was the way he expressed it.

A ROYAL MASCOT.

King Edward Sends Greyhound to a Pennsylvania Fire Company.

The Royal Fire company of York, Pa., recently came into the possession of a royal mascot, a fine greyhound from the kennels of King Edward of England.

Some time ago Hiram Faust conceived the idea of writing a request to England's monarch for a greyhound for the company. The request was written and signed by Congressman D. F. Lafean, the president of the company. It was then forwarded to his majesty.

The other day a fine specimen of greyhound arrived at the York express office in a crate that was plastered with labels of the express companies of two nations. The dog was consigned to Congressman Lafean for the Royal Fire company.

Finest Music Palace For Berlin.

The most magnificent music palace in the world is planned for Berlin, says the New York World's foreign correspondent. It is to be opposite the new American church, and the estimated cost is $900,000. Joachim, Richard Strauss and Professor Ochs are at the head of the undertaking. An interesting feature will be the office, where advice will be given students about teachers. On stated days of the week students will have their voices tested gratis. It is the ambition of the founders to make the new palace a "nerve center" of the musical world.

The Japanese and the Bear.

The bear is growling in the east
And waves his mighty paws;
His wide stretched mouth reveals his teeth,
And sharpened are his claws.
He from his northern lair has rushed
Upon his neighbors' lands
In greedy quest of prey and there
In bold defiance stands.

The little brown men in Japan
With tireless vigilance
Keep watch upon the Russian bear
And wait for his advance.
Though well they know his strength and greed,
Stout courage they display
And promptly gird their armor on
To meet him in the fray.

For there's an ancient grudge between
The brownies and the bear—
A feud of jealousy and hate
That moves to do and dare.
The brownies and the bear have mocked
Each other from afar,
And at each other they have glared
In eagerness for war.

The bear has gazed with wistful eyes
Upon new fields of prey,
And he has spread his mighty paws
To bring them 'neath his sway,
But where he went the brownies watched,
Though stealthy his approach,
And boldly rose to bar the way
Where he would dare encroach.

They face each other in the east
Prepared for deadly fray;
The shock of conflict soon may come;
There may be long delay.
But whether it be soon or late
All eyes will center where
Is being waged the fight between
The brownies and the bear.

ABSURD METHODS

said the Romoc man, expatiating on the means many people take to purify their blood. Don't you realize, he continues, that most so-called blood medicines are loaded with deadly poisons? By their use you simply force one poison out and take another just as bad or worse into your system. This is like the Indian whose blanket was too short to cover his feet, so he cut off six inches from the top and sewed it onto the bottom. You accomplish just as much good by the use of deadly mineral poisons as he did. It is different with Romoc. Romoc is Nature's remedy. There is no poison in it. Not a drop of alcohol is in this solution.

CONFERENCE

Of Unitarian Churches at Quincy Today.

Address on "Purity in Government."

Supt. Parlin Also Speaks on Subject of Education.

The annual meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian churches is being held today at the First church. The morning session opened with a large attendance and as representatives of the different churches were constantly arriving the afternoon session will be even larger.

The morning session opened at 10.30, Frank Smith of Dedham presiding.

The secretary, Rev. George M. Bodge of Westwood read the records of the last meeting.

Col. Albert Clark was then introduced and gave an interesting address on "Purity in Government."

In opening he said that there was little corruption in general governments but some in cities. The ambition of men to get offices was one of the causes of corruption. Positions as governor and seats of Congress are purchased by wealthy men. No man is qualified for office if he uses corruptive means to get the place.

There are places for which wealthy men pay from $10,000 to $150,000 to get the nomination. The danger to public from such dishonor is not that the campaign expenses are to be paid from helping themselves. It is the demoralization of election, as voters have come to expect pay for doing their duty. Such practice is destructive to free government. When patriotism has to be bought it is useless. The lavish use of money by candidates is a disgrace. Good government depends upon the people.

He then spoke of the use of the public press. While they expected compensation for service of advertising they would not be newspapers unless they render public service without reward. It is a question whether newspapers should allow themselves to be retained by certain candidates.

This question can be solved by the editor if he will let his readers know what he is doing.

Purity in government is more in danger because leaders of men are on their make.

One of the greatest causes of corruption is the supposed necessity of special legislation. No proper measure needs a lobyist. Unless stopped there will be an increase in the number of grafters and the holding up of measures.

One of the greatest dangers is our caucus system. There is no enlightened discussion but a scramble to get the votes. Our present system puts a premium on corruption and a muzzle on good government.

Party registration for caucuses is destructive of independence. The Luce law prevents and destroys independence and does not provide for independence of views. Such caucuses are equal to an election.

The best caucus reform is to have an election and no caucus. Candidates could be nominated by nomination papers and this would allow an unlimited discussion and freedom of election. It would also save the expense of two campaigns and elect the best men.

Purity in government is in great danger from the neglect of men of education and property to go to the polls. Many schemes of plunder would be averted if these men would do their duty.

We can not have pure government without pure men, and not then unless they do their duty.

At the close of Col. Clark's address Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of the Quincy schools, gave an address on "Education."

A discussion followed and the morning session closed with a devotional meeting.

Official Nominations for State Election

ANOTHER VICTORY.

Quincy High Has a Picnic with Hingham High.

The Quincy High school foot ball team added another victory to its record Tuesday afternoon, when it defeated the eleven from the Hingham High school by a score of 33 to 0.

The Quincy goal line was in danger at no time in the game, and the Hingham boys were able to gain their distance but twice during the 25 minutes of play. A small crowd witnessed the game, owing to the cool weather and the short notice of the game, arrangements having been completed by the Quincy management on Tuesday morning.

Quincy scored the first touchdown after less than two minutes of play. This was quickly followed by four more during the first half of fifteen minutes.

In the second half Quincy purposely took the defensive, but Hingham was unable to gain and consequently punted the ball.

During the second half Ewen replaced Mathaurs at left guard, and did good work. E. Sanders was tried at quarter back during the last five minutes of play.

The line up follows:

QUINCY HIGH.		HINGHAM HIGH.
Prario, l. e.,		r. e., Howard
Lewis, l. t.,	r. t.,	Worcester (Foster)
Mathaurs (Ewen), l. g.		r. g., Scully

FOUR IN FIELD

In Quincy Double Representative District.

Three Candidates for Senator.

No Contests for any of the County Officers.

It will require fifteen crosses at the State election next week if one votes the maximum number of times allowed.

This is three more than last year. This year the voters will not elect a Congressman, but they will elect four county officers instead of one, and will also be asked to vote yes or no on the acceptance of the Luca Act, relative to caucuses.

As last year there are six State officers to be elected, and five parties have made complete nominations, viz: Republican, Democratic, Prohition, Socialist, and Socialist Labor.

The candidates for Governor are:

GOVERNOR. Mark One.

John L. Bates of Boston, Republican.
Thomas F. Brennan of Salem, Socialist Labor.
John C. Chase of Haverhill, Socialist.
Oliver W. Cobb of Easthampton, Prohibition.
William A. Gaston of Boston, Democratic.

For Councillor from this district there are three candidates, including one from Quincy, viz:

COUNCILLOR. Mark One.
SECOND DISTRICT.

Gustave B. Bates of Quincy, Socialist.
Frederick S. Hall of Taunton, Republican.
Augustus Hemmenway of Canton, Democratic.

For Senator from this district there are three candidates, as last year, and representing the same parties. The vote of the city last year was: Brackett, 2,091; Jenney, 949; Packard, 734; and blanks 350. Two of the same men are candidates this year as will be seen:

SENATOR. Mark One.
FIRST NORFOLK DISTRICT.

Albert A. Brackett of Milton, Republican.
William M. Packard of Quincy, Socialist.
Felix Rackemann of Milton, Independent, Dem.

For Representatives, the Quincy voters will not have such a multiplicity of candidates from which to choose as last year. They are requested to "Mark Two," but the Republicans are the only party to nominate two. The Democrats have but one and the Socialists but one, and there are no Independents. Last year there were two Republicans, two Democrats, two Socialists and two Independents and the vote of the city was:

Total vote of city,	4124
Peter T. Fallon, D.,	1272
Richard R. Freeman, R.,	1268
Edward J. Sandberg, R.,	1022
Levi H. Turner, S.,	944
John McKnight, I.,	871
E. F. De Normandie, I.,	781
William J. Collagan, D.,	608
Peter M. Carlson, S.,	481
Blanks,	1001

The vote for the Republican candidate for Governor was 1926; for the Democratic candidate, 1416; and for the Socialist 560.

The candidates for Representatives this year are:

REPRESENTATIVES IN GENERAL COURT. Mark Two.
FIFTH NORFOLK DISTRICT.

Peter T. Fallon of Quincy, Democratic.
Richard R Freeman of Quincy, Republican.
Edward J. Sandberg of Quincy, Republican.
Levi H. Turner of Quincy, Socialist.

Although the Democratic county convention did not endorse James Hewins for County Commissioner, their candidate, Don Gleason Hill, resigned, so that all the county officers are renominated by both Republicans and Democrats. The only opposition is from Socialists.

The acceptance of the Luce Caucus act will require a majority vote, but will not become operative, if accepted until 1904.

—Nine-tenths of the world judge from appearances. It is the clean, well kept town that attracts desirable residents and grows rapidly.

When? Right away. Scott's Emulsion begins to help with the first dose.

THE PAVING ORDER.

Commissioner Knowlton Further Explains Relative to the Work.

In the interview with Commissioner Knowlton in relation to the paving of Willard street, published in Monday's Ledger, it was inadvertantly stated that he had informed the Council before the order was passed that the work could not be done this year.

The Commissioner says that after the order passed, he immediately saw the railway officials in regard to their part of the work. They informed him that it would be impossible for them to do anything this year, as they did not have the rails and could not get them.

Members of the Council from Ward Four began calling upon him to urge that the work be commenced at once, and it was these gentlemen and not the Council as a body he informed that the work could not be done this year.

TODAY'S COURT.

Thomas Phelan was arraigned for drunkenness at Quincy. Case continued until Nov. 12.

Thomas Phelan, Jr., was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Innuendoes are not issues. No issues that stood the test of examination have been presented by the Democrats in the Massachusetts campaign, nor has the innuendo of one of their speakers against Governor Bates in connection with certain private financial transactions had any longer life. It is answered and refuted by Governor Bates' plain statement of what the transaction was and by his demonstration of the animus behind the innuendo. The very man who originally raised this innuendo had to say, last night, on hearing of Governor Bates' statement, that he did not believe that the checks in question were paid for an improper purpose. Such an admission is equivalent to a confession of the failure of innuendo as an issue.—Boston Transcript.

☞The Hartford Post says that "the old notion that the schoolma'am, as a rule, is a weazened, antiquated, artificial, stilted, starchy, and prudish individual no longer goes in Connecticut." Is it possible that the old notion is only just being dispelled in the Nutmeg state? Surely then the teachers must have kept themselves very much in the background. And speaking of Connecticut teachers,—a recent convention disclosed the fact that about a hundred of them work for five dollars or less a week and over two hundred of them for six dollars or less a week. Weazened these might well be pardoned for being. But how well off the statement makes the average Massachusetts teacher seem to be.—New Bedford Standard.

☞Among Democrats there is considerable discussion of the question wheather the triumph of the defeat of Tammany this year would aid the national Democracy in next year's presidential election. Democrats like John D. Crimmins say that New York must have a Tammany mayor in order that a Democratic president may be chosen. Others declare that the Democrats will have a much better chance to gain a president if they can point to a discomfited Tammany, thrashed by Democratic votes. The question, anyhow, is out of place, because national politics should not have the slightest weight in determining the issues of municipal government. Where is the patriotism in refusing to consider a problem of police, schools, public health and clean streets strictly on its own merits?—Springfield Republican.

WONDERFUL DAN PATCH

Smashes Half Mile Pacing Record and Mile Pacing to Wagon

Memphis, Oct. 28.—Dan Patch, within 45 minutes, elapsed time, smashed two world's records in succession on the track of the Memphis Trotting association.

First he went against the world's half-mile pacing record of 57½ seconds, held by Prince Alert, and clipped a second and a half from the record, negotiating the distance in 56 seconds flat. Next he hung out a new world's record for a mile pacing to wagon, making the mile in 1:57 1-4, two seconds better than the time which he made at Lexington, Ky., which stood as the world's record until yesterday afternoon.

The record was made without a wind shield and with the customary runners to pace the harness king. Wind was blowing and it is possible better time might have been made with the prevalence of more satisfactory weather conditions.

Barrett's Protest

Washington, Oct. 28.—Harrison J. Barrett, whose disbarment from practice before the postoffice department for alleged wrongful acts disclosed by the general postal investigation was announced last week, has written a letter to the postmaster general in which he expresses surprise in view of the fact that he has been furnished no specification of charges and has been given no hearing. The letter says he (Barrett) invited a searching investigation of all his acts and was assured a hearing and an opportunity to meet an accusation against him.

Snubbed by Post Officers

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 28.—After covering himself in the east with honors won for rifle shooting, Sergeant Hawkins, colored, of the Twenty-fourth regiment, stationed at Fort Missoula, returned to his home to find himself a hero among the officers of his home post. Hawkins' messmates had prepared for his homecoming a reception and ball, hoping to use the post quarters, but permission was refused by the officers of the post. As a result Hawkins has asked for a transfer.

Smart Young Astronomer

Denver, Oct. 28.—Herbert S. Howe, the 15-year-old son of Professor Howe, instructor in astronomy at Denver university, is said to have discovered at the upper edge of the sun's disc a new group of sun spots as great in magnitude and importance, it is said, as the group discovered by the scientists of the Washington observatory two weeks ago. The boy made his observations with a six-inch telescope.

Historic Palace Bought by France

Rome, Oct. 28.—France has completed the purchase of the famous and historic Farnez palace, which will be used as an embassy. The cost was $600,000 and this sum was paid to the heirs of the two Sicilian branches of the house of Bourbon. The palace, which is one of the finest in the world, was begun for Pope Paul III. It was at one time offered for sale to the United States government.

Passing of a Good Indian

Guthrie, O. T., Oct. 28.—Keokuk, the oldest Indian in the Sac and Fox tribe, died at his home at the Sac and Fox agency, near Prague, aged 85. He was an unusually intelligent Indian and very religious, being a member of the Baptist church. Keokuk, Ia., was named for his father, as was also Keokuk Falls, O. He came to the Sac and Fox agency about 30 years ago.

Dowie Elders Comfort Many

New York, Oct. 28.—The Dowie meeting was largely attended last night and perfect order was maintained. Dowie talked on theocracy, which he predicted would in 10 years sweep the country, meaning that the rule of God would then be supreme. In conclusion he invited those in need of comfort to remain and talk with the elders. Some hundreds stayed.

Fraudulent Naturalization

Providence, Oct. 28.—Hagop Goolgasian, an Armenian, was arraigned before Commissioner Cross on the charge of making false affidavit in the naturalization case of Setrik J. Moonjan. He pleaded guilty and gave bail in the sum of $1000 for his appearance before the circuit court Nov. 16.

May Reach Amicable Settlement

New York, Oct. 28.—E. P. Bryan, general manager of the Manhattan Elevated, said after a meeting with the motormen that he did not expect any difficulty in reaching an amicable settlement and that another conference, at which August Belmont will be present, would be held.

Manitoba Strikers Win

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 28.—Deputy Minister of Labor King announces that the strike involving 1500 men and over 100 contractors is practically settled. He concedes the men's demands for 35 cents an hour. A large majority of the builders have agreed to the same terms.

Jenkins Is Champion Wrestler

Dr. William Everett pays a beautiful tribute to the late Dr. Francis E. Abbot, whose sad death on his wife's grave at Beverly was lately chronicled. Dr. Everett describes him as a man of unrivalled scholarship, a poet, a philosopher and a companion like none other, with a nature where head and heart were moulded of the rarest materials, and whose departure leaves a void never to be filled on earth.—Herald.

Medal Awarded.

Upon recommendation of ex-Councilman Arthur W. Newcomb, the Massachusetts Humane Society has awarded a bronze medal to Thomas Skinner of Quincy Neck, aged 15 years, who rescued from drowning in Bents creek July 25 the young Gavin boy. The brave deed was reported in the Ledger at the time.

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903-1904.

SAGOUNI ASSASSINATION

The Result of Internecine Strife of Armenians

CREDITED TO THE RADICALS

Latest Victim Was President of Revolutionary Society Which Was Opposed to Violence—Assailant of Editor of Armenian Paper Sentenced

London, Oct. 28.—Sagatel Sagouni, president of the Armenian Revolutionary society, was murdered at the doorstep of his lodgings in Nunhead, a suburb of London. The murder presumably was committed by a fellow-Armenian recently from the United States. The assassination had a political motive and was characterized by a boldness to which London has seldom been treated. It created an unusual sensation, since it appears to have been only an incident in a long and bitter vendetta between factions of Armenian revolutionists.

The attempted murder of Peter Kureghian in Boston, the recent killing of an associate of Sagouni in Switzerland and the assassination of the most prominent Armenian in London are so far achievements credited to the Armenian radicals here. It is said that two members of the opposition party have already been killed in Russia, though the London Armenian revolutionary committee denies both knowledge of and responsibility for the crimes.

It is generally expected that Sagouni's death is only the prelude to other chapters in the story of a bitter blood feud. The murderer, who has not yet been apprehended, left in the Lands of the police two clues—a soft felt hat, bearing the name of an American clothing firm, and an automatic pistol of a recent American make.

The murdered man, who was a mining engineer, became wealthy in the Caucasus and devoted his money to the Armenian cause. His society was entirely passive and opposed to violence, and it is thought this attitude inspired the advanced section of the Armenians with the desire for vengeance, the latter claiming that Sagouni's society devoted funds to charity which would have been better applied to violent remedies for the Armenian grievances. Sagouni is said to have moved to England from New York early in 1902.

The hat left by Sagouni's assassin has the name of the vender stamped inside, showing it to have been sold by "The Bell Clothing Co., 132 Columbus avenue, and 31 to 38 Terrynack street." The name of the town is partly erased. The murderer's pistol is an automatic, 10-shot weapon.

The police of the Peckham railway district, who have charge of the investigation into the murder, say that two men were with the assassin at the time of the shooting and that they appeared almost to force the latter to fire. It is said that other persons connected with the Armenian society have requested police protection.

SHOT ARMENIAN EDITOR

Gulesian Sentenced to Not Less Than Nine Years In State Prison

Boston, Oct. 28.—Coincident with the murder in London of Sagatel Sagouni, an Armenian, supposedly by a compatriot who belonged to a rival organization, was the sentencing here of an Armenian named Samuel Gulesian to not more than 12 and not less than nine years in state prison for an offence similar in many ways to the London tragedy.

Gulesian assaulted Peter Kureghian, editor of an Armenian paper, on July 7, last, near the Dudley street station of the Boston Elevated railway. Gulesian and Kureghian were members of rival Armenian societies and the shooting grew out of the enmity which existed between the members of the two organizations. These societies, it is stated, are the outgrowth in this country of political organizations existing in Armenia.

Gulesian is only 19 years old. Up to the time he shot and dangerously wounded Kureghian he had borne an excellent reputation.

When the convicted man was called up for sentence Gulesian's counsel asked that his client be let off with a light sentence. The attorney said that the prisoner's youth ought to mitigate in his favor, and that he had suffered so much from political persecution that his offence, while not justifiable, was not altogether inexplicable. Several witnesses had testified as to the good character of the defendant.

Assistant District Attorney Sughrue said that if ever a crime deserved a maximum sentence this one did. He said that at no time did the public demand protection more than at the present and from persons of Gulesian's nationality. Mr. Sughrue asked that a heavy sentence be imposed.

In sentencing the prisoner Judge Stevens said: "It may very well be that in ordinary life there is nothing criminal in this young man. The crime, no doubt, was of a political nature, but I do not see where anything was to be gained by making the assault. I suppose he thought he was aiding his countrymen. Such things are not tolerated in this country."

Assassin May Have Been In Lowell

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 28.—The managers of the Bell Clothing company, occupying a store 31 to 37 Merrimack street, in this city, think it very likely that they may have sold to an Armenian a hat like the one found as a clue in the London assassination. The company not only has a store in this city, but also a place of business on Columbus avenue, Boston.

In Lowell the concern has a large number of Armenian customers. On the meagre clue furnished by the impression in the inside of the hat, the proprietors could say nothing more positive than that the hat might have been sold by them. All hats sold by the Bell company have been stamped with the name and places of business.

The use of the "k" on the end of the word "Terrynack," taken to mean "Merrimack," is a distinguishing feature of the city of Lowell. Most of the other places on the bank of the Merrimack river omit the "k" in naming corporations or streets, while in Lowell they retain it.

HUNTERS' RIGHTS

Brought Into Question by Owner of Private Estate In Vermont

Burlington, Vt., Oct. 28.—A special to The Free Press from Vergennes says: Fish and Game Warden Preston has returned from his camp at Ripton and reports an incident which he thinks will result in a test case to determine whether a property owner can prevent hunting upon his land during the open deer season, which is the last 10 days in October.

Preston, while in Ripton, camped on the property of Joseph Battell, who is known to hunters as the proprietor of Red Lion inn. Battell lives in Middlebury, but owns an extensive estate which includes a large section of the adjoining towns of Ripton and Hancock. Battell has posted notices on all his property prohibiting the hunting of deer on land owned by him. The game warden, in common with several other hunters, were warned from the estate by men in the employ of Battell. When they protested that the law permitted the hunting of deer in any part of the state during the last 10 days of October they were informed, Preston says, that this did not alter the case so far as Battell's property was concerned. The hunters withdrew, but believe that Battell's claim to the right to exclude hunters from his estate will not be upheld by the courts.

Murder Was Confessed

Providence, Oct. 28.—Coroner Lincoln has filed his report on the death of Peter Ouloosian. The report fixes the blame for the death upon Caspar Nargoshian and Sarkis Nargoshian. Sarkis Nargoshian confessed that he held Ouloosian's hands while the other Armenian choked him to death. He said that his companion, who is still at large, threatened to kill him with a hatchet if he refused to kill Ouloosian. The report will come before the next grand jury.

Doctor Violated Agreement

Salem, Mass., Oct. 28.—Dr. H. R. Miller is forbidden to practice medicine in the city of Lynn, Judge Bell having ordered a permanent injunction against Dr. Miller to issue. Some days ago Dr. F. R. Sanborn of Lynn bought out the practice of Dr. Miller. The latter agreed to leave Lynn and not to follow out the profession again in that city. Later Dr. Miller returned and resumed practice. Dr. Miller must pay the expenses of the court.

Strike of Boston Expressmen

Boston, Oct. 28.—Of the 90 union employes of the Boston Auto Express company only 18 are at work, the remainder of the men having struck. The men who are out are all members of the union. They say that the men at work are not members of any labor organization. The strikers say they will not return to work until the men discharged two weeks ago are reinstated.

The Messenger Boys' Strike

Boston, Oct. 28.—It is claimed by the striking messeiger boys that the females who are employed by the Western Union Telegraph company and the American District Messenger company as strike breakers are deserting their new posts. A mass meeting to protest against the action of the telegraph company in reducing the boys' wages will be held on Friday afternoon.

Elevator Fell Eight Stories

Boston, Oct. 28.—An elevator in a State street building dropped from the eighth floor to the basement and as a result William Nickerson is dead and Giuseppe Minichello is having broken bones attended to at the hospital. Minichello's injuries are not dangerous. The two men were repairing the elevator at the time of the accident.

Wanted Nine-Hour Day

Biddeford, Me., Oct. 28.—Sixty Italians employed upon the extension of the Atlantic Shore line electric road between this city and Kennebunkport quit work and returned to Boston after the contractor had refused their demand for a nine-hour day and $1.50 wage. The places of the strikers were taken by men from this place.

One Blacksmith at Work

Boston, Oct. 28.—At the Allston shops of the Boston and Albany Railroad company the boiler makers struck because the company took back in its employ a union blacksmith who recently struck with other members of his craft. At present there is but one blacksmith in the Allston shops, the one taken back yesterday.

Booming the North Country

Lancaster, N. H., Oct. 28.—Good roads, the preservation of the forest, and the promotion of summer resort interests was the keynote of the several speeches delivered at the banquet last night of the White Mountain Board of Trade. The banquet was attended by representatives of the three northern counties.

Death In Unusual Manner

Great Barrington, Mass., Oct. 28.—Charles Mignery was working in a sawmill when a slab slipped out of position. Mignery stooped to fix it, but the slab slipped from the carrying board and was hurled with terrific force against his forehead, crushing in his skull. He died two hours later.

Gruesome Indeed

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 28.—Ache Gonzalo awoke at his boarding place to make the rather gruesome discovery that he had been sleeping with a corpse. His roommate, Frank Faulkner, aged 53, had committed suicide by taking a quantity of laudanum before retiring.

Burst a Blood Vessel

Athol, Mass., Oct. 28.—Joseph Martin, aged 18, while jumping, burst a blood vessel in his chest and died in a few minutes. A doctor stated that too strenuous exercise after a hearty meal caused the accident.

The tiny hostess is but one year old, and her guests ranged from two months to four years. A pretty and inviting table of dainties was set for the babies. Miss Gurney received many lovely gifts, among them a large silver cup from her grandfather, Thomas Gurney. Miss Mary Hinkley made a birthday cake which was a delight to the childish eyes and a credit to the maker.

DECLARED A FORGERY

Rice Will Bequeathing Estate to Patrick Thrown Out of Court

Albany, Oct. 28.—The court of appeals has placed a final negative upon the attempts of Albert T. Patrick to obtain the vast fortune of the deceased millionaire, W. M. Rice, for whose murder he is under sentence of death in Sing Sing prison. The court handed down a decision affirming that of the lower courts which threw out as a transparent forgery the alleged will of Rice which Patrick urged as superseding that admitted to probate by Surrogate Fitzgerald. The decision by the highest court is made without comment or opinion, an unusual thing in a case of so great importance.

The will of Rice, thus sustained, makes no mention of Patrick, the bulk of the great estate, estimated at $4,000,000 or more, being bequeathed to the proposed "William M. Rice institute for the advancement of literature, science and art," of Houston, Tex. The will presented and urged in this appeal by Patrick left comparatively small bequests to the Rice institute, and the bulk of the estate to Patrick. It bore a date four years later than the one probated, but both the surrogate and the appellate division pronounced it a barefaced forgery. Patrick appealed to the court of appeals on technical grounds and the highest court in the state affirmed the findings of law of the court below. It has no jurisdiction over questions of fact.

Fat Commission Offered Miners

Boston, Oct. 28.—Thomas W. Lawson, one of the large stockholders in the Amalgamated Copper company, has wired to Butte an offer to pay the Miners' union a commission of $250,000 for at once satisfactorily arranging an arbitration of the question of the price to be paid Mr. Heinze for the mining property in that city. Lawson's telegram states that he offered Heinze $3,000,000 for his property, but that the latter held out for $7,000,000, and suggests that the difference between the offering and asking price be left to arbitration in the belief that such action will result in immediate resumption of business.

Going Before Higher Tribunal

Washington, Oct. 28.—The preliminary hearing in the case of Leopold J. Stern, indicted for complicity in postal frauds, has been concluded and Stern was held in $5000 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was furnished and he was released. Judge Scott commented on the failure of Stern to make good his claim that he had written authority for the non-furnishing of straps.

Mortgage For $150,000,000

Newark, Oct. 28.—A general consolidated mortgage for $150,000,000 given by the Lehigh Valley railroad to the Girard Trust company of Philadelphia and covering everything owned by the company has been filed here. It is given to secure an issue of bonds not exceeding the amount stated.

IMPORTANT STEP

To Development of Shipbuilding Industry in New England.

A New York dispatch to the Globe says: President Thomas A. Watson of the Fore River ship and engine company of Quincy, Mass., in an interview Tuesday on the announcement that Rear Admiral Bowles will become president of the company, said:

"As the president and largest stockholder of the company, it has been my desire for a long time to secure the services of Rear Admiral Bowles, as he is undoubtedly the man best fitted by education and practical experience to take charge of our work. His taking the position marks another step of the utmost importance to the development of the shipbuilding industry of New England."

A Washington dispatch says: Naval Constructor H. G. Smith, now on duty in the bureau of construction and repair, will shortly resign in order to accept a position with the Fore River Ship and Engine company, of which Rear Admiral Bowles is to become president.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that this week is Hospital week.

A REPORT BY MAC ARTHUR

Of Dealings Between Japanese Official and an Insurgent Leader Brings Out a Statement From Minister Takahira—Promises Investigation

Washington, Oct. 29.—Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, expresses great surprise at the statement in General MacArthur's telegram of Dec 28, 1900, published yesterday for the first time, that evidence had been discovered of dealings between an official of the Japanese consulate at Manila and the insurgent leader Trias.

"This is the first intimation of such an occurrence that has reached me," said Mr. Takahira, "and while General MacArthur's statement was undoubtedly made in good faith, I cannot but think that he was mistaken. But if, contrary to this belief, the Japanese official in question did really act as charged, he was not only guilty of gross dereliction of duty but of a wholly unauthorized departure from the friendly attitude invariably maintained by the Japanese government and its officials since the inauguration of diplomatic relations with the United States.

"Marquis Yamagata, a warm friend of the United States, was premier, and it is ridiculous to suppose that he or any one associated with him in the government would have sanctioned such a treacherous breach of friendship as that attributed to this petty official in Manila.

"One cause for doubting the reliability of General MacArthur's sources of information in this case, is the nature of the concessions alleged to have been sought from the insurgents on behalf of Japan. Even superficial knowledge of our situation should have been sufficient to show that they were useless to us, for we have all the coaling stations that we need, and the railway enterprises on foot in our country, including Formosa, give full occupation for all the energy and capital we have to expend in that direction. So far as freedom to trade is concerned, we have always known that we would receive that from the United States and the gratifying growth of our commerce with the islands, contemporaneous with American occupation, convinces us that we were correct in that anticipation, while it fully satisfies every ambition and desire we have entertained regarding the Philippines.

"I have spoken frankly on this subject," Mr. Takahira added, "because of the high source whence the report came. Doubtless my government for the same reason will deem the matter worthy of official investigation, not, be it distinctly understood, because it would consider it worth while to take notice of any statement of that kind regarding its own attitude, but because it will certainly desire to discover whether even the least responsible among its officials could have been guilty of such an egregious error."

Arrests In Bechtel Murder Case

Allentown, Pa., Oct. 29.—With David Weisenberg under $500 bail and with Thomas Bechtel, her brother, and Alfred Eckstein, her accredited lover, locked up, the police are resting in their work on the Mabel H. Bechtel murder case until the coroner's jury meets. The mystery is still practically unsolved except that indications point to a family row in which Eckstein may have figured.

World's Fair Laborers Strike

St. Louis, Oct. 29.—Eight hundred laborers, members of the Laborers' Protective union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, have quit work at the World's fair. The men claim the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company has not complied with an agreement regarding the employment of non-union laborers.

Forced Confession Illegal

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 29.—John H. Dey, aged 13, was, at the request of the state attorney, found not guilty of the charge of killing his stepmother by giving her strychnine mixed with salts. The court ruled out the alleged confession of the boy on the ground that it was secured by coercion.

Higher Duty on Silk Ribbons

New York, Oct. 29.—Under a decision of the board of classification of the United States general appraisers silk ribbons are to be classed for duty as "trimming," subject to a duty of 60 percent ad valorem and not as "manufactures of silk," on which the duty is 50 percent.

Mob's Terrible Mistake

Jennings, Fla., Oct. 29.—While attempting to secure her husband a mob of men shot to death Jennie McCall, a negro woman, last night. The mob surrounded McCall's house and thinking he was inside fired a volley into the house, instantly killing the woman.

It is understood that a shelter platform is to be built on the west side of the railroad track at the Quincy depot for use of the expressmen.

COLLEGE FAIR.

College Colors Used to Decorate the Sales Booths.

The two days "College Fair" at the Universalist vestry opened Wednesday evening with a good attendance. It will continue this afternoon and evening.

The sales tables which were arranged about the vestry looked very attractive and were well patronized. Each table represented some well known college, and was trimmed with crepe paper of the college colors.

The first table on the right was Yale, and was devoted to the sale of handkerchiefs. This was in charge of Miss Georgie Hobart and Miss Mildred Willett.

Tufts college came next and was known as a Remembrance Table; the articles offered for sale having been given by former members of the society. This was in charge of Mrs. H. A. Lombard, Mrs. Richard Newcomb and Mrs. E. E. Blake.

Pennsylvania was next in order, and china was what was offered for sale. This was in charge of Mrs. Adolph W. Osgood and Miss Annie Hobart.

Burdett college was the last on the right side, and from this table refreshments were served during the entire evening. Mrs. Elisha Hobart, Mrs. C. N. Osgood and Mrs. Peter Gomez were the ladies in charge.

Amherst was the first table on the left of the entrance, and there winter vegetables were sold by Charles Hobart and Frank Osgood.

Princeton came next, and there soda and confectionery were served. Merton Phelan looked after the soda end and Mrs. Flora Dunn and Mrs. Merton Phelan the confectionery.

Harvard with its crimson decorations was the last in the line, and useful and fancy articles in great variety were offered for sale. Those in charge were: Mrs. E. J. Holton, Mrs. Charles Veazie, and Mrs. Frank Stoddard.

Near the head of the room was a booth decorated with the colors of the University of Vermont and the Woodward Institute. It was called the fishing well and was in charge of Miss Bertha Newcomb and Miss Martha Holton.

The variety table while prettily decorated did not represent any particular college. It was in charge of Miss Susan Bradbury, Miss Mabel Gragg and Mrs. Mertie Badger.

The ice cream department was presided over by Willard S. Osgood.

Basket Ball Tonight.

Basket ball is fast becoming a popular winter sport, but up to this year it has been impossible to enjoy it without a trip to West Quincy. This year Prof. Baker of the Coliseum has devoted Thursday evenings to this sport. All it needs to ensure some snappy games is support of the public. A game has been arranged for tonight between the Quincys and Central A. A. of Milton. Both teams are well matched and will put up a strong game. The game will be called at 8 o'clock.

THE CONFERENCE

Annual Election of Officers—Two Questions Discussed.

The attendance at the afternoon session of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian churches at the First church on Wednesday was considerable larger than at the morning session.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock by a praise service, conducted by Rev. Ellery C. Butler. This was followed by the election of officers which resulted as follows:

President, George Wigglesworth of Milton.

Vice Presidents, Rev. Roberick Stebbins and Charles F. Hall of Milton.

Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. George M. Bodge of Westwood.

Directors for three years, Mrs. Henry A. Belcher of Randolph and Rev. W. H. Savage of Hyde Park.

Director for one year, Rev. B. F. McDaniel of Dorchester.

At 2.30 there were addresses upon the question "How can the church reach boys" by Rev. Peter H. Goldsmith, D. D., of Salem, while the question "How can the church reach men." was handled by Rev. W. H. Alexander. This was followed by a discussion. Adjournment was reached at 4 o'clock.

Wollaston vs. Hingham.

The Wollaston foot ball team will play a postponed game with Hingham on Saturday at Merrymount park. Wolaston' line up will include: Ferguson, Fowler or Jones, Tabb, Linnell, Holmes, Barry, Gearwar, Taylor (Capt.), Osgood, Miller or Kolson, Fowler or Peterson.

Loss to Government.

There is a very general regret expressed at the retirement of Rear Admiral Bowles from the post of chief constructor of the navy. His successor, Constructor Copps, takes occasion to observe that it is deplorable that outside firms are able to offer such attractions that an officer of Admiral Bowles' long service finds himself virtually compelled to accept them.—Herald.

Good Afternoon

An increased plurality in Quincy for Gov. Bates is predicted.

Dowie's abuse seems tame to New Yorkers who attend the political meetings during the municipal campaign.

President Roosevelt is going home to Oyster Bay to vote. The territorial delegate from Hawaii will not follow this good example.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Governor Bates deserves the undivided support of the people of this state for standing between them and the insanity of a legislsture which would have saddled them with a miscellaneous assortment of unnecessary burdens and fool measures.—Fall River Herald.

☞It is reported that attempts will be made to secure an amendment of the automobile law at the next session of the legislature. If any attempt is made to amend the law so as to permit higher rates of speed on highways of the state, it will unquestionably fail, as it ought to. Massachusetts is not nearly as strict as some of the states which have laws making the life of an automobilist a burden.—Banker & Tradesman.

☞Young authors aspiring to climb the heights, find it hard to get a foothold; but once they get the recognition they desire, their work good, bad and indifferent finds "takers." It may sound like heresy, but the best work appearing in the best magazines today comes, generally speaking, from the pens of "the unknown."—Four-Track News for November.

☞There has been a great deal said of late questioning the right of a labor organization to interfere with industry by forcing the shutting down of an enterprise by its decree of a strike, the argument being along the line of the scriptural declaration that no man liveth to himself. A similar line of thought is suggested by the decree of Henry H. Rogers, issued in New York, Friday, by which the entire plant of the amalgamated corporation in Montana is shut down, throwing out of employment some 15,000 men indefinitely, and all for the apparent purpose of creating such a sentiment in Montana as will bring about the overthrow of a justice who has rendered a decision unfavorable to these interests.—Haverhill Gazette.

—The Berlin society for the protection of animals, addressed the question, "How did you like it?" to the guests who participated in the horseflesh banquet which it gave recently in Berlin. Over 300 replies have come in, and all make a strong chorus of praise.

—Mrs. J. Emmons Derby of Main street, South Weymouth, was fatally burned at her home on Tuesday and died a few hours later. Her clothing took fire from the stove.

VOTES OF 1902.

Mayor Bryant Carried Three Wards at Caucuses and Three at Election.

Mayor Bryant's plurality at the last Municipal election was 232 votes. It will be remembered that he carried Wards One, Five and Six by 623 plurality, and lost Wards Two, Three and Four by 391 plurality. His plurality in Ward Five alone was 399.

The vote was as follows:

Total cast	4263
Majority	2132
C. M. Bryant had	2053
George H. Wilson had	1821
W. T. Richards had	283
Blanks	106

The total vote of 4262 at the City election was 139 in excess of the State election of the month before, when 4124 votes were cast; and Mayor Bryant's vote was 127 in excess of that given to Hon. John L. Bates, the Republican candidate for Governor.

At the Republican City caucuses, which came the day after the State election last year, many Democrats must have voted, as the two candidates received over 2700 votes.

Mr. Bryant received 1580 votes, and Elisha Packard 1157. Mr Bryant carried Wards Four, Five and Six, while Mr. Packard carried Wards One, Two and Three.

The figures at the Republican City caucuses last year, and at the City Election last year are given below, and will be handy for reference:

Canada as Granary of England

London, Oct. 29.—Chief Secretary for Ireland Wyndham, speaking at Dover last night, said that unless England was prepared to lose her prestige she could not afford to see Canada dominated by American capital. With fiscal reform as proposed by Mr. Chamberlain, said Wyndham, Canada could become the granary of Great Britain. He strongly urged the linking of Canada directly with the mother country.

The Stabbing of Galitzin

QUINCY MUSIC HALL.

The location is the best of any hall in the city. The street cars pass the door with a turn out right in front of the Hall.

The floor is of selected maple laid with the greatest care, and is kept in perfect condition, being covered with canvas when not used for dancing.

The ventilation—a most important consideration—is such as to keep the air pure with even a crowded hall and without causing any drafts.

The Hall is lighted by electricity, brilliantly and pleasantly, and with a switchboard arranged so that all desired effects can be obtained in the Hall proper or on the stage. Gas is used as an auxiliary light.

The heating is direct—indirect, ample, and giving the most healthful results.

The Stage has been designed with care, and is furnished with a particularly generous supply of attractive and appropriate scenery.

In case of fire there are pails of water and chemical fire extinguishers throughout the Hall. There is an asbestos fire curtain by which the Stage can be instantly cut off from the Hall proper. There are nine (9) doors opening from the Hall and five (5) separate exits.

As a whole, Quincy Music Hall has been carefully planned to meet the requirements of those who wish a large and really first class Hall.

The Management will be glad to book dates now for the season of 1903-1904.

LIEUT.-GOV. GUILD

Not Fully in Touch with State House Procedure.

The criticism by Col. W. A. Gaston of the action of W. D. Hawley, clerk in the department of State Auditor Turner, and the latter's assistant, in receiving pay as a clerk of the legislative Ways and Means Committee, in addition to his regular salary, despite the statute that "No person shall at the same time receive more than one salary from the Commonwealth," has had a telling effect upon the public mind.

Lieutenant-Governor Guild in a recent speech declared that the extra payment of $700 to Clerk Hawley for clerical services, was for work performed by Mr. Hawley at his home evenings and that there was no interference with his regular services as an employe of the auditor's office. The assertion shows a surprising lack of information of the ordinary and every-day happenings at the State House. It is well known to hundreds of people that during the sessions of the Legislature it is Mr. Hawley's custom to attend meetings of the Ways and Means Committee, the public hearings as well as the executive sessions.

This service is performed by Mr. Hawley and a considerable part of it, at any rate, in open daylight at the State House, in the presence of hundreds of witnesses. If Mr. Guild had ever served in the Legislature, or had given closer attention to legislative affairs, he would not have been guilty of this weak and foolish explanation, for no fact stands out with greater distinctness at the State House than that Mr. Hawley is the guide of the Ways and Means Committee. Indeed, it has long been suspected by many, and the charge has even been made in Legislative debates, that he is the Ways and Means Committee. Doing the work at his home in the evening! That is the richest thing that has been said in the campaign. It is the first time that Mr. Hawley has been accused of hiding his light under a bushel.

Mr. Hawley receives a salary of $2,500 per year, as per page 189 of the auditor's report. Page 179 of the same auditor's report contains an item of $700 for clerical assistance rendered to the Committee of Ways and Means. The name of recipient is not mentioned. We are informed by the auditor's office that this $700 was paid to Mr. Hawley, who has been in the habit of receiving this compensation for his service from the Ways and Means Committee for several years.

If Mr. Hawley is entitled to a compensation exceeding $2,500 for all his services rendered the Commonwealth, his salary should be increased and it should be made to appear upon the official books of the State just what amount he receives. The fact that he receives one salary as assistant to the auditor and another salary or compensation for clerical assistance rendered to one of the committees of the Legislature is clearly illegal.

Cast your vote for Col. W. A. Gaston for governor!

CRANE FOR CHAIRMAN

When Hanna Leaves Republican National Committee

SENATOR IN POOR HEALTH

Opinion That Ex-Governor Would Not Refuse to Serve, Though Disinclined to Accept Responsibility—Heath Will Leave In a Hurry

Washington, Oct. 29.—While the president has not yet been formally notified by Senator Hanna that he cannot manage another campaign as chairman of the Republican national committee, Mr. Hanna's friends have expressed this opinion to the president with sufficient frequency and emphasis to make it clear that Mr. Hanna intends to retire from the national chairmanship either at the December meeting, which will be called to select the time and place for the national convention, or at the first meeting of the new committee to be chosen by that convention. The latter is usually the occasion when a new national chairman is named, after the presidential nomination has been made, when presumably the candidate himself can have something to say in this selection. If Mr. Hanna's successor were chosen at an earlier date, it would be an equivalent to an acknowledgement that Roosevelt was as good as renominated already. Mr. Hanna's health will not permit his undergoing the arduous labors of another campaign in this position.

The president favors ex-Governor Crane of Massachusetts, in case Mr. Hanna cannot be persuaded to remain, as chairman for the coming campaign, but has not yet been asured that Mr. Crane is willing to serve. The prevailing opinion here, however, is that while disinclined to accept such a responsibility Mr. Crane would not absolutely refuse it when the time came.

Perry S. Heath, the present secretary of the Republican national committee and former first assistant postmaster general, is likely to retire in a hurry, and with a blackened reputation, when the results of the postoffice inquiry become known. His relation to postal frauds has been misunderstood. It has been assumed that he was merely guilty of laxity in those good-natured ways so well known to professional politicians of the spoils type. He always avowed his belief that public offices should be the spoils of the party in power, and presumably government contracts. But the information has leaked out that his own skirts are not clear.

Several of the leading spirits in the Republican national committee which meets here Dec. 9 to select a time and place for holding the next national convention, favor the selection of New York city for that purpose. It is argued that New York may be a close state in case the Democrats make a conservative nomination and that the presence of such a gathering would do much to awaken interest in the success of the Republican ticket. If the great New York financiers, for example, could be induced to occupy boxes in Madison Square Garden it would indicate that the Republican party was still possessed of something of its customary strength in the money centres of the country. New York never wants a convention badly, although it could probably take care of one the best of any city in the country, because of the abundance of its hotel facilities. The Democrats will not select their convention city until after the Republicans have done so.

The chief fear of Republicans concerning next year's campaign is that they will have a hard time to get enough money. Mr. Roosevelt is not especially strong with the great commercial interests, and particularly would this be the case should the Democrats nominate some man whose natural alliances are with the capitalistic side of things. There is not much in national politics now to give money for. Few manufacturing concerns are looking for any higher tariff schedules and they feel that they can rely on the heavy Republican majority in the senate to prevent any effective reduction of the present rates.

Anarchist Turner Held Without Bail

New York, Oct. 29.—Judge Lacombe, in the United States circuit court, remanded without bail John Turner, the English anarchist, whose deportation has been ordered by the government. Defendant's counsel said that anarchy was not a crime, but a religion, and that the deportation of his client was prohibited by the bill of rights.

Old Enemies In Show Syndicate

Joahnnesburg, Oct. 29.—The Boers in South Africa and their late enemies, the English residents, have formed a syndicate to exploit a spectacular military display at the St. Louis exposition next year. The plan as outlined is to show many of the picturesque features of the late war.

Wreck of Gloucester Fisherman

Halifax, Oct. 29.—A dispatch from Alberton, P. E. I., says that the Gloucester schooner Martha A. Bradley is ashore on the bar near New London, P. E. I. The crew has abandoned the vessel, which is full of water, and will be a total loss.

Thermometer Away Below Zero

Plattsburg, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The thermometer registers 5 degrees below zero at Lake Placid and at other Adirondack points even lower temperatures are reported. There is fairly good sleighing at Lake Placid.

SPEAKERS HOWLED DOWN

Former Socialists Conducted a Meeting at Boston Under Difficulties

Boston, Oct. 29.—Faneuil hall had a small-sized riot within its walls last night, when a few hundred individuals, believed to be identified with the Socialist party, broke up a meeting called for the purpose of denouncing Socialist principles. Mrs. Martha M. Avery and David Goldstein, both of whom were at one time prominent Socialists but who have recently turned their energies against their former associates, were the speakers, but the opportunities for speaking were few. At every stage of the proceedings the speakers were interrupted, hooted and hissed, and the lie was frequently passed.

The disturbance was not confined wholly to those who objected to the sentiments expressed from the platform. Practically the entire audience participated in the disorder, the supporters of Mrs. Avery and Goldstein resenting in violent language the jeers of their opponents. Several women were in the audience and most of them fled from the hall as soon as the uproar began. In a few instances blows were exchanged.

The meeting adjourned before the speakers had finished. The uproar was so great that they could not make themselves heard.

What Kureghian Says

Boston, Oct. 29.—Editor Kureghian of Young Armenia says that he has evidence that the murder of Sagouni, the Armenian leader in London, was the first of a series of crimes planned by the new Hunstchagist party. He says that he will lay this evidence before Assistant United States District Attorney Sughrue. The editor further says that there are in Boston 15 Armenians known as terrorists, with a similar band of 20 in Chicago. Their purpose, he says, is to remove all obstructions which they consider to be in the way of the success of their party. In consequence of the publication of articles in his paper condemning these terrorists for an alleged misappropriation of funds raised to help Armenia, Kureghian says that he was threatened with death, constantly shadowed and finally shot.

CITY BREVITIES.

Democratic nomination papers for the municipal caucuses will be opened tonight.

Storm doors are being put in place for the winter, and screen doors are being laid away.

The junior Christian Endeavor Society of Bethany church will hold a social this evening.

The weekly whist tournaments at the Granite City club will commence next Wednesday evening.

The rumor about City Square Wednesday that the Dr. French estate in City Square had been sold to a syndicate is denied.

Wednesday was a busy day for Rev. Dr. Todd; he united in marriage three couples, and his daughter was one of the brides.

Next week will be a busy one politically. Besides the State election, caucuses of the Republicans, Democrats and Socialists will be held.

Items of local news and communications are daily thrown into the waste basket because the writers are unknown, and therefore the authenticity.

Although Henry H. Faxon was not able to be present at the fair in Quincy and Wollaston this week he sent tickets which he agreed to redeem for cash.

The teachers and officers of Bethany Sunday School were entertained at the chapel Tuesday evening with a lunch. Plans for the winter's work were discussed and reports received.

There was a surprise party for Brockton High school at Dedham Wednesday when the foot ball eleven was shut out by Dedham High, 30 to 0. The Dedham team will play Quincy High at Merrymount park on election day.

Admiral Bowles.

Now comes the Washington correspondent of the Post, who says "Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, chief constructor of the navy, was forced out of the service by Senator Hale, who is the chairman of the Senate naval committee.

It is known that they disagreed as to the size of the battleships which were authorized by the last Congress.

Insistent demands by Senator Hale, which followed the ship trust exposures are said to have settled the issue and Bowles was asked to give up his commission.

No Strike on L Road

New York, Oct. 29.—The threatened strike of the motormen in the employ of the Manhattan division of the Interborough Rapid Transit company was averted, it being announced that "the matter has been settled to the satisfaction of all concerned."

Port Jervis, N. Y., Oct. 29.—George Jagger was arrested at his home in Laytons, N. J., charged with the murder of Mrs. Victor Bevans and the attempted assassination of her husband. The crime was committed on Oct. 16. Jagger was taken to Newton and placed in jail.

Buffalo, Oct. 29.—The executors and trustees named in the will of Edwin L. Burdick will appeal from the decision of Surrogate Marcus, giving the widow of the murdered man custody of the state left to the children.

STATE VS. CITY.

Salaries of Massachusetts Less Than City of Boston.

Lieutenant Governor Guild riddled the Democratic claims of extravagance and high salaries in State government in his speech at Brookline Wednesday evening, when he compared them with the salaries of Democratic Boston. There are no good reasons why officials of the city of Boston should receive more than officials of the State of Massachusetts.

Gen Guild finds that the Governor receives $8,000 a year. The mayor of Boston receives $10,000 a year.

The treasurer of the commonwealth receives $5,000 a year. The treasurer of the city of Boston receives annually in that capacity $6,000. He also receives annually $800 as county treasurer, $700 as treas- urer of the sinking fund and $1500 as custodian of the teachers' retirement fund. His total annual receipts, four salaries to one man, are $9,000.

LIEUT. GOV. GUILD.

The secretary of the commonwealth receives $3,500. The clerk of the city of Boston receives $5,000 annually.

The auditor of the commonwealth receives $3,500. The auditor of the city of Boston annually receives $6,000 in that capacity, $800 as county auditor, and $700 as secretary of the sinking fund department, three salaries to one man, a total of $7,500.

The attorney-general of the commonwealth receives an annual salary of $5,000. The corporation counsel of Boston receives $7,500 and with him is associated a city solicitor also at a salary of $7,500 a year.

The Yellowstone Park.

A very interesting and instructive lecture on the Yellowstone National Park was given by Hon. A. K. Peck at Bethany chapel before a large audience in the Brotherhood course Wednesday evening.

With the assistance of Dr. A. H. Gilson and A. H. Taber 100 excellent views, many of them colored, were shown by the stereopticon. Mr. Peck made the tour of this grand national reservation on a bicycle, and his audience felt that they were with him on the tour. The canyons, cascades, waterfalls, geysers, pools and highways were described and several stories were introduced to give variety and interest. But it is said that no lecturer or pictures can do credit to the Yellowstone National park, which even excels the Alps and the Rhine.

MYSTERIOUS POISONING

Eleven Men In a State Hospital Had Narrow Escape From Death

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 29.—The authorities and attendants at the state hospital at Tewksbury were given something of a scare when 11 of the male inmates simultaneously developed signs of poisoning. A hurried examination convinced Superintendent Nichols that the men were suffering from the effects of belladonna which they had gotten hold of in some unaccountable manner and taken. Dr. Nichols at once summoned other physicians and prompt measures were taken to relieve the sufferers. The superintendent, assisted by three doctors of this city, worked for some time before they were satisfied that the men were out of danger and the hospital people are congratulating themselves that the origin of the trouble was discovered in time to avert fatal results. Dr. Nichols says it is not known how the poison was received by the men or under what circumstances it had been taken. He supposed, judging from their condition when it attracted the attention of the attendants, that the poison must have been taken some time during the night.

Nine-Year-Old's Long Journey

Boston, Oct. 29.—Douglass Gossett, 9 years old, is travelling alone from Los Angeles, Cal., to his old home in England. Today he was put on board the steamship Romaine, bound for Liverpool. There his grandmother will meet him, and with her he is going to live. The boy came over to Los Angeles from England a year ago. Last Wednesday he was taken down to the railroad station by his stepfather and put on board an excursion train bound for Boston. The youngster was given a letter to the purser of the steamer Romaine. The little fellow says he is enjoying every bit of his journey.

Easy Try to Fire

Leominster, Mass., Oct. 29.—Four women received serious burns and bruises while 60 employes narrowly escaped with their lives from a fire that quickly gutted the factory of the Columbia Comb company, manufacturers of celluloid goods. Mrs. Hannah S. Hall, aged 73, was caught by the flames while seeking an exit, and before she could be rescued was terribly burned. Her condition is critical. The others injured will recover. The material loss is estimated at $12,000.

Governor Interested In Milk War

Boston, Oct. 29.—The interest of Governor Bates was awakened in the milk situation when he was called upon by Master Ladd of the State Grange, Secretary Ellsworth of the state board of agriculture and President Bullard of the Milk Producers' union. The conference was earnest and Mr. Bates offered some suggestions which, it is stated, are not yet ready for the public. The conference closed with an assurance of the governor's interest in the matter.

Daughters Contest Will

Boston, Oct. 29.—For a different disposition of an estate of $800,000 the four daughters of the late Patrick McAleer are opposing the probating of their father's will. The four daughters object to the allowance of his will upon the ground that he was not of sound mind and was unduly influenced. A hearing begun before Judge Grant is unfinished.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that this week is Hospital week.

HOXIE AGAIN

Wins the Mile Race for Challenge Cup.

First Class Win Tug of War.

Basket Ball One of the Interesting Events.

The annual Founder's Day fall games of the Adams Academy Athletic Association were held this morning on the Academy grounds. There were not as many spectators this year as in some of the past years. This was probably due in a great measure to the youthfulness of the participants.

The boys however entered into the events with a spirit and push that will eventually develope them into good athletes.

G. Sullivan was high man in the running races, as he captured all of the races in which he entered.

One of the events in which unusual interest is taken, is the mile run for the challenge cup. In order to hold the cup the winner must capture three consecutive races. This has not been accomplished as yet. Hoxie, however, who won this year's race is in line for it, for he has won twice. He also succeeded this year in lowering his record from over seven minutes to 6 minutes 9 1-2 seconds.

One of the interesting events was the basket ball game. One ten minute half was played but neither side scored. Fouls were called on Eagan and P. Sullivan, and fouls were missed by Harkins and White. Burton umpired.

The judges were: George E. Adams, J. D. Kent, Jr., J. A. Kay, T. L. Bramhall, R. F. Weston and John O. Hall, Jr.

70-yards dash,—First heat won by G. Sullivan, time 8 seconds; second heat won by Harkins, time 9 1-2 seconds; final heat, won by G. Sullivan, time 10 seconds.

Potato race,—won by Colman; time 28 seconds.

Running Broad Jump,—won by Moran; distance 15 feet 3 inches.

220-yard dash,—won by G. Sullivan, time 30 seconds.

Foot ball kick, — won by Hoxie; distance 135 feet.

Obstacle race,—won by Gavin; time 2 minutes 35 seconds.

Quarter-mile race for challenge cup, won by G. Sullivan; time 1 minute 12 seconds.

Mile run for the Challenge cup, won by Hoxie; time 6 minutes 9 1-2 seconds.

Three legged race,—First heat won by Hoxie and Kay; second heat won by Blake and Thomas; final heat won by Blake and Thomas.

Hop, step and jump,—won by G. Sullivan; distance 35 feet, 2 inches.

Relay race, won by first class, time 3 minutes, 21 seconds.

Tug of War,—first pull, between the second and third classes, won by second class; distance 5 feet 2 inches. Second pull, between first and fourth classes, won by first class; distance 2 feet 1 inch. Final pull, between the first and second classes, won by first class; distance 5 feet 3 inches.

BASKET BALL.

The Quincys Defeated by the Central A. A. Team.

An exceptionally good game of basket ball was played Thursday night at Baker's Colseum between the Quincys and Central A. A. of Milton.

The Milton team was short one man, and Dawson of the Quincys consented to play with them. Although playing against his own team he played the game for what it was worth and scored three of the visitors goals from the floor. He is a little fellow and looked out of place among the larger players.

Parker refereed the first half of the game, and Burton the second half.

In the first half, Dawson scored two goals for the Centrals, and Collins one for Quincys. Fouls were called on J. Mahoney and Orr, and were missed by Geary and Sangster.

In the second half C. Mahoney scored two goals from the floor and two from fouls, Dawson and Morrell one each for the Centrals. For Quincys, goals from the floor were scored by Garey, Jones and Parker. Mullen of the Quincys had three fouls called upon him and Dawson of the Centrals one. The Centrals scored on two of the fouls but Quincy missed.

Two twenty minute halves were played. The score was 14 to 8 in favor of the Centrals.

The summary:

QUINCYS.		CENTRAL A. A.
Orr—Jones	lf.	J. Mahoney—Morrell
Collins	rf.	Dawson
Geary	Centre	C. Mahoney
Martell—Parker	lb.	Sangster
Mullen	rb.	Gardner

Goals from floor—Dawson (3), C. Mahoney (2), Collins, Morrill, Gsrey, Jones, Parker. Goals on fouls—C. Mahoney 2). Fouls called—Mullen, 3; Mahoney, Orr, Dawson. Fouls missed—C. Mahoney 2, Geary 2, Sangster. Referees—Parker, Burton.

College Fair a Success.

There was a good attendance Thursday evening, the closing night of the College fair at the Universalist church, and the success financially was assured. Henry H. Faxon was not present but Mr. Ward, the pastor, had his pockets full of Faxon tickets, and every lady present was given a ticket usually marked "good for twenty cents," while tickets of a smaller denomination were given the children.

The entertainment consisted of vocal and instrumental music and readings.

GEO. H. WILSON

Will Again Be the Candidate for Mayor.

Made a Good Run Last Year.

But Five in the Field for Councilmen-at-Large.

Nomination papers for candidates to be voted for at the Democratic caucuses next week were opened Thursday evening. Walter B. Wilson, the secretary of the Democratic City Committee refused to give the Ledger a copy of the nominations filed, but from other sources it was learned that the following nominations were made for Mayor, Councilmen at large, and School Committee at large.

GEORGE H. WILSON.

For Mayor,—George H. Wilson.

For School Committee at large for three years,—Henry C. Hallowell.

For Councilmen at large,—
Ward Two, Edward H. Perry.
Ward Three, James Dean.
Ward Four, Thomas F. Mannix.
Ward Five, Clinton Jones.
Ward Six, Robert J. Clifford.

As the nominations for Councilmen from Wards were not complete in some of the wards the City Committee extended the time for the filing of nominations for Ward Councilmen.

Study Club Entertain.

The first of a series of monthly entertainments to be given by the Study Club, was held on Thursday evening in the Parish House of Christ church, about 50 of the members and their friends being present. The program included the following talent: piano solo by Mr. Falls, flute solo by Mr. Arthur Vining of the Braintree Orchestral club, soprano solo by Miss Fannie Ellsworth, and reading by Miss Frances Dike. All the selections were very well rendered and were highly appreciated by the club. A social hour and refreshments followed the entertainment, after which dancing was enjoyed. The entire occasion was very successful and greatly enjoyed by all present. The committee on arrangements were: Miss Sadie Thomas, Mr. Myron Turner and Mr. Wendell Luce.

Trial of Cruiser Tacoma.

The sheathed cruiser Tacoma was given a contractor's trial at San Francisco this week, and excelled all the goverment's requirements including that of 12 1-2 knots. The Tacoma is the first of the large type vessels built on this coast to be sheathed with copper. This sheathing, it is expected, will do away with frequent docking.

TODAY'S COURT.

John Devine was fined $3 for drunkenness at Randolph.

Joseph Legguallec was arraigned upon two complaints; one for failing to display registered number on his automobile, and the other for driving his machine at a limit exceeding eight miles in the Metrepolitan Park at Milton. He was fined $15 on complaint for exceeding speed limit. The other complaint was placed on file.

St. Chrysostom's Sale.

The annual sale of St. Chrysostom's parish, which was held Thursday afternoon and evening, called out an unusually large number. The excellent suppers have such a reputation that the waiters were kept busy serving the crowds from 5.30 to 8 o'clock.

Following is the list of heads of committees for the sale: Tickets and posters, Mrs. Jewell; Aprons, Mrs. Stanley; Bric-a-brac, Mrs. Page; Embroidery and Fancy work, Mrs. Simmons; Household, Mrs. Godfrey; Children's Amusements, Mrs. Davidson; Candy, Mrs. Albee and Guild of St. Perpetua; Ice Cream, Mrs. McLaughlin; Lemonade and flowers, Mrs. James; Supper, Miss Mills.

Sprague's orchestra furnished enjoyable music during the evening. Mr. Snyder was surprised with a present of a beautiful sofa pillow purchased by the Guild. On one side of a crimson background was embroidered the names of all the members of the choir and on the other side a number of photographic illustrations of Camp Snyder. The sale was in every sense a financial success.

A large company of more than a hundred sat down to the excellent dinner given by the gentlemen of the Wollaston Methodist church society Thursday evening. After the dinner speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Waterhouse, a former pastor, Dr. Horace M. Willard, and by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Heath. A letter of regret from a former pastor, Rev. Jesse Wagner was read. Music was furnished by an orchestra.

—Election day is coming, when the unsuccessful candidate will be like this earth we live on—flattened at the polls.

ATLANTIC BRIDGE.

Decree from Railroad Commissioners as to Height.

The Railroad Commissioners issued a decree Thursday which consented to the construction of a bridge over the tracks of the Old Colony railroad at Hancock street, near Atlantic station, in Quincy, as widened under decree of the Norfolk county commissioners, at a clear height of not less than 15.5 feet above the tracks of the railroad.

The decree resulted from a conference held on Wednesday at which the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. was represented by Mr. Farmer, the city of Quincy by City Solicitor Blackmur, and the Old Colony street railway by counsel.

The new bridge is said to have been held up by the street railway who have objected to the construction proposed.

The decree will give a headway of eleven inches more than at present, and will be accomplished by depressing the tracks slightly.

Nothing is said to stand in the way now for the appointment of a commission which shall decide by whom the bridge shall be built, and later to apportion the cost.

The headway of 15 feet 5 inches is not as much as usually required, but in view of the low land, and the amount of travel over the bridge the Commissioners consented to the decree.

Considerable interest is being taken in the auxiliary fair to be held at the Star Grocery by the Quincy Hospital Aid Association because of the very generous offer of Messrs. Hayward.

POINTS TO HIS GUILT

Brother of Mabel Bechtel Commits Suicide In His Cell

STORY OF POLICE OFFICIALS

Shows That the Murder of Young Woman Occurred In Her Own Home —Family Knew All the Circumstances In Connection With Crime

Allentown, Pa., Oct. 30.—Thomas Bechtel, who was held awaiting investigation of the murder of his sister, Mabel Bechtel, at their home a few days ago, committed suicide last evening in his cell in the Central police station. The police consider this act as a practical acknowledgment of Bechtel's guilt. Bechtel was in cell No. 2, on the right side of the corridor.

Several relatives and friends were admitted to see him yesterday afternoon. About 4 o'clock he called across the corridor to Alfred Eckstein, Miss Bechtel's lover, who is also held pending the coroner's inquest:

"Hello, Al, are you there?"

"Yes," answered Eckstein.

Bechtel responded: "I wish you were here with me now that we might die together."

These were the last words heard from Bechtel. A short time later Eckstein called Bechtel and got no answer, but he thought he heard an unusual gurgle. House Sergeant Roth had been through the cells only a short time before.

At a quarter past 5 o'clock he entered the corridor and called both men. Getting no answer from Bechtel he looked into his cell and was appalled to see a stream of blood running over the cell floor. Bechtel had laid himself on the bench in his cell and cut his throat with a knife. He was dead when found. The knife lay near him on the floor.

How he got the knife is not known. He was carefully searched when placed in the cell and no weapon was found.

Bechtel was a single man and 30 years old. He was a laborer, doing odd jobs about the town and the country. He was a hard drinker and when intoxicated was easily angered and prone to fight. He was of powerful physique and possessed great courage. At various times he was a substitute and an extra policeman.

The funeral of the murdered girl took place yesterday afternoon, the services being held at her late home. A steady stream of people entered the house and filed past the casket containing the body until the services began at 2 o'clock.

Gathered about the bier of the murdered girl was the aged mother, who is a physical wreck, and who is almost constantly in hysterics; her three daughters and three of the four sons. The absent one was Thomas. He had been refused permission to attend the funeral on the advice of the district attorney. When he was told that he would not be permitted to leave his cell to take a parting farewell of his dead sister his fury was intense. The family also felt bitter.

The suicide of Thomas Bechtel has been followed by the police officials telling the story of the murder of Miss Bechtel as gathered by them. It starts with last Thursday, when Eckstein accompanied Miss Bechtel to Philadelphia. He left her there and returned home. Weisenberg, whose company was preferred by Miss Bechtel, but was strongly opposed by her family, met her in Philadelphia and accompanied her to Allentown, leaving there Sunday at 4 p. m. and reaching here four hours later. They went to a certain place together, where they remained until midnight.

Thomas Bechtel heard of this and being strenuously opposed to Weisenberg he upbraided his siter in her room upon her return home. He struck her a powerful blow on the cheek, causing her to fall heavily against a bureau, dead. Members of the family held a council and decided upon the story made public on Tuesday and upon the disposition of the body and clothing as found. Charles Bechtel's slater's hatchet was used in striking a blow on the head of the dead girl to give semblance of the assault.

This happened immediately after midnight. The body was concealed in the house until Monday night, when it was placed in the area way, where it was found Tuesday morning. Eckstein knew nothing of the murder, the police say.

Bryan Ordered Off Steps

Toledo, Oct. 30.—William J. Bryan was last night ordered off the steps of the Toledo postoffice by the watchman in charge of the building. Two thousand people had gathered and Bryan was about to open the meeting when he was informed that he would have to go down on the curb. The crowd followed Bryan and his escort to a new stand on a corner.

NOT A POLITICIAN

Miners' President Talks to Followers at "Mitchell Day" Celebration

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 30.—"John Mitchell day," the anniversary of the settlement of the great coal strike in 1901, was celebrated by 50,000 miners in the Lackawanna and Wyoming regions yesterday. The miners paraded through the streets of the city with John Mitchell and Mayor O'Connell riding in a carriage at the head of the parade.

In a speech at the mass meeting which followed the parade, Mr. Mitchell referred to statements made that he was ambitious in a political way and took occasion to say that he could not be induced to accept any political office. His only ambition, he said, was to further the trades union movement.

His speech in the main was a practical talk to the mine workers, urging them to loyally maintain their union that they might be prepared to act collectively when the present three-year agreement expires and a new one has to be made. If they do not maintain the union, he said, they will suffer a reduction in wages. The goal in which the miners should aspire, he said, was an agreement granting the eight-hour workday and recognition of the union.

Mrs. Emma L. Watson, also indicted, is charged with being jointly concerned with the others in the alleged plot to defraud.

NURSING MOTHERS

"A richer milk than milk" is good food for nursing mothers. Scott's Emulsion is the rich cream of cod liver oil, and contains ten times as much cream as milk does.

The nursing mother must eat with the purpose of producing good, nourishing milk for her baby. A little Scott's Emulsion is often a very wise addition to her daily diet. If through nervousness or weakness her milk is a failure, Scott's Emulsion will help make it a success.

The baby gets the benefit, too, when the mother takes Scott's Emulsion. The same remedy brings new strength and nourishment to both.

The People Like to be Fooled

Said the Great Showman, Barnum.

BUT DO YOU?

The average family pays State, County and City Taxes, $5.00-$10.00; United States, Tariff Taxes, $13.00; Protected Interests, Tariff Taxes, $95.00. You tax yourself for the trusts $100 a year. Ask us and we'll tell you how.

State Tax,—1902, Governor Crane, $1,500,000; 1903, Governor Bates, $2,500,000.

"The manufacturers and the trusts get the protection and the profits of the tariff—the former gets the husks and the bumbug."—Hon. Ben Butterworth, May 14, 1890.

The net profits of the protected steel trust last year were $133,000,000, or $8 per family. Every good American points with pride to this trust.

All the protected trusts which fatten under the Dingley tariff, while selling goods cheaper to foreigners than to Americans, are with the Republican party. It is a party of trusts, for trusts, and by trusts. Hurrah for the G.O.P.!

A tariff on goods may protect the makers of goods; it cannot protect labor. 3,000 immigrants a day are reaching our shores, all with labor to sell.

If protection makes wages high, why are wages higher in free-trade England than in any protected country of Europe?

The workingman sells his labor in the cheapest, and buys his goods in the dearest, market. Cause, tariff on goods, but not on labor.

Charles M. Schwab, president of the Steel Trust, says that it costs $12 a ton to make steel rails here and $19 a ton to make them in England. Why, then, the tariff duty of $7.84 a ton steel rails?

Some Republicans talk about good trusts, and bad trusts, but fail to mention which are the good trusts.

"Words are good when backed up by deeds, and only so."—Pres. Roosevelt.

Then why does he not dare to prosecute the Coal, Tobacco, Steel, and other lawbreaking trusts?

"The duty of 15 per cent. on hides, put on by the Dingley bill in 1897, has entailed a tax upon the country amounting to not less than $2,000,000 annually, has added from 5 to 8 per cent. to the cost of every American-made pair of boots and shoes, and has made it just that much harder to compete in foreign markets."—Hon. Wm. B. Rice, of Rice & Hutchins.

"We are dividing more and more the manufacturers of this country between two classes, almost every profitable manufacture being engrossed, so far as the capital and the management is concerned, by some one single aggregation acting together without competition, without rivalry, without check,"—Hon. George F. Hoar, April 29, 1899.

The protected billion-dollar Steel Trust taxes the average family $5 a year. You pay your share. It figures in your bills for rent, fuel, groceries, and hardware.

Jim Dumps never will be Sunny Jim
Until tariff trusts stop robbing him.

The mother of all trusts is the customs tariff bill. . . . It is the government, through its tariff laws, which plunders the people; and the trusts, etc., are merely the machinery for doing it."—Henry O. Havemeyer, president of the Sugar Trust, June 14, 1899.

The "All-Wool" Tariff Suit—Cotton, 40 per cent.; Shoddy, 30 per cent.; Carpet, 20 per cent; Real Wool, 10 per cent.

No wonder you shiver!

"Yes, men are on the free list. They cost us not even freight. We promote free trade in men, and it is the only free trade I am prepared to promote."—Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, protectionist leader in Congress in 1872.

"Why not remove the tariff on shoes? It cannot injure the weakest member of the trade. On the contrary it will tend to broaden your markets and increase your opportunities."—Hon. Charles H. Jones.

The Borax Trust charges us 7 3-4 cents for borax which it sells to foreigners at 2 1-2 cents per pound. The duty is 5 cents. The foreigners get the cheap borax; who gets the "protection?"

The Democratic party is pledged to remedy evils caused by Republican rule. Vote for Col. W. A. Gaston for governor.

TEACHERS ARE NEEDED

To Carry Out Our School Plans In the Philippines

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

To Be Given Up For the Present—Only Men 20 to 40 Years Old Wanted—Flattering Openings Promised—No More Travelling Expense Tricks

Washington, Oct. 30.—The first casting of the civil service net for the Philippine school teachers has failed to produce a sufficient supply. The commission will try again. Nov. 27 has been set as the date for the examination. That of Oct. 19 and 20 from which it was expected that a good supply of pedagogues would be derived, will not answer the purpose. If everybody who took the examination should pass there would be hardly enough to fil the vacancies, which number 150, and such competitive tests always invite a certain number of applicants who have only the wildest idea of what is required. Inquiries came from about 500 persons, but less than a third of that number presented themselves on examination day. The new examinations may be held in as many as 1000 different places in the United States where the commission has boards as the reasonable convenience of those who desire to make the trial requires. Only men between 20 and 40 years of age are wanted. It proved a venturesome experiment to take women out to the Philippines as teachers, although some of them have been remarkably successful. The task of finding places where they could live in suitable conditions was such that the bureau of education will for the present call for no more

The great trouble with the first consignment of teachers who went out there was their inclination to abandon their positions after too short an experience. It is hoped now that with a better understanding of conditions and responsibilities on the part of applicants there will be fewer desertions from the ranks. The records as tabulated in the war department, of the teachers who separated themselves from the service before they had been in the islands long furnishes some interesting reading, even though a somewhat pathetic story. "Ill health" is assigned as a cause for resignation with monotonous regularity.

The salaries, although they seem small in the more thickly settled parts of the United States where teaching as a profession is viewed with something of its deserved importance, are much larger than generally prevail throughout the United States. The intention has been to make them about double the American home salary for corresponding work. One-sixth of those now appointed will get $1200 at the start, one-half of them $1000 and the remaining third $900. The assignments of the successful applicants will depend upon the degree of experience and the standing in the examination. They will all be eligible to promotions after they get there to positions carrying salaries as large as $2500 a year, which is the compensation of division superintendents.

When the small compensation of rural teachers of the south and west is taken into account, it becomes almost a mystery that these places are in effect allowed to go a-begging. In Pennsylvania today the salaries of male teachers range from $35 to $50 a month. In Maryland, just outside the city limits of Washington, men teachers in middle life supplement their income by acting as carriage drivers for overland passengers to the Great Falls of the Potomac, at the week ends when school does not keep, or after school hours in the afternoon. To such persons the scale of Philippine salaries must seem very lavish.

The government has been tricked somewhat by teachers in the matter of travelling expenses. People have become pedagogues for the sake of being moved 10,000 miles at somebody else's expense. A plan has been devised for making the applicant pay his way out, to be reimbursed at the end of two years of satisfactory service. This might require too much capital for some applicants, and so a loan system has been adopted. The government will, if necessary, advance the candidate his traveling expenses, deducting 1 percent thereof from each month's salary, until it is paid, the whole amount to be returned regularly at the end of two years. That is the period for which applicants are supposed to accept their positions. Half salary begins with the date of embarkation and full salary on the date of arrival in the islands.

The teachers who stay there three years or more will be given free transportation to return as far as San Francisco. Medical attendance is furnished to teachers in Manila without cost, and they are eligible to the civil hospital in that city at a charge of $1 a day for board, nursing and medical attendance. They will doubtless find it cheaper to live at the hospital than anywhere else in the city. This, too, is a felicitous arrangement. The commission's circular relates that the conditions of living in the islands are improving and the cost of living decreasing.

Chippewa Indians Restive

Washington, Oct. 30.—Captain Mercer, the officer mentioned in the dispatch from Fergus Falls, Minn., as subject to charges for alleged misconduct as agent of the Chippewa Indians, has informed the war department that the Indians are very much agitated and that troops may be necessary.

DOOR REMAINS OPEN

Manchurian Status Unchanged by Russian Occupation of Mukden

Washington, Oct. 30.—Diplomats here say that the cable from St. Petersburg telling of Russia's reoccupation of Mukden indicates an agreement between Russia and Japan by which the former is to have free swing in Manchuria so far as Japan is concerned.

Kagora Takahira, the Japanese minister, said last night that he had read the cablegram with deep interest, but was still without official confirmation of the information contained therein. The minister seemed to be more hopeful of a satisfactory conclusion of the Tokio negotiations, but said positively that he had not been advised that any agreement had been reached. Mr. Takahira thought it possible that the reoccupation of Mukden was necessitated by a movement of Russian troops and that the occupation would not be for long.

European diplomats say that the reports of a tripartite understanding between Russia, Germany and Japan for the management of affairs in the far east are of far-reaching international significance, but it is declared no official news has been received by them on the subject.

No Surprise to Cassini

Paris, Oct. 30.—Count Cassini, the Rusian ambassador to the United States, who is now in Paris, was not surprised to hear that the Russian troops had re-entered Mukden, in view of the conditions there. He said that the experience of the Russian authorities was that so soon as they surrender a district to the Chinese the latter are unable to preserve order, disturbances occur and foreign interests are menaced. The ambassador added that the return of the Russian troops did not affect the status of Mukden as an open port, in accordance with the treaty between the United States and China.

May Throw Over 100,00 Out of Work

New York, Oct. 30.—The threat of a national strike by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers to force recognition of local No. 2 by the Iron league and Employers' association culminated at a meeting held in this city in a resolution being passed ordering a strike all over the country, to go into effect Saturday in all cities where members of the Iron league of the Building Trades Employers' association have contracts. The international executive committee estimates that 10,000 ironworkers will be directly affected. This would mean the throwing out of work of from 100,000 to 150,000 workmen in other trades.

Mrs Booth-Tucker Killed

Kansas City, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Emma Booth-Tucker, consul in America of the Salvation Army, wife of Commander Booth-Tucker, and second daughter of William Booth, founder of the army, died at Marceline, Mo., from injuries received in a Santa Fe train wreck. Colonel Holland, in charge of the Salvation Army colony at Amity, Col., also lost his life. Two other passengers were dangerously injured, and 13 suffered minor hurts.

Was a Soldiers' Comforter

New York, Oct. 30.—Mrs. E. C. Laurence is dead at her home at Scotch Plains, N. J. In the Civil war she lived in the south and ran the blockade of the James river in Virginia on two occasions, coming north and returning with medicine for the sick and wounded soldiers of the south. She was a welcome visitor at Andersonville, where she assisted in caring for the Union soldiers as well as those of the Confederacy.

Investigation In Progress

Washington, Oct. 30.—A preliminary report has been received at the navy department from officers in charge at Indian Head on the explosion there a few days ago. The opinion is expressed that the accident was due to a super-sensitive primer. A board is making an investigation. A coroner's jury has exonerated the officers in charge.

The specific crime for which Gravelle will be tried will be extortion

NEWS IN BRIEF

Plans for a negro industrial and educational exposition to be held some time between June and September, 1904, were inaugurated at a meeting of prominent colored citizens from various cities of Ohio.

John C. Parker, aged 50, committed suicide at Lowell, Mass. Ill health is believed to have been the cause for the act.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, has purchased a lot and building at Milford, N. H., and begun the work of constructing a chapel.

While engaged in shifting cars at Manchester, N. H., William J. St. Claire, a brakeman, fell under the wheels and had both legs cut off. He died a few minutes later.

How a Fortune Was Saved

[Original.]

When I had left college and was looking about for some means of livelihood my eye fell on an advertisement of a man who wanted a secretary. I called at the address, a handsome house inclosed in spacious grounds, and found a man who had been born a gentleman, but without much education. I was engaged and met in his house a publisher to whom I proposed a venture which was successful and led up to a fortune. When I resigned my secretaryship I was speaking to my employer of the chance, as I called it, which had led me to him and consequently to prosperity.

"Chance!" he exclaimed. "That was no chance. The world is full of such chances as that. Rather call it the result of a perfectly rational act—my advertisement. If you want to hear the story of a fortune secured by chance I will tell you one for myself.

"When I was a boy I was inclined to be wayward. Instead of being satisfied to remain at school I ran away and went to sea. I had enough of salt water in one voyage and would have returned to my father had I not been too proud. I entered the service of a manufacturer of paper who did a very extensive business. There I remained ten years, but having an inherited dislike for business—my ancestors got rich by holding land—I never was promoted beyond the position of salesman. Finally I was discharged.

"I made up my mind to go home and see what had become of my father. My mother had died at my birth, and I was the only child. Therefore at my father's death the property would all come to me unless, disgusted with my action in running away, he should leave it elsewhere. On reaching home I found that he had died about two years before and left the property to his housekeeper, Mrs. Higgins. I knew the woman, for she had been in the family from the time of my birth, and it was her ill treatment of me that had largely influenced me to run away from home.

"I visited the family lawyer, Mr. Jones, and endeavored to learn if my father had spoken to him of me and his intentions regarding me. He told me that shortly before his death my father had mentioned the matter of a will and said to him that he would make no will on account of my absence, relying on the law to settle the matter in accordance with subsequent events, including my possible return. My father died in June, 1895, and no will was produced till eighteen months later. Meanwhile I had been hunted for and not found. In December, 1896, Mrs. Higgins produced the will, which, she declared, she had found among other papers in my father's cabinet. It was of the simplest form, stating that he left all his property, real and personal, to Mrs. Martha Higgins, widow, in consideration of her kind care and treatment of him for many years. I asked the lawyer if there was no way of breaking the will, and he said there was none unless I could prove that Mrs. Higgins had used undue influence over the testator or that he was of unsound mind. I knew that my own obstinacy was inherited from my father, and not even Mrs. Higgins was likely to have influenced him. As to his being of unsound mind, all his affairs had been attended to in a manner indicating the healthiest mental condition till a few days before his death. The will was dated four months before he was taken with his last illness.

"It didn't take me long to discover that there was no possibility of my recovering my property through ordinary legal process. I was forced to give the matter up and go hunting for a position whereby to live. I found a small job sufficient to keep me alive, but my mind remained upon my fortune and Mrs. Higgins. Finally a desire came to me to see with my own eyes the will by which my father had disinherited me. Being ignorant of such matters, I went to Mr. Jones, who took me to the courthouse, where the document was filed, and it was produced by an officer of the court. It was written on half a sheet of note paper and witnessed by two persons of whom I had no knowledge. I was permitted to take it in my hands and, yielding to a habit acquired in the paper business, rubbed it with my thumb and forefinger, then held it up to the light.

"'Mr. Jones,' I said, 'that paper was manufactured by the Bagstock Paper company, with which I was connected, and sold by me when it first came from the mills last September. I remember the fact because it was about the sale of some of this paper that I got into trouble and lost my position.'

"'How could that have been?' he replied. 'This is February, 1897. Last September was in 1896. The will is dated May, 1895.'

"'It doesn't make any difference to me when the will was dated. That paper was not manufactured and sold till last September.'

"'Then the will is a forgery, and you are heir at law to the property.'

"This is virtually the end of my story, for I had little trouble in getting a confession from Mrs. Higgins and the witnesses who were in league with her on condition that I would not prosecute any of them, and the property became mine.

"No, there is chance, and there is what may appear to be chance. There is no chance in advertising. It is a legitimate business act. My advertising for a secretary led to certain results. But everything leads to something. The only question is as to the importance of the results."

A BOMBSHELL

A New One Fired by the Only H. H. Faxon.

This Time He is Out Against the Sewer.

He Says it is a Scheme that will Breed Salary Grabbers.

Henry Faxon, the only and irrepressible, is on the war path again threatening destruction to everybody in general and the sewer system in particular. Several years ago Henry offered to build a sewer at his own expense. This sewer was to drain the centre of the city, but the Selectmen refused to allow him to dig up the streets and ever since then he has been a little jeatlous of other sewer schemes.

Henry has not been seen much for the last two weeks. He excused himself on the plea of sickness, but now it is evident that he has been employing his time in preparing one of his famous literary concoctions which are known to the world as "bombshells." The present manifesto makes interesting reading for anbody who is not affected by it.

It reads as follows:

In view of the fact that it would be the height of folly for one who pays an assessed tax on $450,000 to oppose any enterprise that would advance the health, morals, or business interests of his city, I invite your attention to some of my reasons against the construction of a sewer in Quincy at the present time.

1. Statistics show that the health of our people is excellent.
2. I believe that the project can be delayed five years without endangering the physical welfare of the community.
3. For several years only a small number would connect their premises with the sewer.
4. Digging up the highways would leave them in a deplorable condition to be repaired at great expense.
5. The burdens of the already overtaxed property holders would be increased.
6. The debt of the city would be augmented and we would not receive corresponding benefits.
7. The immense debt and interest account consequent upon such an undertaking would deter those who desire to make Quincy their permanent abode.
8. When cheap tenement houses are connected with the sewer, the water closets will be the receptacles of ashes, swill and other refuse.
9. The consumption of water will increase one-third in winter, as tenants will let the water run all the time to prevent the pipes from freezing.
10. The scheme will necessitate a commission of political salary grabbers who thrive at the expense of honest citizens.
11. The city will be petitioned annually to construct additional mains in remote localities, where thousands of dollars will have to be expended with only perplexities as a return upon the investment.
12. Quincy covers so large an area of territory that the outlay for mains will be much greater than in other municipalities.

THE PRINCIPAL BENEFITS OF A SEWERAGE SYSTEM.

1. Will be derived by those speculators who buy clay bottom lands and lay out the same for house lots.
2. Will serve to enrich plumbers who are an expensive nuisance to any community.

CONSPICUOUS NONSENSE.

To advocate building the sewer at the present time because material is cheap and money can be borrowed at a low rate of interest.

To mortgage individual property of the city for long terms upon the plea that future generations will pay the debt.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, February 12, 1897.

TIMELY HINT.

Report of the Brockton Sewerage Commissioners May be of Value.

The Sewerage Commissioners of Brockton have just made their annual report for the past year and their remarks may be read with profit by citizens of Quincy just at the present time.

Among other things, the Commissioners say:

"For the year ending Nov. 30, the amount received from sewer rents was $6516.37 and 298 connections have contributed to give this amount. Of these 196 have contributed the entire year, 7 for three-quarters, 53 for two-quarters and 42 for one-quarter. Of these connections 145 are dwelling houses, 79 blocks or business buildings, 25 factories, 14 apartment houses, 8 hotels, 4 stables, 4 clubs and hall buildings, 3 bakeries, 2 fire stations, 2 churches, 1 police station, 1 city hall, 1 electric light plant, 1 laundry, 7 miscellaneous buildings.

The average amount paid for sewer rent on dwelling houses is about $9.75 per year. Seventy per cent. of the dwelling houses connected pay $8 per year. In making the above average rental of $9.75 large apartment and tenement houses are not included; it, however, does include a large number of the two-tenement houses which are so common in this city.

"Ostensibly the reason for constructing the sewerage system was to abolish the noxious cesspool, relieve the soil of the polluting liquid, and to effect a permanent healthful condition of the city; but it would appear now that the real reason was to reduce the cost to a few of the property holders and landlords of the city of removing the contents of a cesspool and privy vaults, for were this not so, why is not the board of health more zealous in its efforts to secure house connections with the sewers?

"Up to the present time 390 connections only have been made in a territory where it is possible to have nearly 10 times this number. This board has never recommended compulsory connections without discrimination, but it does believe that there are hundreds of houses in the district, the owners of which are amply able to connect and contribute their share toward maintaining the sewerage system and healthfulness of the city. If the city council was correct in its convictions that a sewerage system was necessary for the city then one of the two things follows—either that the whole city is being taxed to support a public work which is a luxury to the general public and a real benefit to the few, or the sewerage system was a necessity to the thickly settled parts of the city, and those who have vested in them authority to bring about connections with the sewers are most dilatory in the discharge of their duty.

"We would call attention to the fact that sewer rentals will reduce themselves in time to a very small charge, but the fewer connections made the longer that time is postponed, and the more the people in the outer districts will have to pay toward the support of the sewerage system."

FINANCIAL BLUNDER.

Mr. Faxon Says the Appropriation of Money for the Sewer is the Greatest Ever Made.

The greatest financial blunder ever made by any of our City Councils was the act of the present body in appropriating $120,000 toward building a sewer.

To vote away such a large sum of money before having a definite plan of assessment, will cause great dissatisfaction and complications without number.

If the completion of the sewer would end the real estate owners' troubles, I would hail it with joy, but perplexities and incalculable expense will have then just begun.

The maintenance of a sewer system, and keeping the connections in good condition, will usher in a score of lazy plumbers and so-called helpers at $4 and $2 per day respectively, a class who are not satisfied unless they make one hundred per cent. profit on the materials they use.

For example, faucets which cost $5.75 per dozen, are charged at the rate of $18 per dozen, and solder which can be purchased at from 11 to 15 cents per pound is reckoned at 20 or 25 cents per pound by these men. Moreover, some plumbers' consciences are so elastic as to allow them to render bills for 20 per cent. more stock than is actually used.

I should be derelict in my duty if I did not enter a protest against this proposed reckless expenditure of the people's money, entailing, as it does, a perpetual burden upon many who can ill afford to bear this strain upon their scanty finances.

It has been said that many are deterred from making Quincy their place of residence simply because there is no system of sewerage here. This objection would be of slight consideration to these people in comparison to the certainty of a tax rate of at least $20 per $1000 on excessive valuations.

The President of our City Council is skilful in driving bobtailed horses harnessed in a dude wagon, but in undertaking to enlighten the public as to the merits of a sewer in connection with real estate in Quincy, his knowledge is of a doubtful nature.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, May 7, 1897.

RAPS THE PLUMBERS.

Mr. Faxon Gives Some Pertinent Suggestions Regarding Sewer Connections.

Those of our citizens who are thinking of connecting their houses with the sewer, should first carefully read the plumbing ordinance, and have the plumbing on their premises thoroughly examined by the inspector with a view of ascertaining how much of the original system must be removed. To those whose buildings have been piped for more than five years, I would say, do not enter the sewer, until you have a proper estimate of the cost.

It will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for the owners of tenement houses to keep them up to the standard of perfection required by the ordinance which regulates plumbing. To do this frequent inspections are imperative. Right here let me say a word regarding the qualifications of an inspector. He should first of all be a man of unquestioned honesty, as he would be given opportunities of using his position to reward his political friends or to secure liberal commissions for himself from favored plumbers. In either event the interests of the taxpayer would suffer. Moreover for obvious reasons he should be neither directly nor indirectly engaged in the business.

For the protection of property owners from flimsy and light weight stock and exorbitant charges a provision should be inserted in the ordinances requiring the inspector to examine all material used in the plumbing and in connections with sewer. Plumbers' patrons should also be relieved of the imposition to which they have long been subjected, of being obliged to pay $2 per day for a green apprentice and $4 for a journeyman plumber when much of the time of the latter is employed in correcting the blunders of his incompetent assistant.

At my age I prefer to risk my life by exposure to the dreaded sewer gas rather than suffer the plumbers' deadly bills and their attendant perplexities.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, Jan. 30, 1899.

GETTING RECKLESS.

H. H. Faxon Says Sidewalk Order Should Be Defeated.

If the City Council has any regard for the welfare of the already over-burdened taxpayers, the order which was offered at the last meeting to appropriate $25,000 for sidewalks will be promptly defeated.

The money appropriated for this purpose the past year has been recklessly expended, many good sidewalks having been torn up and rebuilt in localities where there is very little travel.

For two years the Council has been sidewalk crazy and I hope that the costly epidemic will not spread over any more territory.

I never knew a more flagrant case of extravagant expenditure of the people's money than that of replacing an already good sidewalk with one of concrete, in front of an estate of mine on Washington street, at a cost of $495.98, one-half of which I am called upon to pay.

It is an outrage that abuttors are not notified before their estates are invaded by officials who know nothing about the value of money, especially when it does not come out of their own pockets.

Since Quincy has become a city there has been a disposition to increase the debt to the greatest possible limit, by borrowing on long loans. While the present generation will have died before these monies become due, the debts will have to be assumed by our chldren who will not be pleased with such legacies.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, Feb. 11, 1899.

ONLY TEMPORARY.

A Worse Predicament for City Later.

Says H. H. Faxon of Refund Movement.

Will Not However Impair the Credit of the City.

The issue of refunding the city debt is one that commands the closest attention of the taxpayers. Nearly everybody dislikes to part with money, but there is a class that dislikes to pay their own debts. They are continually borrowing money and when payment is absolutely demanded they borrow of a third party and thus cancel the debt to the first one. This is just the system now advocated by our city authorities and they are moving heaven and earth to get the City Council to give its sanction to the scheme.

If we must have all these luxuries when the burden of taxation is hard to bear, then we must surely pay for our excessive living at a future time. It is idle to say that "coming generations will have the benefit of these improvements and they should help pay the cost." Allowing this to be logic, I can see, that if the desire for improvements increases during the next ten years as it has in the past decade and the same habit of putting off the payment day is encouraged, the coming generations will struggle under a load hard to bear.

"It is easy enough to borrow money, and hard to pay it back," is evidently the motto of some of our officials, and they would carry their own business methods into the conduct of the city affairs.

THE CREDIT OF THE CITY would not be impaired if the city refunds all of its debt, for money lenders know that the security is gilt edged, but how different it would be with a private individual. Let any business man try the experiment and he will soon be convinced that the policy is bad. Then what is bad for the individual is also bad for the city.

Let us profit by the errors of the past and take up our burdens, for each succeeding generation will have its own wishes to carry out and will not thank us any more for the financial responsibilities we impose upon them than we today thank those who heaped this pile of debt on our shoulders.

It was because cities showed a lack of knowing how to live within their means, that the Legislature passed a law limiting the amount to be raised for current expenses each year, and besides this gave a limit to indebtedness. This law provides that all within ten years of their contraction. All of the debt falling due this year has been contracted in accordance with that statute and there is no reason why any part of it should be borrowed over again in this pernicious system of refunding.

Of the $81,000 falling due this year it is asked of the City Council that they authorize the borrowing again of $40,000 of it, quite one-half. You may talk of your low rate of borrowing money for the city, but I fail to see the benefit to be derived by paying twice for the same improvement. As the loans were for the most part originally at 4 per cent. if they are refunded, we shall pay at least 3 per cent. thus the loans have called for 7 per cent. interest, or in all over $15,000. The brokers are willing to loan the city money, for it is business for them. The only way to have a low tax rate is to stop spending money. So long as we spend we must have and by putting off payment we add to, rather than diminish the chance of a high rate.

The claim, that if we refund this amount, extending it over the next ten years, we shall reduce the tax rate, is refuted by the fact that already schemes are advanced in the council which will more than offset any gain that can be made by deferring payment of our debt falling due this year.

Two new schoolhouses will have to be built, at a cost of some $80,000, a boulevard to Hough's Neck under contemplation, an innumerable number of street improvements to be made, grade crossings to be abolished, a police station, and heaven only knows just what other notion some ranting councilman will advocate in the interest of his much abused constituency. Already the curbstone politician has announced that if his scheme of refunding is put through we shall have plenty of money to spend. Where is the gain coming for the overburdened taxpayer? We get only to find ourselves later in a worse predicament.

The necessity for improvements is growing rapidly in Quincy, so that succeeding years will have to make heavy demands on the treasury, to keep pace with the times. They will be hampered by the burdens we are putting on them and they too must seek relief and shift their load upon others.

The wise and successful man of business, if stress of circumstances obliges him to spend in excess of his revenue for a time, practices rigid economy until he has cancelled his indebtedness, before making any further drafts on his resources, and the city would do well to follow the same conservative course.

In conclusion, I hope that no member of the City Council will be influenced because some hattle-brained politician has obtained siguatures to petitions favoring the financial blunder contemplated.

LOSS TO THE CITY.

Henry H. Faxon Says We Have Too Much Unused Property.

In viewing matters from a business standpoint I have for years, been astonished at the dereliction of duty on the part of city officials in not caring for, or disposing of property under their supervision.

The following is a list of parcels of real estate which should be improved or sold at once:

Property as valued by the Assessors:

School lot at Germantown, assessed for	$100
School lot at Houghs Neck	100
Old High School Building	4,000
Land, 31,460 square feet	5,000
Engine House, School street	2,000
Land, 21,345 square feet	3,000
Water Department, engine house and tenement	6,500
Land, Pumping Station, 7 and seven-tenths acres	4,000
Stand Pipe	10,000
Land, Franklin street, 1 acre	300
Reservoir and Gate House	1,500
Sheds	400
Lot 97, Mears' avenue, Houghs Neck, 7,300 square feet	250
	$37,150

A total of $37,150, the interest upon which at 5 per cent. per annum amounts to $1,857.50, with the additional sum of $668.70 for taxes at the rate of $18 per thousand, making $2,526.20 which the city is virtually being deprived of every year through the neglect of its officials. Moreover, where the property consists of buildings, the depreciation in value is very great, especially when glass is broken and other damage done by vandals, as in the case of the Steamer and Hose house on School street.

The pumping station, which is no longer used for the purposes intended, should be utilized or disposed of in some manner, as machinery when not running rapidly decreases in value, unless given special attention. For the past three months this plant has been run for no other purpose than to sound the fire alarm whistle, consuming about one thousand pounds of coal per day, in addition to the expense of an engineer's salary and house rent.

These unbusiness-like transactions continue, while real estate owners look calmly on and wonder why their tax bills are so large and are amazed at the annual dwindling of their net incomes.

I hope that the present administration will either dispose of the property to which I have referred, or explain to the suffering taxpayers the reason for leaving it uncared for.

Knowing what I do of the political affairs of this city, I would not advise a man with visible property to make Quincy his abiding place, unless he desires to be taxed out of existence. When a blow is struck at real estate interests by exorbitant taxation, the most desirable class of citizens are deterred from settling here.

If there are any misstatements in this article I trust they will be criticised. I have endeavored to secure definite information upon city matters from interested officials, but in many instances their safe of knowledge was hermetically sealed when drafts were made upon it.

HENRY H. FAXON.

April 21, 1899.

OPPOSES INCREASE.

Henry H. Faxon Says We Have Police Enough.

Henry H. Faxon still continues to take an interest in the enforcement of the laws. He sent today the following open letter to the chairman of the Committee on Police:

To the Committee on Police of the City Council:

Gentlemen: I observe that your Committee are considering the matter of increasing the pay of members of the police force for continued service, also the appointment of one additional patrolman.

I contend that the city can ill afford to raise the salaries of any of its officials at the present time. Good order can be maintained without extra cost provided the regular police force as now constituted do their duty.

If there is to be another officer appointed, I hope he will be assigned to service in Ward Four, as that section of the city suffers from a class that must be constantly watched in order to prevent numerous violations of the liquor laws.

If your Committee should decide to recommend an increase in the salaries of some of the police, I sincerely trust that those whose duties are most arduous will receive the favors at your hands. Officers who faithfully, honestly and impartially enforce the laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, are entitled to a much larger compensation that those who are not called upon for this especial work.

An examination of the list, of eligible candidates for the police force, which appeared in the Ledger of March 8, convinces me that the greatest humbug of politics is the law of Civil Service. The system often places cowardice and incompetency to the front instead of courage and ability.

In view of our present financial condition, it becomes all committees of the Council to be cautious about reporting schemes that involve extravagant drafts upon the city treasury.

HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, March 21, 1898.

CITY HALL EXTRAVAGANCE.

No Urgent Need for Remodeling — Absurd Arguments.

From the report of the last meeting of the Council I learn that $24,000 was appropriated for the purpose of remodeling and furnishing City Hall. Of all the schemes which have ever been devised to impose extra burdens on the taxpayers, this is the most extravagant and absurd.

If it were not possible to find capable men to fill the official positions because of the building not being a suitable place in which to transact the city's business, a change of quarters might be necessary. There is no dearth of applicants for any place made vacant by reason of death, resignation or removal, and I never knew of an official when installed at City Hall to apply for additional life insurance, although it might be advisable to do so considering the filthy condition of the cellar over which the Board of Health is supposed to preside as a smelling committee.

I would like to ask the authorities at City Hall what the janitor is appointed for. I examined the cellar there and found it in a very dirty state with piles of ashes, gravel and a large quantity of old papers and other rubbish strewn around in confusion. If the back yard connected with any property of mine was in like condition I should expect to hear from the Board of Health at once.

The poor tramp is used as a potent lever to secure the reconstruction of City Hall. With a modern lockup the furnishings must necessarily be such as to correspond with the improvements on the structure, a la Dedham court house. Many years ago I opposed the erection of a brick building for a police station on the ground of extravagance. The dignitaries among the police clamored loudly that the quarters were totally unfit for occupancy, yet from that time to this I cannot recall a death that has occurred there. One tramp tried to hang himself, but was cut down, resuscitated and allowed to exist as a curse to the community.

Another argument that is advanced to support the reconstruction plan is that the city would be provided with proper apartments for its various boards and thus save much money now paid to other parties for rentals. In view of the profligate manner in which the present Council has administered the finances, we cannot expect any great economy from this source.

Although I am one of the heaviest taxpayers, I never find fault when money is used for economical, business-like enterprises, but when I see it squandered for palatial public buildings to accommodate and benefit those officials and their political friends who manipulate municipal affairs, I regard it my duty to enter a protest in the interests of those who, like myself, contribute largely to the city's treasury.

The prospects are that we are approaching the hardest winter ever known to this country, not only for the poor, but for those who regard themselves as rich in this world's goods. It behooves us therefore to consider the necessity for the strictest economy and of preventing needless expenditures of public funds

I sincerely hope that His Honor, Mayor Adams, with his knowledge of business matters, may realize that the present burden of taxation is all the people can bear and will promptly veto this extravagant appropriation.

REMOVAL OF SNOW.

Impractical Methods Employed by the Commissioner.

There has never been a time since I have taken an interest in public affairs when I have witnessed such ignorance of business methods as was evident in the attempts to make the streets of our city passable after the recent great snow storm. It was very fortunate that the people of Quincy were offered one avenue of escape through the energy displayed by the Quincy and Boston electric railroad company, who insured safety to both patrons and pedestrians.

Sixty years ago when the lane, which is now Summer street, was blocked with snow, my father used to turn his sled upside down, go over the road a few times with it and thus made good traveling without much trouble. Now it is the fashion to use for the same purpose a four-horse sled, right side up, with six or eight men taking a ride at 20 cents per hour each, and additional cost to the city of $5 to $8 for teams.

In carting off the snow the same spendthrift methods were practiced. Teams and men were employed to load and dump snow, with a gang at each end of the route. While the loads were driven to the dumps to unload, those who filled the sleds rested on their shovels, and vice versa those who did the unloading.

I will remind the Commissioner that it is much easier and cheaper to turn the snow from the streets through the gutters than it is to cart it away, especially on warm days. For five days after the storm very little was done toward opening the proper channels of escape for the melting snow.

While I do not advocate doing unnecessary work on the Lord's day, there should have been a force of intelligent, practical men at work last Sunday clearing the water ways. Instead of eight or ten huddled together in one spot discussing political matters and smoking, they should have been working singly on different streets. I admit that it was an old-fashioned storm, but if the system used by our ancestors in meeting such an emergency had been resorted to, instead of the methods which were adopted by our new Commissioner, our streets would have been put in fair condition for one-half the money that has been expended in the peculiar political contrivances of the past ten days.

The displacement of several of our most competent officials, in order to make room for party heelers, will not soon be forgotten by our best citizens, and I trust that future elections will make a repetition of the farce impossible.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

Henry H. Faxon Writes Concerning Labor and Taxation.

Sympathy Must Be Regulated by Good Judgment or Love's Labor Will be Lost.

The most perplexing problem receiving public attention at this time is how to deal with the unemployed. Many of those who are now making the greatest clamor for assistance can be recognized as the men who, in prosperous seasons, spend much of their earnings in the saloon, where anarchists, so-called socialists, certain labor reformers and all the other political devils assemble to denounce and malign every man who seeks to gain an honest living and does not countenance their un-American ideas. The families of such agitators would have suffered untold privations but for the liberality of the much-abused capitalists who have made good use of their opportunities, and saved their money instead of squandering it in dram-shops and like resorts.

It is disagreeable and discouraging to the charitably inclined people of this community to extend aid to the wife and children of a family in the winter months when it is well known that the husband and father, had he been industrious and sober when labor was in demand, could have provided for those dependent upon him and have done his part toward remedying the present situation. Another deplorable fact which may be mentioned in this connection, is that at the last municipal election in Quincy there were 1060 men who voted to license the sale of intoxicating liquor, and this, too, after a period of twelve years in which the absence of the saloon had resulted in innumerable blessings to all the people. I believe if the truth of the matter could be ascertained, it would be found that nine out of ten of those who are making the most noise about labor are those who would again entail the curse of the

OPEN DRAM SHOP IN OUR MIDST.

No man in this city has been more liberal with the wage-earners than I have, and more ready to bestow charity to the deserving, but the path of duty is indeed difficult of discernment when the question is considered of aiding a family whose sufferings have been caused by a dissolute father. I have known of many cases where the food, and even the raiment donated have been taken from the home and pawned for strong drink. Men who lay in a stock of quarters and half-barrels of ale every few weeks and then solicit charity, deserve censure rather than substantial help. There are many well-disposed philanthropic persons whose indiscriminate distribution of alms produces incalculable harm. Sympathy must be regulated by good judgment or love's labor will be lost.

Again, there are strong and reasonable objections to the proposition that has been advanced compelling cities, at the expense of their taxpayers, to create unnecessary work for those whose ambition does not extend beyond the needs of today. There are men who, as heads of families, by honest toil and economy have gained a trifling fee in a home, would thus be compelled to contribute for the support of those who have shirked their duties.

There are many among the unemployed who are too indolent to work and their chief aim is to serve as obstructionists to all endeavors in the direction of honorable enterprises, and just so long as such a condition of affairs exists, uncertainty will hinder and demoralize all kinds of business. The tendency of labor reformers is to "kill the goose that lays the golden egg." For years this class have complained that the wealthy citizens were not taxed nearly as much as they should be, and many are the instances in which I have known those who contributed their poll taxes grudgingly for the needs of the city or town, finding fault because the Adamses were not more heavily taxed.

OUR HONORED TOWNSMAN,

Charles Francis Adams, has, I trust, sought a more genial clime where he will be free from such petty jealousies. I desire to remind those who have always endeavored to retard the welfare of our city, that one of its lasting blessings would not have been enjoyed but for the generosity of Mr. Charles Francis Adams in giving to us the beautiful park where the children of the same men who have maligned him can wander at their will.

The city can better afford to lose as citizens a thousand of those who have clamored for an increase in the taxes of the large property holders than to part with one of that ancient and honored family. Charles Francis Adams is a great loss to this municipality, and, although I did not always agree with him, I wish that hundreds of such men would settle here to assist in directing the city's business. If the workingmen had sacrificed as much proportionately as Mr. Adams has for the interests of Quincy, the present condition of affairs would not have been realized, but in its stead there would be an abounding prosperity among all classes. I wish to clearly state that toward those afflicted by these times, who have manfully played their part, I feel the keenest sympathy and will always join with others in any wise plan to help them, but it is the law of nature that their recovery must be largely their own work. HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, March 1, 1894.

HENRY STIRS 'EM UP.

To the Editor of the Advertiser: Sir:—

I was somewhat surprised at the editorial which appeared in the Ledger on the 30th ult., bearing the heading "Italian Camp."

I have always had more trouble in protecting my property on Brackett street, and in that vicinity, than in any other part of Quincy. The locality has long borne an unsavory reputation and vandalism has been rampant there. The same building which the Ledger says is to be the quarters of "200 dagoes" would have been destroyed long ago except for the eternal vigilance which I have exercised to prevent its being carried away by pieces. The glass in the windows of the building, after being repeatedly broken, was covered with wire netting, and that in turn by boards, in order to protect it from damage by the young scoundrels who gathered there for mischief.

If the young editor of the Ledger wrote that editorial he is excusable; if the old man penned it he must have been convulsed by laughter; and if the reporter wrote it he is an ass.

I hope that the recent addition to the population of Brackett street will be able to protect themselves, and thus relieve me from a portion of the burdens which I have borne in consequence of the depredations committed by certain law breakers who reside in that district.

OBJECTS TO CHANGE.

H. H. Faxon Says Municipal Affairs Are Well Regulated.

To the Editors of the Ledger:

It appears that strong efforts are being made to turn over the control of our city government to a class of politicians whose greatest interest is centered in themselves.

In all my political experience of the last twenty years, I have never known of a more desperate struggle, by disgruntled aspirants for office and their political heelers, to upset our well regulated municipal affairs than at the present time.

Any radical change would largely increase the heavy financial burdens which the taxpayers are now called upon to bear. HENRY H. FAXON.

Quincy, Dec. 2, 1898.

HOFFMANN DROPS.

An Important Case in the Superior Court at Dedham.

Charles Mangs of West Quincy is probably convinced by this time that Hoffmann drops are considered by the courts as intoxicating liquor, and cannot be sold in unlicensed towns and cities without making the seller liable to arrest and fine or imprisonment.

Hoffmann drops, as they are known, are a popular drink among the Finnlanders, and according to Dr. F. E. Jones of the Board of Health, are composed of 325 parts ether, 650 parts alcohol and 25 parts ether oil. As a stimulant they are much more intoxicating than whiskey, and make the drinker crazy. They also have a very bad effect upon the kidneys.

Hoffmann drops are used by physicians as a heart stimulant, a dose being five drops to a teaspoonful. As the Finnlanders drink them in much larger quantities the effect will be readily seen.

Mangs was arrested on April 25, and was arraigned in court upon two complaints for selling Hoffmann drops to one Matt Johnson. At the hearing in the District Court, Johnson testified that on April 19 he purchased six bottles of Hoffmann drops, for which he paid 25 cents a bottle; on April 24 he again visited Mangs' house and purchased two bottles. On the day of Mangs' arrest Chief Littlefield, Officers Ferguson, Bradley, Barry, Morrissey and Sandberg searched his premises and seized fifteen bottles of the drops, and it appeared that he had been doing quite a business in this line.

The court found Mangs guilty upon both complaints and he was fined $50 upon each.

Mangs took an appeal and the case came up for trial at the present term of the Superior court, where he pleaded guilty. He was fined $50 upon one of the complaints, the other being placed on file. This is the second case of the kind that has come before the Quincy police, and they are determined to wage war upon all sellers of Hoffmann drops.

WE NEED A CHANGE AT CITY HALL.

A RUNAWAY PRINCESS

By Curran Richard Greenley

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"It is useless, your highness, to protest against the things that are." The baroness smoothed down her laces with plump little hands upon which gleamed innumerable rings. Marie Amalie Constantia Louise—"and all the rest of it," as she said to herself Princess of Doldrums, arose from her low chair with a most unroyal impatience. Swish, swish, went the silken skirts over the polished floor, and the Baroness von Griefenstein wisely kept silence.

Marie Amalie stood at the window and drummed a tattoo upon the pane. Below, the little fountain tossed its laughing waters and the cuirassiers' band poured forth the national air. Marie Amalie was tired of fountains that played in the sunlight, tired of the national hymn, sick to the soul of the duchy of Doldrums and all it contained—all because a few short weeks before the baroness had taken her young charge with her train to the hunting schloss and then spent a glad, never to be forgotten day.

Somehow—nobody knows, for such things have a way of managing themselves—the equerries and the princess' maids drifted two by two down the forest alleys in the languorous afternoon. The baroness nodded in her chair, and Marie Amalie found herself alone.

When Marr Davent rode from the gasthaus that morning he drew long breaths of the forest freshness. For miles beneath the arching lindens of the duke's forest he rode at a walk, the reins hanging loose on the bay's neck, singing snatches of college glees and thinking of the faroff country whither he would soon be going.

He raised his eyes and looked down the linden reaches—looked and woke, so near that the bay reared in sudden fright. Then Davent slipped from the saddle and stood, hat in hand, as Marie Amalie came toward him through the green twilight.

She did not attempt to excuse herself to herself, and to no one else did that imperious young woman vouchsafe rhyme or reason for her deeds. It was temptation, pure and simple, at a time when the girl was sore imbittered against the traditional shackles. A prisoned thing, bound and dumb in her jewels and laces, she had known the shame of the old roue's approval when he came to view her, as one would the points of a prize mare, and pronounced her fit to be Duchess of Grafsland. "Fit!" Marie Amalie ground her white teeth together at the remembrance of it. But she smiled with level brows into the brown eyes of Davent as the handsome head was bowed before her, and then trouble began for the Baroness Griefenstein.

Two hours later they parted under the lindens, he believing her some nobleman's daughter in the train of the young princess; she knowing all the facts about him. Marie Amalie came up the linden walk, thinking deeply. An American, it suited her exactly. She thought of the yacht that lay even now at Havre; thought, too, of the doddering old Duke of Grafsland, who had buried his second wife not a year before, the pale, pretty princess out of the north, who had been sold to him, as they were selling her.

Marie Amalie went softly up the marble steps, through the portico and down the hall, her footsteps making no sound in the thick carpet. She drew back the portiere that hung in straight, heavy folds. There was a smothered cry from within, a rustle of paper, but before the baroness could close the drawer a white hand closed firmly upon her wrists.

"What are you doing here among the private papers of Duke Fritz?"

The baroness sank down, gasping, speechless, as Marie Amalie towered over her. Then the girl made a hasty examination of the drawer. The key was in the lock. A fragment of wax that adhered to the keyhole told the secret of the baroness' access to the papers of the young duke who had killed himself in that very room years before, when the Baroness Griefenstein had been a famous court beauty and Marie Amalie but a child in the cradle.

Only a bundle of yellowed letters, written in the delicate Italian script affected by the women of that generation. Marie held them thoughtfully; then, with sudden impulse, retied the faded ribbon about them, locked the drawer and placed the key in her bosom. The letters she kept in her hand. With a slow smile around the mischievous red mouth, she passed through the portiere out into the sunlight. She held the key to the situation.

The Baroness Griefenstein was a sensible woman. She knew herself at the mercy of the girl whom heretofore she had ruled relentlessly. Therefore, through the weeks that followed she temporized, telling herself that it was only for a time. In a month the girl would be safely married. There were various expeditions to the forest, evening walks, when only the baroness guarded the pretty princess. The young American still lingered at the gasthaus and rode his bay through the duke's forest.

Meanwhile the women came and went, intent upon the preparations for the marriage. All around the luxurious room were scattered the silks and laces, jewels strewed the tables. And in their midst Marie Amalie at the window, her eyes upon the forest, heedless of it all. A horseman rode down the winding road and turned in the saddle for a long look at the palace. Some day he would ride from her forever to his land of "hearts content" over the sea, leaving her to the desolate pomp of the Duchess of Grafsland. She turned to the baroness, and their eyes met. The baroness shivered. The crisis that she had been dreading had come. Marie Amalie leaned down, hushing her voice to a whisper. "I will do it, and you must help me." And the baroness knew that she would keep that word.

The old duke, her father, could hardly believe his eyes and ears when Marie Amalie dutifully accepted her betrothal presents from the old Duke of Grafsland and even bent her white brow to his kiss. Through all the festivities that followed she moved, a queenly figure, but there was a wicked light in the brown eyes, a mutinous curve to the red lips, and the days of the Baroness Griefenstein were not days of pleasure.

The Princess Marie Amalie lay in her darkened room. Once the doctor would have let in the light, but she protested, and finally he left her alone with a sleeping draft. As he measured it, going to the window with his back to the bed, a white hand flashed out toward the little case that held his drugs. Only an instant, but as the door closed behind him Marie Amalie laughed low to herself.

The baroness was on the point of rebellion, when Marie Amalie before her protesting eyes poured a generous dose into the chocolate and bade her swallow it.

"I am afraid. It will mean imprisonment, banishment."

"Take it" (the sweet voice was like steel); "take it quietly. The letters shall be yours when I am safe." The baroness drained the chocolate with quivering lips.

Davent waiting with a closed carriage at the postern gate heard the click of the sentry's heels as the baroness came through the gateway. A long black cloak came down to her feet, but the tawny gray hair and the password were sufficient for the sentry.

Without a word they entered the carriage and were driven through the night, past the gates, where the baroness gave the word, aboard the express, by grace of the promptly produced passports. When the morning broke they were well away to Havre.

The princess had issued orders that on no account were her maids to enter her room until summoned. But as the morning wore away and no sound came from beyond the closed doors they braved her anger and entered to find the princess' bed empty, unused, and in a chair by the window the Baroness Griefenstein, with an empty chocolate cup at her elbow, lost in a drugged stupor.

There was much hurrying to and fro in the duchy of Doldrums, but of their Princess Marie Amalie there was never a trace.

The little Lutheran minister blinked and hesitated. But in the state of New York there is no Alamancha de Gotha, and, although Marie Amalie von Halsburg awakened an old sound in his ears of the fatherland, the suspicion seemed too utterly impossible to be entertained for a moment. So he went on with the ceremony, and Marie Amalie Davent passed from the shadow of the quaint little church out into the free sunlight of a land that knoweth neither princess nor principalities.

A Mean Trick.

A lawyer defending a promissory note went to lunch, leaving his books and citations on the table in the court room. The opposing counsel sneaked back into the room and changed the places of all his bookmarks. In the afternoon the lawyer, taking up his books, referred the court to his authorities. His lordship noted every volume and page carefully and took the case under consideration. In rendering his opinion he said:

"I was inclined after hearing argument of counsel for defendant to nonsuit plaintiff, but I find, after referring to the authorities quoted by counsel, none of them bear on this case, and I am led to think that the gentleman has been willfully trying to insult the court. He has referred me to an action of an Irishman who sued the proprietor of a monkey for damages for biting him, to a case of arson, one of burglary, two of petty larceny and three divorce cases, none of which bears on an action to recover on a promissory note. Perhaps the grossest insult to the court is referring to 'Duckworth versus Boozyman,' an action charging defendant with breach of promise. Judgment for plaintiff with costs."

The lawyer never knew what the matter was and to this day thinks the judge was out of his mind.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Way of the World.

"When we were poor," remarked the prosperous man reflectively, "we looked forward to the time when we could have a summer home.

"Well?"

"Well, when we got rich enough to have one, we didn't like going to the same place every summer because it was monotonous, and we looked forward to the time when we could have another for variety."

"Well?"

"Well, we got another, and then we began to long for a winter place, so that we wouldn't have to be so much in the big house in the city."

"Well?"

"Well, we've got them all now."

"And are you happy?"

"I suppose so. At least, I suppose my wife is. She keeps them all shut up and spends most of her time in Europe, but she knows she has them."—Chicago Post.

HOLLY AND MISTLETOE.

How the House Should Be Decked With Christmas Greens.

It would not be Christmas without a wreath of holly in the window or some touch of green about the home. The hall is the first place to be considered in decoration, as this gives the keynote to the rest of the house, says the Philadelphia Times. First and foremost is the mistletoe, or, as it used to be called, the "kissing" bough. This need not necessarily be of mistletoe alone, as holly can well be mixed with it. But it is correct to tie bows of true lovers' knots of various colored ribbons on to the stems. The larger this bough can be the better, and it should hang somewhere in the center of the hall.

If there is a looking glass hanging against the wall (and this is a great improvement to a small, narrow hall, as it gives an idea of space), let it be encircled by a loose holly wreath. At the foot of the stairs put a tall earthenware jar of artistic shape, and arrange in it tall boughs of holly and spruce.

The holly can be turned into a great variety of decorations for the home. The wreath is by far the most popular of the decorative designs. It is generally tied with a smart bow of scarlet ribbon. Frequently a star of red immortelles is set within the wreath.

The holly branches, with plentiful red berries showing against the glistening leaves, make an artistic garniture for the house. The branches are a graceful ornamentation for pictures, cornices and doors. In halls they are particularly effective when there is a fireplace that may be used as a background.

A gilded basket (you can gild it yourself at small cost) filled with holly and tied with broad, scarlet satin ribbon would make an effective centerpiece for the Christmas dinner table. A bunch of holly will of course crown the Christmas pudding, but a bunch of mistletoe must be tied under the chandelier in the parlor.

There are people who every Christmas put on great airs about their "real English mistletoe," but our American mistletoe answers all practical purposes, and the luck it brings and the salutation it invites are just as genuine as any foreign article. Every year the south is sending large quantities of mistletoe to market.

How to Send Christmas Gifts.

Never send a Christmas gift without your card or some means of identification. People do not like to have their pleasure tempered with mystery, says the New York World. Engraved cards are always in better taste than those written by hand. Written messages on an engraved card are permissible when sending a gift to a relative or intimate friend. A greeting, as "Merry Christmas" or "Season's Greetings," when used is written on the upper part of the face of the card. When simply a date is used, as "Christmas, 1903," write it in the lower left hand corner. It is customary for gentlemen to accompany their gifts with engraved cards bearing no inscription. Christmas gifts should always be neatly wrapped in perfectly fresh paper and daintily tied with a nice bit of string or narrow ribbon. In sending a gift in town, even to one's next door neighbor, employ a messenger or a servant; never a member of the family if it can be avoided. Always plan as nearly as possible to have a Christmas gift reach its destination on Christmas day. Better the afternoon or evening than the night before.

How to Make Cranberry Jelly.

Take two quarts of cranberries and boil until very soft. Strain out the juice and add as much sugar as there is juice. The juice will be more in the form of a thick pulp, for you have strained it not through a cloth, but through a coarse sieve. Now boil for twenty minutes, add a tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in cold water and pour into a mold. Set away to cool. Send to the table turned out of the mold and garnish with meringues. For the meringues beat the whites of four eggs until very stiff. Add a third of a teaspoonful, scant, of cream of tartar. Whip again. Add a cup of sugar, scant, and a little vanilla. Press through a tube upon oiled paper and bake in an oven so slowly as only to dry them for half an hour.

How to Keep Honey.

To keep honey, either extracted or comb, put it where it is dry and warm, even hot. It will not hurt it to be in a temperature of even 100 degrees. If extracted honey is not thick enough tie a thin cloth over the top of the vessel and keep where it is not only warm, but airy, and it will become much thicker. Many housekeepers put honey in the cellar, as honey readily attracts moisture.

How to Make Christmas Lemon Tart.

To make Christmas lemon tart use two cups sugar, one cup butter, six eggs, two lemons, two large tablespoonfuls of brandy, one teaspoonful grated nutmeg. Beat butter and sugar together, add the whipped yolks, the juice of one lemon and the rind of two, the nutmeg, the brandy and the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in small pastry shells and use no top crust.

How to Make Razor Paste.

Levigated oxid of tin, prepared putty powder, one ounce; powdered oxalic acid, a quarter ounce; powdered gum, twenty grains. Make into a stiff paste with water and evenly and thinly spread it over the strop.

How to Bake Mackerel.

Split the fish, remove the backbone, lay some veal stuffing on each, roll up and bake in a buttered pan and in a moderate oven for about half an hour.

OUR INSULAR AFFAIRS

Have Grown Too Large For Bureau at Washington

WEDGE MAY BE ENTERED

In Next Congress For New Department to Deal With Island Possessions—Porto Rico Divorced From United States In Its Essentials

Washington, Oct. 30.—Mr. Cortelyou's new department of commerce and labor is not likely to remain many years as the latest addition to the cabinet group. The need of a department of insular affairs is urgent. Senator Foraker, chairman of one of the important committees dealing with our island possessions, may introduce such a bill at this session. Nobody would expect it to pass, however, on account of the prevailing desire for economy in the last session before the presidential election, but that it will be one of the things to come along in the not distant future cannot be denied. The bureau of insular affairs now attached to the war department, under charge of Colonel Edwards, has a staff of 100 clerks, and it is not able to do anywhere near all that many persons think it should. There is already the basis for a good-sized department. Better unification of colonial relations, and a more systematic supervision from Washington, it is thought, can only be secured by definite representation of the colonies in the president's cabinet. Fortunately our tropical possessions consist of islands so that the name "insular" rather than "colonial" may, in deference to republican traditions, with propriety be used.

One trouble with the present arrangement is that an island like Porto Rico has no Washington headquarters. Not a day passes that many persons do not call at the insular bureau to inquire something about Porto Rican affairs, although it has had nothing to do with that island since May 1, 1900. There is nobody in Washington to answer inquiries of this sort and they are referred to Governor Hunt. Certain Porto Rican governmental activities have a Washington end, or Washington supervision like the agricultural department bureaus, which are pursuing their work in the island, the weather bureau and the coast survey, but as a whole there is no administrative headquarters here for Porto Rican affairs, and but for the intense personal interest of Secretary Root in the island's welfare its government would have been far less successful.

The position of Porto Rico is anomalous. It has been divorced from the United States in most of its essentials; it collects and keeps its own revenues. The things which the government bureaus do for it are gratuities. If a cablegram comes to Washington from Porto Rico there is no one to whom it can go short of the president, and he has too much to do to attend to the questions which it may raise.

It is predicted that the Danish West Indies will come into the United States before long. Guam and Tutuila of the Samoan group are already dependencies, but without definite relations to Washington. Secretary Moody says that every time he mentions Guam at the cabinet meeting it brings out laughter. For some reason that island has been associated with so many odd and amusing things that the American people do not incline to view it seriously. And yet it is an applicant for harbor improvements which will cost a million dollars. It must either have such an appropriation or cease to serve the purpose intended, as its present harbor is unsafe.

The Philippines are now in a transition state. So far as federal administration is concerned they are well managed from the insular bureau of the war department, but there is no knowing when Philippine problems will outgrow this supervision. This lack of unity of administration of those parts of the American dominion which have not been made states would be remedied, it is argued, by the establishment of a new department.

Radical as the suggestion may seem, there is no reason to suppose that these insular possessions are not on their way to statehood and to full participation of the American system of government. All that it requires to make a state is a majority vote in each house of congress, and when any party in power sees some electoral votes from a blossoming territory, it is much inclined to give it statehood. If the Democrats were in power today Arizona would be admitted at once, and yet it would make as poor an American state and one nearly as foreign to our institutions as Porto Rico.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has practically completed the abstract of his report on the postal investigation. The abstract as now drafted makes between 20,000 and 25,000 words. The report itself, it is now stated, comprises 2,500,000 words of exhibits and 110,000 of the report proper. The report is being considered by the attorney general.

Dastardly Plot Thwarted

Seattle, Oct. 29.—Several sticks of dynamite, with fuses attached, all ready for lighting, were found underneath the Tacoma-Seattle Inter-Urban railway station. INVESTIGATION BEGUN

Into the Poisoning of Eleven Inmates of a State Hospital

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 30.—The accidental poisoning of inmates at the state hospital at Tewksbury with belladonna some time during Tuesday night has been made the subject of an investigation by the state board of charity, as well as by the hospital authorities themselves. Walter Fitzgerald, aged 76, an inmate admitted from Boston, died yesterday, but the hospital authorities deny that he was one of those who received the poison. The poison cases are reported as decidedly favorable and the hospital authorities anticipate no serious consequences.

Superintendent Nichols, in common with the other physicians and attendants at the hospital, refuses to discuss the poisoning, as they believe that there is a possibility of notoriety being obtained that, whether or not justified by the facts, will result to the detriment of the institution.

The Messenger Boys' Strike

Boston, Oct. 30.—The common council last night passed an order providing that city hall officials be ordered not to send any telegrams by the Western Union system until the labor troubles are either submitted to arbitration or the former messenger boys reinstated. This order will not become effective until the board of aldermen concurs in its passage and the approval of the mayor obtained. While delivering a telegram last night, a man employed as a strike-breaker was set upon by a crowd of men and boys and so roughly handled that he had to be treated for a dislocated shoulder.

Discussed National Affairs

Boston, Oct. 30.—Tremont Temple was packed to the doors last night on the occasion of a political meeting held by the Republican party. The principal speakers were Governor Bates and Secretary of the Treasury Shaw. The remainder of his address was devoted to a defense of his own gubernatorial administration and a reply to the questions asked and charges made by Colonel Gaston, the Democratic candidate. Secretary Shaw talked on national issues.

He will be arraigned before a United States commissioner.

Good Afternoon

The almost unbounded enthusiasm which prevailed at the grand Republican rally at Tremont Temple last evening, and the magnificent audience of 3,000 which exceeded the large seating capacity of the temple, attested to the fact that there is not so much Republican apathy as some would have us believe. The greeting given Gov. Bates was particularly warm, and the applause when he was introduced was long continued.

His Excellency exhibited thorough knowledge of State affairs, and not only showed up the fallacy of the arguments of Mr. Gaston and his spell-binders, but showed that the little state of Massachusetts was fourth in the country in manufactures in 1900 as in 1890. That Massachusetts ranks first in the manufacture of textiles, and first in the manufacture of cotton goods, of worsted goods and of woolen goods. That the state manufactures 45 per cent. of all the boots and shoes made in the United States.

The charge of extravagance in State affairs was refuted to the entire satisfaction of the audience, who applauded frequently the telling points which the Governor made against the opposition. Only 80 cents of the tax rate of Boston, he said, goes for State tax, and in other cities the proportion is about the same. The necessity of the State debt was fully explained, having been contracted largely for new State House, construction of asylums, prisons, hospitals and other institutions; the abolition of grade crossings, and the building of State highways.

The ovation which followed at the close of the Governor's speech was a marked manifestation of approval. The immense audience thoroughly seconded the high tribute which Congressman Lawrence gave Gov. Bates and the State administration, in introducing the Governor, and was in full sympathy with Secretary Shaw in his review of Republican administration in National affairs and his arraignment of the Democrats.

AULD LANG SYNE.

Rural Lodge Holds Last Meeting in Old Hall.

Headquarters for 27 Years.

Official Visitation Received from District Deputy.

An official visit was paid to Rural lodge of Masons Thursday evening by Rt. Wor. Arthur C. Boyden, district deputy of the 24th Masonic district, and it was the occasion of a very large attendance of members and visiting brethren. Among the lodges represented were Wollaston, Delta, Norfolk Union, Orphans Hope, Paul Revere, Brockton, Mt. Horeb, Joseph Warren, St. George, Puritan, Satucket, Charles River, Charter Oak and several others.

The suite of the deputy included Wor. George A. Thatcher as Grand Warden, Wor. Charles F. Dudley as Grand Junior Warden, Wor. Charles Wilkinson as Grand Secretary, Wor. Samuel E. Keith as Grand Treasurer, and Wor. Bro. Emerson as Grand Marshal.

Honorary members of the suite were: Wor. Bro. E. Francis Pope, of Paul Revere lodge; Wor. Bro. White, of Delta lodge of Braintree; Wor. Bro. Dexter E. Wadsworth of Macedonia lodge of Milton, and Wor. Bro. Wilcox of Fellowship lodge of Bridgewater.

Worshipful Master Pierce and his officers of Rural lodge gave an excellent exemplification of the work of the first degree upon two candidates which later received words of commendation from District Deputy Boydon and his suite.

The Gerrish quartette of Brockton added greatly to the effectiveness of the work with appropriate selections.

A banquet was served at the close by Westover & Foss of Boston, including salads and ices.

After many had gone home several brothers gathered in the hall, and led by the quartette sang "Auld Lang Syne," for it was the last meeting of the lodge in the Masonic head-quarters in the Greenleaf block. When the building was erected in 1876, the quarters were elaborately fitted up especially for Rural lodge, but in twenty-seven years the lodge has grown and its excellent work and hospitality have attracted many visitors, so that larger and more up-to-date headquarters were necessary.

The next regular communication of the lodge will be held in the new and commodious quarters in the new Hancock building. Not only is the new lodge room larger, but there is a large banquet rooms, several ante-rooms, ladies' parlor, toilet rooms, etc. Most of the furnishings will be new and rich. The dedication of the new lodge room will probably take place the last of November.

The World's Earnings.

The gross earnings of the civilized world are about $36,300,000,000 per annum.

The English Mile.

The English statute mile was first defined in the thirty-fifth year of Queen Elizabeth. Before that time it was put down at 5,000 feet.

Moorish Women.

Feminine Moors are generally absolutely ignorant of their age. Among Moorish women this is a point of honor, but it is really no affectation, for as their birthdays are never celebrated in any manner the passage of the years is far less noticed than it is with us.

Paris Working Classes.

Paris has no less than 1,216 classes of workmen. There are, for instance, 386 classes engaged in the chemical trade and 370 in metal industries.

Bad Spell.

"No Luck" appeared tattooed on the forehead of a burglar who was sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment in Paris the other day. He said the words had been there since he was a child and had exercised an "unholy spell" on him ever since.

A Great Chestnut Tree.

No tree has ever been found larger than the Sicilian "chestnut of a hundred horses." It is no less than 304 feet in circumference.

A Chinese Custom.

Chinese women never think of taking the hairpins out of their hair when they go to bed. These hairpins are from six to ten inches long, of silver, gold or some bright material and curiously bent and twisted. They are worn night and day and only removed when the hair is to be newly dressed for some important occasion.

The collectors for the Hospital are favored with good weather, and a generous response is being made to the institution. About $3,500 is needed to pay current expenses.

Dr. C. J. Lynch, a graduate of Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., in 1898, and of Harvard Medical School in 1902, having spent the past eighteen months in Carney Hopital, has opened an office in this city.

Every store in Sagamore block is now occupied. It is hoped prosperity will so attend all parties that they will establish their several trades for a long period. There is nothing so barren in a town as an empty store.

The Quincy City Union of King's Daughters will hold their annual meeting at Christ church on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, followed by a social hour at 5.30. Evening session at 7. Speaker of evening will speak on Work of Deaconness Association.

Quincy High's game today with Dedham High is the first in the Eastern Interscholastic league, which also includes Waltham High and Wellesley High. The only game played in the league was a tie between the last two schools.

The restrictions that all houses shall be set back fifteen feet from the street, has helped to make Bigelow a very pretty street. Every deed of a house lot on the Miller property has this clause, which builders of houses are careful to comply with the result being a pretty uniform lawn effect.

There was another large attendance Thursday evening at the fair of Division 5, A. O. H. at Hancock hall, in aid of the building fund. Many of the larger articles given by local store keepers are being sold by books, and these are being awarded just as fast as the books are filled. The entertainment Thursday evening consisted of vocal and instrumental music.

C. E. Social.

The social given by the Christian Endeavor Society at the Wollaston Congregational church, Thursday evening, was an enjoyable occasion. Miss Huff's charming voice was heard in three solos, and Miss Eugenia Hatch gave several piano selections. Miss Fannie Beckwith gave with her usual good expression several recitations. A pleasing feature was a fan drill by eight young girls. Much amusement was created by a comb chorus of eight girls accompanied on the piano by Miss Mary Chase.

The vestry was prettily decorated in Japanese style and Misses Beulah and Marion Hatch added to the effect by their lovely Japanese costumes. Ice cream and cake were for sale.

—The largest American import, says the Havana Post, is rubber, for which material the United States paid last year the enormous sum of $25,000,000. Evidently rubber culture is a "mighty payin' biznis."

—A Tennessee grand jury recently indicted twenty-two members of a mob for murder in the second degree for lynching a negro. This was an example that should be followed.

HOSPITAL WEEK.

Small Sums Will in the Aggregate Meet Needs of Institution.

Once a year the trustees of the City Hospital, that little red building on the the hill, make an appeal to the citizens of Quincy to give their mite to help support the institution which has done so much to alleviate the suffering of those taken within its walls.

Each year a week is set apart as "Hospital Week" during which volunteers make a canvass of the city and receive contributions. This year it will be next week. The canvassers will start out Monday morning and everybody is urged to bear the fact in mind and have their contributions ready.

No specified sum is asked, but all are invited to give what they feel that they can afford too. Do not hang back because you can give but a small amount, for every little helps. Remember that the little which you give will help administer to the wants of some sufferer.

There could be no more worthy an institution than a hospital, and Quincy is fortunate in having such an institution. It takes money, however, to run it. People should bear this in mind and give as generously as possible. Remember that this week is Hospital week.
